

ओं

सत्यानास्तिपरोधर्मः

LHE

Chha'ndogya UPANISHAD

AND

SRI SANKARA'S COMMENTARY

TRANSLATED BY

GANGA'NA'TH JHA, MA FTS

PUBLISHED BY

V C SESHACHARRI B A, B L M R A S,

Valid, High Court Madras

THIRD VOLUME

Madras

G A NATESAN & CO, PRINTERS ESPLANADE

1899

DEDICATED

BY KIND PERMISSION

TO Alrs. Annie Besant.

The Chha'ndogya

FIRST PART.

---[-j-

CONTENTS.

				PAGE.
PREFACE		•••	 	vii
First A	онуа'уа	•••	 •••	1
SECOND	"	•••	 	94
THIRD	,,	•••	 •••	168
Fourth			 	246

PREFACE.

In introducing the third volume of this series to the public, I have to express my satisfaction of the appreciative manner in which the last two volumes have been received.

The translator of this Upanishad, Pandit Ganganatha Jha, M.A., F.T.S., of Darbhanga, has. I am sure earned the best thanks of the public for making the translation so faithful to the text and the original commentary, and bringing out their spirit so well in a foreign language.

As this Upanishad is a big one it has been thought fit to present it in two volumes. The first four Adhyûyas are now published and the second four will form the fourth volume which is now in the press.

Madras, September 1899. V. C. SESHACHARRI. Publisher.

The Chha'ndogya Upanishad.

Sri Sankara's Introduction.

OM TAT SAT

--0--

Adoration to Brahma! The Chhândogya Upanishad, consisting of eight chapters begins with the words "The syllable ()m" &c., and with a view to briefly explain its scope to people desiring to learn it, we begin this short treatise, giving an easy explanation of it The connection is this: The complete course of Action (sacrifices) has been comprehended, together with a full comprehension of the deities Prâna and the rest,—such Action being the means to the attainment of Brahma, by the road known as the "Light" &c.; as also the Action by itself, which (without a knowledge of the Deities) is a means to Brahma, by the road known as the "Smoke" While for those, that follow the bent of their natural inclinations and are fallen out of both these roads, has been ordained a troublesome fall downwards. But in none of these two roads, is their an absolute accomplishment of the end of man; and hence that which is independent of Action, the knowledge of the secondless Self, ought to be explained, setting aside the three courses of metempsychosis (above explained). And with a view to this is the Upanishad laid down. Apart from the knowledge of the secondless Self, there is no absolute attainment of the desired end; as will be laid down-"Those that know otherwise than thus. and worship others, fall in perishable worlds; while one who takes the contrary course becomes the king of heaven." In the same manner one who believes in the false doctrine of duality becomes bound. And just as the thief becomes burnt and bound when he catches hold of the hot axe (in the course of his ordeal); so does such a person acquire the troubles of metempsychosis. Having said this, it is again said that one who believes in the true doctrine of non-duality is neither burnt nor bound, just like one who is not a thief, and for such a one there is a cessation of metempsychic troubles, Liberation. Therefore the doctrine of the secondless Self is not compatible with Action. Because, inasmuch as it serves to destroy all distinction of action, agent and result,—the knowledge, brought about by such passages as "Ever existent, one and secondless, the self is all this," cannot possibly be suppressed by any notions. If it be urged that "there is the notion derived from the injunction of Actions (which would suppress the aforesaid knowledge)"-(we reply) no: because Actions are enjoined for those that have distinct ideas of the Self having the character of the doer and the enjoyer, and who are tainted by the discrepancies of affection and aversion for the results of actions resulting from the aforesaid ideas. If it be urged that "inasmuch as Actions are enjoined for one who has fully comprehended the meaning of the complete Veda, Actions belong even to one endowed with the knowledge of non-duality",—(we reply) no: the passage "The self, the existing, the one and secondless is all this" serves to entirely suppress the natural ideas of the doer and the enjoyer &c., which belong to persons entitled to Action. Therefore it must be admitted that Actions are enjoined for one who is tainted with ignorance &c: and not for one who has a knowledge of non-duality. It is for this reason that it will be declared later on: "All these acquire pure (happy) worlds; while one resting in Brahma attains immortality." And in connection with this doctrine of non-duality, are laid down the various meditations that serve to accomplish certain desirable ends;—these meditations, having their ends approximate to Liberation, appertaining as they do to Brahma slightly modified from the Secondless, such as those consisting of the Mind and of the Pranas &c. And inasmuch as these meditations have their end in the prosperity of Actions, they are connected with factors of Action. But still there is a similarity between these meditations (and the knowledge of the one Self). On account of the identity of the doctrine of these, and of the similarity consisting in the fact of both of these belonging to the function of the mind, that is to say. just as the knowledge of non-duality is a function of the mind, so are also these meditations functions of the mind: and as such there is a similarity. "What then. is the difference between the meditations and the knowledge of non-duality?" We explain: The knowledge of non-duality is that which removes the idea of the difference among the doer, the deed and the result &c. which idea is naturally imposed upon the really unmodifying Self; just as the ascertainment of the form of the rope, brought about by the action of light, which serves to remove the false idea of the serpent imposed upon the rope. Whereas meditation as laid down in the scriptures is based upon a certain substratum and consists of the bringing about of a uniform function of the mind with regard to that substratum, uninterrupted by any idea foreign to it. Such is the difference between the two. These meditations, serving to purify one's character and thereby illumining the real nature of things, are helps to the knowledge of non-duality.

And inasmuch as they are based upon a substratum they are more easily accomplished; and as such they are treated of first. And inasmuch as it is the performance of Actions to which people are accustomed, and by abandoning Action it becomes extremely difficult to give up the mind to meditation,—it is the meditation, referring to a part of Actions which is treated of first.

ADHYA'YA I.

KHANDA I.

अभितेतदक्षरमुद्गीथमुपासीत । ओमिति ह्युद्गायित तस्योप-ज्याख्यानम् ॥ १॥

One ought to meditate upon the syllable Om, the ulgitha; because people sing, beginning with Om. Of this (now follows) the explanation. (1).

Com.— "One ought to meditate upon the syllable 'Om'." The syllable Om is the most approximate name of the Supreme Self. And when this name is used, He becomes pleased, just as a man is pleased when addressed by a name dear to him. But here, inasmuch as the syllable is used with the particle 'iti' it is recognised, apart from its denotation of the Supreme Self, as the mere verbal form of it (which is to be meditated upon). And as such, like idols &c. it comes to be an image of the Supreme Self. Thus then, being the name and the image of the Supreme Self, it becomes the means of the meditation thereof; and as such, becomes something great, comprehended in all the Vedântas. greatness of this syllable is further proved by the fact of its being frequently used in the beginning and end of japa, sacrifice, and study of the Veda. Therefore one ought to meditate upon this syllable, consisting of letters, and being called "udgîtha," on account of its being a part of the "udgitha" hymn. That is to say, one ought to bring about a firm concentrated contemplation of Om, which is a part and parcel of sacrifices, and is an image of the Supreme Self. The Sruti itself mentions the reason of Om being called the "udgitha." "Because people sing, beginning with Om": That is to say, inasmuch as people begin with Om, and then sing (hymns), the syllable Om is the "ulgitha". "Its explanation": i.e., the explanation or the meditation of the same syllable,—that is to say, an explanation as to its qualities and results &c. "Now begins" is to be added; that is, the full sentence is "now begins its explanation".

एषां भूतानां पृथिवी रसः पृथिव्या आपो रसः । अपामोषध-

यो रस् ओषधीनां पुरुषो रसः पुरुषस्य वाग्रसो वाच ऋग्रस ऋ-चः साम रसः साम्न उद्गीथो रसः ॥ २ ॥

The essence of all these beings is the earth; the essence of the earth is water; the essence of water, plants; the essence of plants, man; the essence of man, speech; the essence of speech, Rik; the essence of Rik, Sâma; the essence of Sâma is the udgitha. (2).

Com.—"Of all these beings," moveable and immoveable. the earth is the "essence"—i.e., refuge or support. Of the earth, water is the essence. Inasmuch as it is in water that the earth is woven like warp and woof, it is the essence of the earth. Of water, the plants are the essence—since plants are modifications of water. Of these (plants) man is the essence,—inasmuch as man grows out of food (supplied by the plants). Of man too, speech is the essence,—since of all parts of the man, speech is the highest (faculty)! Hence speech is called the 'essence of man.' Of speech again, Rik is the essence, being a grade higher than it. Of Rik, Sama is the essence, still higher than the former. And of Sâman, the udgîtha—the syllable Om—is the essence, highest of all; and it is this that is the subject treated here.

स एव रसाना ५ रसतमः परमः परार्घ्योऽष्टमो यदुर्द्वाथः ॥३॥

That udifitha is the best essence of the essences, the supreme, deserving of the highest place, the eighth. (3).

Com.—This syllable Om, called the "udgitha," is the best essence of all the essences, beings &c. "The Supreme"—because it represents the Supreme Self. "Ardha" is 'place' and "para" is 'highest' and "parārdhya" is 'that which deserves the highest place' on account of its being the object of meditation, like the Supreme Self. "The eighth"—in the order of the aforesaid essences, earth and the rest.

कतमा कतमक्रतमत्कतमत्साम कतमः कतम उद्गीथ इति वि-मृष्टं भवति ॥ ४॥

What is the Rik? What is the Sama? What is the udgitha? This is what is (now) considered. (4).

Com.—It has been said that "of speech, Rik is the essence." Now "what is this Rik, what this Sama, and what this ulgitha?". The repetition of "Katama" is meant to signify the great regard (in which the secret of these is held). Objection: according to Pânini 'the affix dutamach is used only when there is a question with regard to many genera. But in the present case there is no multiplicity of the genus Rik; and as such, wherefore the use of the affix datamach? Reply: This objection does not apply to the present case; the compound "jâtipariprasna" (in the sâtra) means 'the question with regard to the genus of many individuals'; and in the case in question, we have multiplicity of the individual Riks as composing the genus Rik. The compound does not mean 'the question of many genera.' Objection: But the example cited—'what is katha' becomes possible only when the compound is interpreted as 'the question of many genera'; whereas if it be interpreted as 'the question of the genus with regard to many individuals,' the example cited could never be applicable. Reply: But this objection too does not hold; inasmuch as in the case of the 'katha' too, our interpretation applies equally well; since there too, the question is with regard to the multiplicity of individuals included in the genus 'katha'. If the word meant the 'question of genera', then you would have to lay down another rule in order to explain such cases as "what is Itik &c?". "This is considered"—i.e., an enquiry is made into this.

वागेवक्प्रीणः सामोमित्येतदक्षरमुद्गीथः ।

तद्वा एतन्मिथुनं यद्वाक्च प्राणश्चक्चं साम च ॥ ५ ॥

Speech is Rik; breath is $S\hat{a}ma$; the syllable Om is the udgitha; now Speech and Breath, or Rik and $S\hat{a}ma$ constitute a couple. (5).

Com.—The consideration being done, the reply (to the questions) becomes appropriate; and this is that—

"Speech is Rik &c." Even though speech and Rik are identical, yet the udgitha does not cease to be the eighth (of the essences above enumerated); because the two sentences, the one enumerating the essences and the present one, are altogether different and do not affect one another) inasmuch as the (present) passage "The letter Om is the udgîtha" &c., means to lay down the results attainable by the knowledge of the udgitha; while the other passage lays down the simple fact of the udgitha being the highest essence. Since Speech and Breath are the sources of Rik and Sâma, therefore Speech is said to be Rik and Breath, Sâma. By mentioning "Speech" and "Breath" as the sources of Rik and Sâma respectively, all Riks and all Sâmas become included; and by the inclusion of Rik and Sama, all actions performable by means of Rik and Sama, become included; and the inclusion of these covers also all desirable ends. (And thus Om coversall desirable ends). While the sentence "The syllable Om is the udgitha" serves to set aside any doubts as to devotion (for any particular deity—e.g., Vishnu as signified by 'A'; Siva by 'U'; and Brahma by 'M'; that is to say, as in the case of Rik &c., the generic names have been explained as denoting all individuals forming those classes; so people might think that Om too is meant to signify the individual Gods denoted by it, for whom the Sruti enjoins devotion. In order to do away with this idea, the word "sullable" is added, showing thereby that it is "Om" in its purely verbal aspect that forms the subject of the discourse. The words "tadva" refers to "mithynam" (couple). In order to explain what the couple is, it is added "Speech and Breath" which are the sources of all Riks and Samas. "Rik and Sama" (in the text) means the sources of Itik and Sama, as expressed by the words "Rik and "Sama" and it does not signify that Rik and Sama constitute an independent couple by themselves. Otherwise, "Speech and Breath" would be one couple, and "Rik and Sama" would be another; and there would be two couples; consequently, the singular number in "couple" would not be correct. Therefore, the "couple" here meant is that of "Speech and Breath" as the sources of Rik and Sama (respectively).

तदेतिनम्युनमोमित्येतिसमनक्षरे स स् सृज्यते यदा वै मिथुनौ स-मागच्छत आपयतो वै तावन्योन्यस्य कामम् ॥ ६ ॥

And this couple is joined together in the syllable Om. Whenever a pair come together they fulfill each other's desire. (6).

Com.—This aforesaid couple becomes joined together in the syllable "Om,"—that is to say, the couple, endowed with the attainment of all desirable ends exists conjointly in the syllable 'Om' and thus the syllable 'Om' comes to be known as being endowed with the attainment of all desirable ends. It is a recognised fact that the syllable 'Om' consists of Speech and is accomplished by means of Breath, and that it is coupled together, and lastly that the character of fulfilling desirable ends belongs to a pair. In support of this, an example is cited just as in the ordinary world, whenever a pair in the shape of husband and wife, come together in accordance with the custom in vogue, then they fulfill each other's desirable ends; in the same manner, it is established that the syllable 'Om' becomes endowed with the attainment of all ends, by means of the couple centered in itself. This is the sense (of the passage.)

आपयिता ह वे कामानां भवति य एतदेवं विद्वानक्षरमुद्गीथ-मुपास्ते ॥ ७ ॥

He becomes a fulfiller of all desirable ends, who, knowing thus, meditates upon this syllable as the udgitha. (7).

= Com.—In order to show that the singer who meditates upon it (Om) becomes endowed with the properties thereof, it is said "He becomes the fulfiller of the desirable ends of the master of sacrifice, who meditates upon this syllable, endowed with the attainment of all desirable ends, as the udgitha. To such a one does the aforesaid result accrue. This is in accordance with the Sruti "As one meditates upon, so does he become."

तद्वा एतदनुज्ञाक्षरं यद्धि किंचानुजानात्योमित्येव तदाहैको एव समृद्धिर्यदनुज्ञा समर्थियता ह वे कामानां भवति य एतदेवं विद्वा-नक्षरमुद्गीथमुपास्ते ॥ ८॥

And this is a syllable of acquiescence; whenever we acquiesce in anything, we say 'Om'. And what is acquiescence is gratification. He who knowing thus, meditates upon this syllable as the udgitha becomes a gratifier of desires. (8).

Com.—The syllable 'Om' is also endowed with gratification, for prosperity. How? This, the subject of the discourse, is a syllable of acquiescence, that is to say, the syllable 'Om' signifies permission or acquiescence. How it is acquiescence is shown in the passage itself. In ordinary parlance, whatever—be it either knowledge or riches—is permitted by the learned or by the rich, when they come to signify their acquiescence, they say 'Om' (yes); and in the reda also, it having been said (by Yagnavalkya) that "there are thirty-three gods," Sakalya says "Om" (vide Brihadâranyaka upanishad). In the same manner, in the world, when one says "this is the wealth, I am taking it", the other says "Om" (all right). Therefore acquiescence is gratification, inasmuch as acquiescence is the source of gratification. It is one who is himself fully gratified that acquiesces in (gifts &c). Thus the passage comes to mean that the syllable 'Om' is endowed with gratification. And since one who meditates upon that which is endowed with gratification becomes himself endowed with that property,—therefore one who knowing thus, meditates upon the syllable 'Om' as the udgitha, becomes a gratifier of the wishes of the master of sacrifice.

तेनेयं त्रयी विद्या वर्तत ओमित्याश्रावयत्योमिति रा ५ सत्यो-मित्युद्गायत्येतस्यैवाक्षरस्यापचित्ये महिम्ना रसेन ॥ ९ ॥

By this does the three-fold science proceed. With 'Om' does one recite; with 'Om' does one order; and with 'Om' does one sing;—all this being for the worship of this syllable. And also by the greatness and the essence (of this syllable) does the three-fold science proceed. (9).

Com.—The syllable is next eulogised, in order to make it attractive, being as it is a fit object of meditation. How? By means of the syllable forming the subject of this discourse does the three-fold science, the three Vedas Rik &c.,—i.e., the actions prescribed in the three Vedas—proceed. We explain "three-fold science" as the 'actions prescribed' because it is a well-known fact that it is not the Vedas that proceed by recitation &c., but it is the actions (sacrifices) that proceed in that way. How? Because the significance of the passage "with 'Om' does one recite, with 'Om' does one order, and with 'Om' does one sing" implies that it is the 'Soma' sacrifice that is here meant (by "three-fold science"). And this action is for the worship (or glory) of that syllable, inasmuch as it represents the supreme Self: and hence the worship of that (syllable) is the worship of the supreme Self;—as declared in the smriti "Having worshipped Him by means of actions, man attains success." "By greatness and essence": It is by means of the greatness of this syllable, the greatness consisting of the breaths of the Ritvic, the Yajamana and the rest, and by the essence of this syllable, the essence consisting of the offering made up of the essences of corn and barley &c.,—(that the actions prescribed in the Vedas proceed). Because it is by means of the syllable (Om) that sacrifices and Homâs are performed; these (sacrifices) reach the sun; and from there, by the process of rain &c., Breath and Food are produced; and it is by means of the Breaths and the Food that the sacrifice is duly performed. Hence it is said "It is by means of the greatness and essence of this syllable (that Actions proceed)."

तेनोभी करतो यश्चेतदेवं वेद यश्च न वेद । नाना तु विद्या

चाविद्या च यदेव विद्यया करोति श्रद्धयोपनिषदा तदेव वीर्यवत्त-रं भवतीति खल्वेतस्यैवाक्षरस्योपन्याख्यानं भवति ॥ १०॥

Now (it would follow that) both perform actions—he who knows and he who does not know. (But it is not so since) knowledge and ignorance are different. That alone, which is performed with knowledge, faith and meditation, becomes more powerful (effective). This verily is the explanation of this syllable (Om).

(10).

Com.—It has been said that actions are performed by one who has knowledge,—this is now objected to: one who knows the syllable as explained above, and one who knows only the action and not the true nature of the syllable,—both these persons perform actions (as we see in every day life); and since to both of them results would accrue in accordance with their actions (which is the same in both cases),—what is the good of knowing the true nature of the syllable? In ordinary life we find that for one who knows the taste of the Haritaki and for one who does not know it—the result. motion of the bowels, is exactly the same. (The reply is) It is not so; since "knowledge and ignorance are different". The particle "ta" serves to deny the former view. The knowledge, of the syllable 'Om' being the highest essence, and being endowed with the attainment of all desires and gratification, is not mere knowledge of its being subsidiary to Actions; it is something more than that. That is to say, inasmuch as it is something more than the mere subsidiary to Actions, it must have greater results. In the ordinary world, we find that in the case of the jeweller and the barbarian selling a ruby. the jeweller, knowing more (of the ruby) obtains more (price). Therefore that action, which one performs with a full knowledge of its capabilities, and with full faith and with due meditation (on one's Diety),—such an action alone, becomes more powerful,—i.e., leads to better results than the action performed by the ignorant. By saying that the action of the knowing is more powerful, it is implied that the action of the ignorant, is also powerful (though less so, than the former). And the ignorant is not debarred from actions; inasmuch as we find in the "anshastya," chapter 10th Khanda of this Adhyâya) even ignorant persons mentioned as performing sacrifices. Meditation upon the syllable "Om" as the highest essence, endowed with attainment and gratification, constitutes a single act (of meditation); inasmuch as this is not interrupted by any other efforts. Since this (syllable) is capable of being meditated upon several times, through its various qualifications,—therefore we have all this as an explanation of the same syllable "Om," as the udgitha, which forms the subject of the present discourse.

Thus ends the first Khanda of the first Adhyaya.

ADHYA'YA I.

KHANDA II.

देवासुरा ह वे यत्र संयेतिर उभये प्राजापत्यास्तद्ध देवा उद्गी-थमाजहरुरनेनेनानभिभविष्याम इति ॥ १॥

When the Devas and Asuras struggled together—both born of Prajūpatī,—the Devas caught hold of the ndgitha, (thinking) 'with this we shall vanquish them (the Asuras)'. (1).

Com.—"The Devas and Asuras"—Since the word "Dira" is derived from a root denoting illumination, "Deras" stands for such functions of the senses as are illuminated (regulated) by scriptures. And "Asuras," contradictory to the former, stands for such functions of the senses, as delight in activity towards all (sensual) objects appertaining to them, and are naturally of the nature of darkness (ignorance). "Ha" and "ra" are particular forms denoting past events. "Where" i.e., for what cause,—namely, on account of their trying to take away one another's belongings, "they struggled." The root "yata," with the prefix 'saji,' signifies 'to fight'; hence the verb "sanjétiré," means "fought" or "struggled." The natural functions of the senses, partaking of the nature of Darkness,—called the 'Asurus'-are engaged in suppressing the functions illuminated by the scriptures. In the same manner, the · Devas',—opposed to them, and partaking of the nature of the light of discrimination in accordance with the scriptures,—are engaged in suppressing the 'Asuras' which naturally partake of the nature of darkness. And thus in the body of all beings there is a perpetual fight among the Devas and Asuras, the one trying to subdue the other. Such is the sense (of the passage). And it is this that is described in the passage in the torm of a story, with a view to explain the discrimination of the origin of virtue and vice; and this is done with a view to lay down a knowledge of the purity of Prâna (Breath). Both of them, Devas and Asuras, are offsprings of Prajápati; and Prajápati is the Man entitled to both Action and Knowledge, -as declared by another scuti. "The man himself, consisting of the uktha, is the great Prajapati." And of him the sensual functions, those that are in accordance with scriptures and those that follow their natural bent, are opposed to one another, like his children,—being as both of them are, born out of him. And with a view to advancement (of themselves) and deterioration (of the Asuras), the Dêvas caught hold of the udgitha, i.e., they had recourse to the sacrifice, which is performed by a "singer," and which is characterised by meditation upon the udgitha. And since it is impossible to take up only this portion of sacrifice, the meaning is that they had recourse to the Jyotishtoma, &c. With a view to show why they took it, it is said: Having the idea that 'by means of this sacrifice we shall vanquish the Asuras.'

ते ह नासिक्यं प्राणमुद्गीथमुपासांचिक्रिरे त ५ हासुराः पाप्मना विविधुस्तस्मात्तेनोभयं जिन्नति सुराभे च दुर्गन्धि च पाप्मना ह्येष

विद्धः ॥ २ ॥

They then meditated upon the Breath in the nose as the udgitha. But the Asuras pierced it with evil; and hence one smells both what is good-smelling and what is bad-smelling. For it is pierced with evil. (2).

Com.—When desiring to have recourse to the udgithu-sacrifice, the Dêvas meditated upon the sentient Breath in the nose, i.e., the olfactory sense, the pronouncer of the udgitha, as udgitha. That is to say, they meditated upon the breath in the nose, as the udgitha, the syllable 'Om.' This interpretation saves us from abandoning our subject, and taking up another. saying "of this syllable Om" (in the last Khanda), it is laid down that what forms the subject of the discourse is the syllable "Om", as a fit object of meditation. Objection: You have said that they had recourse to the sacrifice characterised by the udgitha, then how is it that now you assert that they meditated upon the breath in the nose as the syllable 'Om'? Reply: This objection does not apply to the present case; since it is in the udgithu-sacrifice itself that the syllable 'Om' is said to be a fit object of meditation,—not independently, but only as being a part of the meditation upon the wlaitha, and being considered as the Deity presiding over the breath of the performer of the action. Therefore it is only right to assert that for this purpose they had recourse to sacrifice. And this duly appointed ulgâtri of the Devas-viz., the breath in the nose, a Deva, in the form of light,—the Asuras, naturally consisting of darkness, pierced or touched with evil arising out of themselves,—this evil being in the form of attachment to vice. And the breath in those came to be its discriminative knowledge subdued by a vicious attachment in the shape of a pride that 'I perceive only good smell.' And through this discrepancy, it becomes touched with evil. This is what is meant by saying that "This the Asuras pierced with evil." And inasmuch as the olfactory breath is pierced with evil, it leads to the perception by being of bad smell, when urged by that evil. Hence it is that people smell both what is good-smelling and what is bad-smelling; because it is pierced with evil. The mention of "both" is not meant to be taken literally (as it is only the bad smell that is perceived through the evil); just as in the case of the sentence, "one for whom both offerings are &c. &c.," (where also 'both' is not to be taken literally); specially since we have another stuti passage in the same connection (in the Brihadâranyaka Upanishad), where it is distinctly declared that "when one does not smell the proper smell, that is evil."

अथ ह वाचमुद्रीथमुपासांचिकिरे ता १ हासुराः पाप्मना विवि-धुस्तस्मात्तयोभयं वदित सत्यं चानृतं च पाप्मना होषा विद्धा ॥३॥ अथ ह चक्षुरुद्रीथमुपासांचिकिरे तद्धासुराः पाप्मना विविधुस्त-स्मात्तेनोभयं पश्यित दर्शनीयं चादर्शनीयं च पाप्मना होतिद्विद्धम्

11 8 11

अथ ह श्रोत्रमुद्रीथमुपासांचिकिरे तद्धासुराः पाप्मना विविधुस्त-स्मात्तेनोभय५ श्रुणोति श्रवणीयं चांश्रवणीयं च पाप्मना ह्येतिहि-द्धम् ॥ ५ ॥

अथ ह मन उद्गीथमुपासांचिकिरे तद्भासुराः पाप्मना विविधु-

स्तस्मात्तेनोभयभ् संकल्पयते संकल्पनीयं चासंकल्पनीयं च पाप्प-ना ह्येतद्विद्भम् ॥ ६ ॥

Then they meditated upon Speech as the udgitha; but the Asuras pierced this with evil. Therefore one speaks both truth and untruth; because it is pierced with evil. (3).

Then they meditated on the eye as the udgitha; but the Asuras pierced it with evil; therefore we see both what is sightly and what is unsightly; because it is pierced with evil.

(4).

Then they meditated upon the ear as the ulgitha; but the Asuras pierced it with evil; therefore we hear both what is good to hear and what is bad to hear; because it is pierced with evil. (5).

Then they meditated upon the mind as udgitha; but the Asuras pierced it with evil; therefore we conceive both what should be conceived and what should not be conceived; because it is pierced with evil.

(6).

Com.—This explanation has been had recourse to, with a view to bring about the realisation of the extreme purity of the Breath in the mouth, which is meant to be laid down as the object of meditation. Hence the Deities of the eye. &c., are examined in order, and being found to be pierced with evil, they are discarded. The rest is as before; the examination being that of Speech, Eye, Ear, Mind, &c., including also those that are not mentioned—viz., the Dieties of Touch, Taste, &c. "These Dieties are all touched with evil" so says another sruti.

अथ ह य एवायं मुख्यः प्राणस्तमुद्गीथमुपासांचिक्रिरे तथ् हा-सुरा ऋत्वा विद्ध्वंसुर्यथाऽङ्मानमाखणमृत्वा विध्वथ्सेत ॥ ७॥

Then they meditated upon the Breath, that is in the mouth, as udgitha. The Asuras, coming to it, were destroyed; just as (a ball of earth) hitting against a solid (hard) piece of stone, is destroyed. (7).

Com.—Having discarded, the Deities of the olfactory sense, &c., as being pierced with evil, they meditated upon the well-known Breath in the mouth. This too. as before, the Asuras approached, and were destroyed by their mere determination (to harm this Breath). With a view to explain how, without having done any harm to the Breath, they were destroyed, the passage cites an instance: just as, in the ordinary world, ball of earth (this is supplied from above, as the appropriate nominative in keeping with this context as well as with other sruti passages), being thrown against a solid piece of stone ("akhana," is that which cannot be dug into with spades, &c., i.e, solid) with a view to breaking the stone, becomes rent asunder without doing any harm to the stone.—so were the Asuras destroyed.

एवं यथाऽइमानमाखणमृत्वा विध्व ५ सत एव ५ हैव स विध्व ५ सते य एवंविदि पापं कामयते यश्चेनमभिदासति स एवोऽइमाखणः

11 < 11

Just as (a ball of earth) striking against a solid piece of stone is rent asunder, so will one be destroyed, who desires evil for one who knows this, as also one who persecutes him; for he is a solid stone. (8).

Com.—Thus then, inasmuch as this Breath is not harmed by the Asuras, it is pure. The sruti next lays down the result accruing to one who knows this, and becomes identified with this Breath. The case of the piece of stone serves as an instance here also. In this manner (of the ball of earth) is he destroyed, who wishes to bring harm to one who knows the aforesaid Breath, and is thereby undeserving of any evil; and also he who persecutes him—i.e., gives him pain by beating, &c., is destroyed in the same manner. Because this knower of the Breath, being identical with the Breath, is like a solid stone, not capable of being harmed. Objection: The Breath on the nose is also air, just as the one in the mouth; then how is it that the Breath in the nose was pierced with evil, and not the one in the mouth? Reply: This objection does not hold: the Breath in the nose, though air was pierced with evil, on account of the discrepancy (impurity) in its substratum (the nose); while the Breath in the mouth was not pierced, because of the strength of its Deity and substratum (the mouth). Just as the implements, axe, &c., bring about excellent works, only when in the hands of well-trained workmen, and not otherwise; in the same manner, it was not the Breath in the mouth, but that in the nose that was pierced, because of this latter being attended by the faulty Deity of the nose.

नैवेतेन सुरभि न दुर्गन्धि विजानात्यपहतपाप्मा ह्येष तेन य-दश्चाति यत्पिबति तेनेतरान्प्राणानवति । एतमु एवान्ततोऽवित्त्वो-स्क्रामित व्याददात्येवान्तत इति ॥ ९ ॥

By this, one knows not what is good-smelling, nor what is bad-smelling; because this is free from evil. Whatever, by this, one eats, and whatever he drinks,—by that he supports the other breaths. In the end, not finding this (Breath in the mouth), the rest depart-He opens it (the mouth) at the end. (9).

Com.—Because the Breath in the mouth was not pierced by the Asuras, therefore by this, one does not know what is good-smelling or what is bad-smelling; people know both these by the nose. Hence, inasmuch as we do not find any action of it, we conclude that it is such as has all evil removed from it, i.e., pure. And while the nose and the rest are all only self-feeding, being as they are attached to good and bad, the Breath in the mouth is not self-feeding, but supports all (breaths). It is explained how this is: whatever one eats and drinks by this Breath in the mouth,—by this food and drink, it supports the others, the nose and the rest:—i.e., they live upon this (food and drink). Thus being the supporter of all, this Breath is pure. But how is it known that these live upon what is eaten and drink by the Breath in the mouth? The reply is that (we conclude this from the fact that) at the time of death, they (nose &c.,) depart, when they do not obtain support from the Breath in the mouth—i.e., when they cease to be supported by its functions of eating and drinking. One who is without Breath cannot either eat or drink: hence the well-known departure of the nose &c., at that time (when they do not receive food and drink). Even on this departure, the desire for food continues (hence it cannot be said that the departure is due to the absence of desire for food, and not to the absence of the food). Hence it is that one opens his mouth (at the time of death, as if asking for food); consequently the want of food is the characteristic of one who has departed.

त ५ हाङ्गिरा उद्गीथमुपासांचक एतमु एवाऽऽङ्गिरसं मन्यन्तेऽङ्गा-नां यदसः ॥ १० ॥

Angiras meditated upon this as the udgitha; and people hold this to be 'Angirusu'; because it is the essence of the limbs. (10).

Com.—Baka Dâlbhya, mentioned later on, meditated upon the Breath in the mouth as the udqitha, having the properties of Angiras: such is the explanation of the passage by some people; and they also explain the next two passages as that, Baka meditated upon this Breath in the mouth, as Brihaspati and as Ayasya', and they base this construction upon the next passage which they explain as 'people think the Breath in the mouth to be Angirasa, Brihaspati and Ayasya.' But such indirect construction could be possible only if the direct construction were not possible; but the direct construction is possible; since there are many other sruti passages making mention of Rishis by name. As for example, people call this Breath and also a certain Rishi, "Satarchina". Similarly, the sruti also mentions, of all the Rishis of the middle (portion of the Rigveda)—Gritsamada, Visvâmitra, Vâmadêva, Atri, &c.,—as being the Breath. In the same manner, the present passage mentions the Rishis, Angiras, Brihaspati and Ayasya—the meditators of Breath—as Breath, with a view to show the identity of these with the Breath; e.g., we have such assertions as "Breath is father, Breath is mother" and so forth. Therefore, the meaning of the passage is that the Rishi Angiras, being the Breath itself, meditated upon himself, the Angiras-Breath, as udgitha. Because it, the Breath, is the essence of all the limbs; therefore it (the Breath) is "Angirasa."

तेन त १ ह बृहस्पितरुद्गीथमुपासांचक एतमु एव बृहस्पितं म-न्यन्ते वाग्घि बृहती तस्या एष पितः ॥ ११॥

तेन त एहाऽऽयास्य उद्गीथमुपासां चक्र एतमु एवाऽऽयास्यं म-न्यन्त आस्याद्ययते ॥ १२ ॥

Brihaspati meditated upon this as the udgitha; and people hold this to be Brihaspati; because speech is 'Brihati,' and this is the Lord of that. Ayàsya meditated upon this as the udgitha; and people hold this to be 'Ayâsya'; because it comes from the mouth. (11 & 12).

Com.—Brihaspati is so called because he is the Lord (or master) of Speech (Brihati). And Ayâsya is so called because he comes from the mouth. Both these are Rishis, identical with Breath. Hence every other should also meditate upon himself as being identical with the Breath, endowed with the qualities of Angiras &c., as the udgitha.

तन त इ बको दाल्म्यो विदांचकार । स ह नैमिशीयाना-मुद्गाता बभूव स ह स्मैम्य: कामानागायित ॥ १३॥ This Baka Dâlbhya knew. He became the udgátri priest of the Naimisiyas; he sang out desires for them. (13). Com.—It was not only Angiras, &c., that meditated upon this. Baka, the son of Dâlbhya, knew the Breath, as described above. Having known it, he became the udgâtri priest of the Naimisîya-sacrificers. And, through the power of his knowledge of the Breath, he obtained their desirable ends by singing. So do other singers.

आगाता ह वे कामानां भवति य एतदेवं विद्वानक्षरमुद्रीथमु-पास्त इत्यध्यात्मम् ॥ १४॥

He obtains wishes by singing, who knowing this, meditates upon the imperishable wlgitha syllable. This with regard to the body.

Com.—He obtains wishes by singing who, knowing this, meditates upon the aforesaid Breath, as the imperishable udgitha (syllable). This is the visible result accuring (to the meditator),—the invisible result being unification with the Breath; the possibility of which is established by such Sruti passages as "becoming a god, one goes to the gods". "This with regard to the body": i.e., such is the meditation upon the udgitha with reference to the body. This summing up, is with a view to attract attention to the meditation of udgitha with reference to the gods.

Thus ends the second Khanda of the first Adhyûya.

ADHY'A'YA I.

KHANDA III.

अथाधिदेवतं य एवासो तपित तमुद्रीथमुपासीतोद्यन्वा एव प्र-जाम्य उद्गायित । उद्य ५ स्तमोभयमपहन्त्यपहन्ता ह वै भयत्य तमसो भवति य एवं वेद ॥ १॥

Now begins the one with reference to the Gods: one ought to meditate upon that which shines,—as the ulgitha. When the sun rises, he sings for the sake of all creatures. When he rises, he destroys the fear of darkness. He becomes the destroyer of the fear of darkness, who knows this.

Com.—After this follows the meditation of the udgitha with reference to the gods; inasmuch as the udgitha is capable of being meditated upon in various ways. "One ought to meditate upon the sun, that sends out warmth, as the udgitha," i.e., one ought to meditate upon the udgitha in the shape of the sun. Objection: The udgitha being a syllable, how could it exist in the sun? The reply is this: Just as he rises, he sings for the sake of the creatures, i.e., for the sake of the production of food for the creatures; inasmuch as if the sun did not rise, the corns would never ripen; therefore, he sings, as it were, for their sake. And because he sings for the sake of food, the sun is udgitha. And again, just as he rises, he removes the darkness of night, and the fears of living beings consequent upon it. One who knows the sun with these properties, becomes the destroyer of all fears of the self in the shape of birth, death, &c., and also of the cause of fear, darkness in the shape of ignorance.

समान उ एवायं चासौ चोष्णोऽयमुष्णोऽसौ स्वर इतीममाचक्ष-ते स्वर इति प्रत्यास्वर इत्यमुं तस्माद्वा एतमिमममुं चोद्गीथमुपासी-

त॥२॥

This and that are the same: this is warm and that is warm; this, they call 'srara' and that, they call 'srara,' 'Pratyasvara (reflected sound). Therefore, one ought to meditate upon this and that as the udyitha.

Com.—Though the Breath and the sun appear to be different on account of the difference of place, yet between these two, there is no difference in reality. How? Because in its properties, the Breath is the same as the sun, and the sun the same as the Breath. Because the Breath is warm, and the sun is also warm. And again people call the Breath 'Svara', and the sun too, they call 'svara'—'Pratyasvara'. And they are so named; because the Breath simply moves along, having once died, it never comes back; while the sun having set once, comes back day after day; hence, he is called 'Pratyasvara.' Thus the sun and the Breath are the same, both in properties and in name. And hence, inasmuch as there is real difference between the two, one ought to meditate upon both the sun and the Breath as udgitha.

अथ खलु व्यानमेवोद्गीथमुपासीत यद्वे प्राणिति स प्राणो यद-पानिति सोऽपानः । अथ यः प्राणापानयोः संधिः स व्यानो यो व्यानः सा वाक् । तस्मादप्राणवनपानन्वाचमभिव्याहरति ॥ ३ ॥

One ought to meditate upon $Vy\hat{a}na$ as the $udy\hat{a}tha$. That which one breathes out is the $Pr\hat{a}na$ and that which one breathes in is the $Ap\hat{a}na$. The junction of $Pr\hat{a}na$ and $Ap\hat{a}na$ is the $Vy\hat{a}na$; and this $Vy\hat{a}na$ is Speech. Therefore it is, while one neither breathes out nor breathes in, that he utters speech. (3).

Com.—This explains another method of meditation upon udgitha. One ought to meditate upon Vyāna,—a particular function of Breath, to be explained later on—as the udgitha. The Sruti next formulates its nature. When a person breathes out—i.e., exhales the air through the mouth and nostrils—, that is a particular function of the air, called Prāna; and when he breathes in—i.e., inhales the air by the mouth and nostrils—that constitutes the function of air called " $Ap\hat{a}$ ia." What of this? "The junction of $Pr\hat{a}$ ia and $Ap\hat{a}$ ia."—i.e., the function of the air in between these two—is " $Vy\hat{a}na$." What is known as " $Vy\hat{a}na$ " in the systems of Sankhya and Yoga (according to which ' $Vy\hat{a}na$ ' is the name of the air located in the shoulders) is not real $Vy\hat{a}na$; inasmuch as the Sruti specifies it (as the function in between $Pr\hat{a}na$ and $Ap\hat{a}na$)—such is the meaning of the passage.

"How is it, having neglected $Pr\hat{a}na$ and $Ap\hat{a}na$, the Sruti lays special stress upon meditation on the $Vy\hat{a}na$ alone?" Because it is the cause of vigorous actions. It is explained how it brings about vigorous actions: " $Vy\hat{a}na$ is Speech," because Speech results from the $Vy\hat{a}na$. Since Speech is accomplished by means of the $Vy\hat{a}na$, therefore it is only when people are neither breathing in nor breathing out,—i.e., not performing the functions of $Pr\hat{a}na$ and $Ap\hat{a}na$ —that people speak out.

या वाक्सर्क्तस्मादप्राणन्ननपाननृत्त्वमभिन्याहरति यर्क्तत्साम त-स्मादप्राणन्ननपानन्साम गायित यत्साम स उद्गीथस्तस्मादप्राणन्न-नपाननुद्गायित ॥ ४ ॥

Speech is Rik; therefore, while one neither breathes in nor breathes out, he pronounces the Rik. Rik is Såma; therefore, while one neither breathes in nor breathes out, he sings the $S\hat{a}ma$. The $S\hat{a}ma$ is udyitha; therefore, while one neither breathes in nor breathes out, he sings the ulgitha. (4).

Com.—The meaning is, that while one neither breathes out nor breathes in, it is by means of the Vyâna alone that, he accomplishes the Rik (a particular form of Speech), the Sâma (located in the Rik), and the udgîtha (a part of Sâma).

अतो यान्यन्यानि वीर्यवन्ति कर्माणि यथाऽ ग्नेर्मन्थनमाजेः सरणं दृद्धस्य धनुष आयमनमप्राणन्ननपान ५ स्तानि करोत्येतस्य हेतोर्व्या-नमेवोद्गीथमुपासीत ॥ ९ ॥

Therefore, whatever actions there are that require strength,—such as the rubbing out of fire, running over a boundary (barrier), stringing a strong bow—are all performed, while one is neither breathing out nor breathing in; therefore, one ought to meditate upon Vyûna, as the udyîtha. (5).

Com.—Not only the utterance of Speech, but even other actions besides this, that require extra strength and effort to accomplish,—such as the rubbing out of fire, the running over a boundary (i.e., jumping over a fence), the stringing of a hard and strong bow,—all this one does while neither breathing in nor breathing out. That Vyåna is superior to the other functions (of the air), Prâna and the rest. And it is better to meditate upon the superior, because it brings about superior results;—like serving a king (which is better than serving common men). For this reason, one ought to meditate upon Vyâna—and on no other functions,—as the udyitha; the result of which would be the vigorousness of actions.

अथ खलूद्गीथाक्षराण्युपासीतोद्गीथ इति प्राण एवोत्प्राणेन ह्यु-त्तिष्ठति वाग्गीर्वाचो ह गिर इत्याचक्षतेऽन्नं थमने हीद ५ सर्व ५ स्थितम् ॥ ६ ॥

Now one ought to meditate upon the letters of the wlgitha—i.e, of the word 'ulgitha.' Breath is 'ut'; because by the breath, one rises. Speech is 'gi'; because speeches are called "giráh". Food is 'tha'; because in (on) food does all this subsist. (6).

Com.—" Now, one ought to meditate upon the letters of udgitha." In order that this may not be mistaken for an injunction to meditate upon the gods of faith (denoted by a. u and m), the Sruti explains (its meaning): "of the word 'udgithâ'",—that is to say, the letters of the name 'udgitha'. The meditation upon the name brings about the accomplishment of the object denoted by the name,—as for instance, the case of the name of a person—" such and such a Misra." Breath is "ut"— i.e., one ought to think of this letter as Breath. It is explained why Breath is ut: "Since by Breath, one rises" (ut-tishthati),—since we find that all that is without Breath falls down, therefore there is a similarity between 'ut' (up) and Breath. "Speech is 'gi", because respectable people call Speech. "gih" (of which 'girâh' is the plural form). In the same manner "tood is 'tha'"; "Since on food does all this subsist," therefore there is a similarity between tood and the letter 'tha'.

चौरेवोदन्तरिक्षं गीः पृथिवी थमादिस एवोद्वायुगींराग्निस्थ सामवेद एवोद्यजुर्वेदो गीर्ऋग्वेदस्थं दुग्धेऽस्मे वाग्दोहं यो वाचो दोहोऽन्तवाननादो भवति य एतान्येवं विद्वानुद्रीथाक्षराण्युपास्त उद्गीथ इति ॥ ७॥

Heaven is "ut," the sky 'gi," and the earth 'tha'. The sun is 'ut,' the air 'gi' and the fire 'tha'. The Sâma-vêda 'ut,' the Yajur-vêda 'gi', and the Rig-vêda 'tha'. Speech yields the milk; and the milk is Speech; and he becomes rich in food, an eater of food.

(7)

Com.—The similarity of the three (Breath, &c., with the letters ut, &c.,) has been mentioned in the Sruti itself (in the last passage). And the similarities of the others (Heaven) are to be explained in a similar manner. "Heaven is ut," because it is highly-placed. "The sky is gi," because it snallows, as it were, the worlds. "The earth is tha," because it is the abode of creatures. "The sun is ut." because it is on high. "The air is $\eta \hat{i}$," because it swallows up fire, &c. "The Fire is tha," because it is the substratum of sacrificial actions. The Sâma-vêda is "ut," because it is eulogised as the "Heaven." "The Yajur-vêda is qi," because the gods swallow the offering made with the yajush-mantras. "The Rig-vêda is tha," because the Sâma resides in the Rik. The Sruti now mentions the result accruing from meditation upon the letters of udgitha: "yields milk" to the meditator; what is that which yields? "Speech." What is the milk that is yielded? "Speech is the milk." That is to say, the result (of such meditation) is in the shape of all that is to be accomplished by the recitation of the Rig-vêda, &c. This is the milk, in the shape of Speech, that is yielded by Speech,—that is to say, Speech yields itself. And further, "he becomes rich in food—" i.e., possessed of much food "an eater of food "-i.e., possessed of good appetite;who knows and meditates upon the above-described letters of udgitha—i.e., the letters composing the word " udqîtha."

अथ खल्वाशीःसमृद्धिरुपसरणानीत्युपासीत येन साम्ना स्तोष्य-न्स्यात्तत्सामोपधावेत् ॥ ८ ॥

Next follows the fulfilment of blessings: one ought to meditate upon the objects contemplated: one ought to reflect on the Sâma with which he is going to praise. (8)

Com.—Now follows the explanation of the method by which a fulfilment of blessings—i.e., desires—would result. "Upasaranas" are the objects to be contemplated. How is one to meditate upon this? He is to meditate thus: The particular Sâma by which the singer-priest would be going to praise—that Sâma one ought to reflect upon, with reference to its origin, &c.

यस्यामृचि तामृचं यदार्षेयं तमृाषें यां देवतामभिष्टोष्यन्स्यात्तां देवतामुपधावेत् ॥ ९ ॥

On the Rik in which that Sâma occurs, on the Rishi by whom it was seen, on the Deity which he is going to praise,—on all these one ought to reflect. (9).

Com.—One ought to reflect upon the Deity, &c., of the Rik in which that particular Sâma occurs; and also on the Rishi by whom that Sâma was seen. And one ought also to reflect upon the Deity which he is going to praise.

येन च्छन्दसा स्तोष्यन्स्यात्तच्छन्द उपधावेद्येन स्तोमेन स्तोष्य-माणः स्यात्त १ स्तोममुपधावेत् ॥ १०॥

One ought to reflect upon the metre in which he is going to praise. One ought to reflect upon the hymn with which he is going to praise. (10)

Com.—By whatever metre—Gâyatri, &c., one is going to praise, that metre he ought to reflect upon. And the hymn by which he is going to praise, that hymn he ought to reflect upon. We have the Atmanepada in "Stashyamâna" because the subsidiary result of the Hymn (Stoma) accrues to the singer himself.

यां दिशमभिष्टोष्यन्स्यात्तां दिशमुप्धावेत् ॥ ११ ॥

The quarter that one is going to praise, that quarter he ought to reflect upon. (11).

Com.—One ought to reflect upon the presiding Deity, &c., of the quarters which he is going to praise.

आत्मानमन्त उपसृत्य स्तुवीत कामं ध्यायन्नप्रमत्तोऽभ्याशो ह यदस्मे स कामः समृध्येत यत्कामः स्तुवीतेति यत्कामः स्तुवीतेति ॥ १२॥

Lastly, having approached himself, he ought to sing the praise, thinking of his desire, without making mistakes. Quickly will be fulfilled for him the desire, desiring which he would sing the praise.—yea, desiring which he would sing the praise. (12).

Com.—At the end.—i.e., after he has duly reflected upon the Sâma, &c., the singer-priest should approach himself,—i.e., reflect upon himself with reference to his family name, &c., and then sing the praise. "Thinking of his desire," and "without any mistakes"—i.e., not making any mistakes of accent and pronunciation, &c. And thence for one who knows this, his desires become fulfilled—the desires for the sake of which he would sing the praise. The repetition is with a view to show reverence (for the subject treated).

Thus ends the Third Khanda of the First Adhyâya.

ADHYA'YA I.

KHANDA IV

---()----

अभित्येतदक्षरमुद्रीथमुपासीतोमिति ह्युद्गायति तस्योपन्याख्यान-

म्॥१॥

One ought to meditate upon the syllable 'Om'; because one sings (beginning) with 'Om'. (Now follows) its explanation. (1).

Com.—"The syllable Om, &c.," is repeated again with a view to recall the subject proper of the discourse; because it had been interrupted by the mention of the meditation of the letters of the word "Udgitha;" and in order to arrest the attention from going astray. Now begins the explanation of the injunction that one ought to accomplish the meditation upon the syllable treated of here, endowed with the properties of immortality and fearlessness.

देवा वै मृत्योर्बिभ्यतस्त्रयीं विद्यां प्राविशः स्ते छन्दोभिरच्छा-दयन्यदेभिरच्छादयः स्तच्छन्दसां छन्दस्त्वम् ॥ २ ॥

The gods, fearing death, entered upon the triadic knowledge. They covered (themselves) with the metrical hymns. And because they covered (themselves) with them, therefore the metrical hymns are called Chhandas. (2)

Com.— It is explained that the gods did when they were afraid of death. i.e., of the killer. They entered upon triadic knowledge, i.e., they commenced the performance of actions prescribed in the Vedas, thinking this to be a protection against death. And further, in the course of an action, they continued to do japa and home with the metrical hymns not used in that particular action; and thereby covered themselves. And because they covered themselves by means of the metrical hymns, therefore these hymns, are called "Chhanlas."

तानु तत्र मृत्युर्यथा मत्स्यमुदके परिपश्येदेवं पर्यपश्यदिच सा-म्नि यजुषि । ते नु वित्त्वोर्ध्वा ऋचः साम्नो यजुषः स्वरमेव प्रावि-शन् ॥ ३॥

Then just as one would see a fish in water, so did Death observe the gods in Rik, Sama and Yajus. And the gods knowing this, rose from Rik, Yujus Sâmu, and entered the Svaru. (3).

Com.—Just as in the world fishermen see the fish in water, not very deep, thinking the fish to be easily accessible by means of fishing-hooks and draining of water so did Death see the gods; that is to say,—Death thought the gods to be easily accessible by means of the neglect of actions. It is now explained where he saw the gods: In the Rik, $S\hat{a}ma$ and Yajus := i.e., in action connected with Rik, Same and Yajus. And the gods, having purified themselves by vedic actions and having themselves duly purified,—understood the motive of Death. And having understood it, they separated themselves from and rose above the Actions prescribed in the Rigvêda, Yajûr-vêda and Sâma-vêda. That is to say, finding it hopeless to be free from the fear, death, by means of such actions,—they had recourse to the syllable, called Stara, which is endowed with the properties of immortality. That is to say, they became engaged in meditation upon the syllable 'Om.' The êva (in "Svaramêva") has a restrictive sense, serves to preclude the possibility of the illusion of others; the meaning being that they became engaged in the meditation of this syllable alone.

यदा वा ऋचमाप्रोत्योमित्येवातिस्वरत्येव ५ सामैवं यजुरेष उ स्वरेत

यदेतदक्षरमेतदमृतमभयं तत्प्रविश्य देवा अमृता अभया अभवन्

11 8 11

When one gets (learns) the Rik, he loudly pronounces 'Om'; the same with Sâma and Yajus. And this 'Svara' (accent) is this syllable, the immortal and fearless. Having entered this, the gods became immortal and fearless. (4).

Com.—It is now explained how the syllable Om comes to be signified by the word "Svara": When one acquires the Rik, he loudly utters 'Om'; so with Sāma and Yajus. The "Svara" is that which is the syllable Om, the immortal and fearless. Having entered this, the gods acquired its properties, i.e., became immortal and fearless.

स य एतदेवं विद्वानक्षरं प्रणौत्येतदेवाक्षर ५ स्वरममृतमभयं प्र-विश्वाति तत्प्रविश्य यदमृता देवास्तदमृतो भवति ॥ ९ ॥

He who, knowing this, praises this syllable, enters the same syllable, the "Srara", the immortal and free from fever; and having entered it, he becomes immortal, just as the gods are immortal. (5)

Com.—Whoever else knowing this, praises this same syllable, endowed with the properties of immortality and fearlessness;—by 'praise' here is meant meditation,—enters into the same syllable, the 'Svara,' immortal and fearless. And when he has once entered there, then in the case of the supreme Brahman, there is no distinction of greater or less proximity (or closeness of relation) with it; as in the case of people entering a king's palace, there is the destruction of greater or less proximity. Consequently, the immortality by which the aforesaid person becomes immortal is the same immortality whereby the gods become immortal—i.e., there is no difference of greater or less degree in the case of immortality.

Thus ends the Fourth Khanda of the First Adhyâya.

ADHYAYA I.

KHANDA V.

0

अथ खलु य उद्गीधः स प्रणवो यः प्रणवः स उद्गीध इत्यसौ वा आदित्य उद्गीथ एष प्रणव ॐ मिति ह्येष स्वरन्नेति ॥ १ ॥

Now verily that which is the udyitha is the Pranava; and that which is Pranava is the udyitha. This sun is the udyitha, and also Pranava; because he (the sun) goes along pronouncing 'Om'. (1).

Com.—Having discarded the aforesaid meditation of udgitha, as qualified by the notions of Breath and Sun with regard to it,—and subsequently having mentioned the identity of udgitha and Pranava,—the Sruti now begins to explain the meditation in this (identity) of the syllable as qualified by a differentiation of Breaths and Rays (i.e., distinction of the Breath in the mouth from the other Breaths, and the distinction of the Rays from the sun),—such meditation leading to the acquirement of many sons. Now, verily, udgitha is Pranava; that which is called "Pranava" in the Rig-vêda, is signified by the word "udgitha," in the Chhândogya (i.e., Sâma-vêda).

"This sun verily is the udgitha, he is Pranava"—That is to say, in the Rig-vêda too, it is the sun only and nothing else, that is signified by the word "Pranava." The sun is udgitha; why? Because he moves along, pronouncing the syllable 'Om' which is called "udgitha." "Scaran" is explained as 'pronouncing,' because verbal roots have various significations; or it may mean 'going'. Therefore the sun is udgitha.

एतमु एवाहमभ्यगासिष तस्मान्मम त्वमेकोऽसीति ह कोषित-कि: पुत्रमुवाच रश्मी ९ स्त्वं पर्यावर्तयाद्वहवो वे ते भविष्यन्तीत्यधि-देवतम् ॥ २ ॥

To Him did I sing; therefore, thou art my only one, thus said Kaushîtaki to his son, 'do thou reflect upon the rays, then wilt thou have many (sons).' This with reference to the gods. (2).

Com.—Before Him did I sing,—i.e., having identified the Sun with his rays, I meditated upon Him. For this reason, thou art my only son,—Kaushîtaki, the son of Kushîtaka, said this to his son. Therefore, do thou reflect upon the rays and the sun, as distinct (from one another). The form "puryûvartayatôt" is due to its being related to "tram." "Thus wilt thou have many sons." This with reference to the gods.

अथाध्यात्मं य एवायं मुख्यः प्राणस्तमुद्गीथमुपासीतोमिति हो-ष स्वरनेति ॥ ३॥

Now with reference to the body: one ought to meditate upon the Breath in the mouth, as udyitha; because it moves along pronouncing 'Om'. (3).

Com.—After this is described that with reference to the body "one ought to meditate upon the Breath in the mouth as the ulgitha"—This is to be explained as before. Because this, Breath, also moves along pronouncing 'Om',—that is to say, the Breath in the mouth pronounces 'Om,' giving permission, as it were, for the Speech, &c., to function; and at the time of death, people getting near the dying person, do not hear this pronunciation of Om by the Breath of the dying man. From analogy we infer that the pronunciation of 'Om' by the sun too, is only in the way of permission.

एतमु एवाहमभ्यगासिषं तस्मान्मम त्वमेकोऽसीति ह केंोषीत-किः पुत्रमुवाच प्राणाभ् स्वं भूमानमभिगायताद्वहवो वे मे भवि-ष्यन्तीति ॥ ४ ॥

To him did I sing; therefore thou art my only one; thus said Kaushîtaki to his son, "do thou sing to the Breaths as manifold, so that thou mayst have many."(4)

Com.—To him did I, &c., as before. Therefore, thou must think of the Breath in the mouth as well as Speech, &c., as the udgitha qualified by differentiations; and should mentally sing to them as various and manifold. The form abhyagatat is to be explained as avartagat at above. So that I may have many sons—with this motive (thou should sing). Inasmuch as the idea of udgitha being the single Breath (the Breath in the mouth as identical with all other Breaths) and the single sun (considered as identical with the rays), results in the obtaining of a single son—it is faulty and as such discarded; consequently, one ought to think of the difference of the race (from the sun) and of Breaths (from one another) is enjoined in this section, as resulting in many sons.

अथ खलु य उद्गीथः स प्रणवो यः प्रणवः स उद्गीथ इति होतृषदनाद्भेवापि दुरुद्गीतमनुसमाहरतीत्यनुसमाहरतीति ॥ ५ ॥ Now verily that which is udgitha is Pranava, and that which is Pranava is udgitha. (If one knows this) then from the seat of the Hotri priest all mis-singing is rectified,—yea is rectified. (5).

Com.—The identification of Pranava and udgitha has already been explained; the result of this is now laid down: "Hotrishadana" is the place, sitting in which the Hotri priest gives instructions. From the seat of the Hotri priest' means 'from the duties of the Hotri priest rightly performed'; because from a mere place no result could follow. What follows from this is that whatever is incorrectly sung—i.e., whatever mistake is committed by the udgātri priest, in the due performance of his duties—is rectified; just as medication rectifies the discrepancies of the humours (of the body).

Thus ends the Fifth Khanda of the First Adhyaya.

ADHYA'YA I.

KHANDA VI.

--o---

इयमेवर्गिम्नः साम तदेतदेतस्यामृच्यध्यृदः साम तस्मादच्यध्यृदः साम गीयत इयमेव साऽम्रिरमस्तत्सामः॥ १॥

This is Rik; and fire is Sama. This Sama rests on that Rik; therefore, the Sama is sung as resting on the Rik. This is 'Sa' and fire is 'ama,' and that makes 'Sama'. (1).

Com. - Now, is laid down another method of meditation on udgitha, for the accomplishment of all ends. This Earth is Rik,—i.e., one ought to think of Rik as the Earth. In the same manner, Fire is Sama; i.e., one ought to think of Sâma as fire. It is now explained how Earth and Fire have the character of Rik and Sama respectively. This Sama, named 'fire,' rests on the Rik in the shape of this Earth,—i.e., it is located upon this, just as the Sama does on Rik. It is for this reason, that even now the Sâma-singers sing the Sâma as resting upon Rik. Just as Rik and Sama do not absolutely differ from one another, so also do the Earth and Fire. How is that? This Earth indeed is 'Sà'-i.e., denoted by the first half of the word 'Sama' and the Fire is 'ama' i.c., signified by the other half of the same. Thus the two, Fire and Earth, being signified by the same word 'Sâma', constitute 'Sâma.' Therefore, the two, Earth and Fire, do not differ from each other absolutely, and are mutually interlaced, just like Rik and Sâma. And for this reason, to Earth and Fire belong the characters of Rik and Sama,—such is the meaning. Some people explain the passage, "This is Så, and Fire ama" as being for the purpose of enjoining the thinking of the letters of the word "Sâma", as Earth and Fire.

अन्तिरिक्षमेवर्ग्वायुः साम तदेतदेतस्यामृच्यध्यूढ ५ साम तस्मा-दृच्यध्यूढ ५ साम गीयतेऽन्तिरिक्षमेव सा वायुरमस्तत्साम ॥ २ ॥ चैरित्रगीदित्यः साम तदेतदेतस्यामृच्यध्यूढ ५ साम तस्माद्य्य-ध्यूढ ५ साम गीयते चैरित्र साऽऽदित्योऽमस्तत्साम ॥ ३ ॥

The sky is Rik, and the air $S\hat{a}ma$; this $S\hat{a}ma$ rests on that Rik; therefore the $S\hat{a}ma$ is sung as resting on the Rik. The sky is ' $S\hat{a}$ ' and the air is 'ama', and they constitute $S\hat{a}ma$. (2).

The Heaven is Rik; and the sun is $S\hat{a}ma$. This $S\hat{a}ma$ rests on that Rik; therefore, this $S\hat{a}ma$ is sung as resting on the Rik. The Heaven is ' $S\hat{a}$ ' and the sun is 'ama', and they constitute ' $S\hat{a}ma$ '. (3).

Com.—" The sky is Rik, the air Sama" &c. is to be explained as before.

नक्षत्राण्येवक्चन्द्रमाः साम तदेतदेतस्यामृच्यध्यूद्रश् साम तस्मा-दृच्यध्यूद्रश्र साम गीयते नक्षत्राण्येव सा चन्द्रमा अमस्तःसाम

11 8 11

The stars are Rik, and the moon $S\hat{a}ma$; this $S\hat{a}ma$, rests on that Rik; therefore, the $S\hat{a}ma$ is sung as resting on the Rik; the stars are ' $S\hat{a}$ ' and the moon 'ama' and they make up ' $S\hat{a}ma$.' (4).

Com.—The moon is the lord of all the stars; hence it is called "Sama."

अथ यदेतदादित्यस्य शुक्कं भाः सेवर्गथ यन्नीलं परः ऋष्णं त-त्साम तदेतदेतस्यामृच्यध्यूद्धं साम तस्माद्दच्यध्यूद्धः साम गोयत

11911

Now the white light of the sun is Rih; and the blue exceeding darkness is $S\hat{a}ma$. This $S\hat{a}ma$ rests upon that Rih; therefore, this $S\hat{a}ma$ is sung as resting upon that Rih. (5).

Com.—That which is the white light in the sun is Rik. And that in the sun, which is extremely blue or dark, is $S\hat{a}ma$. This (blackness in the sun) is seen only by those whose sight (or mind) is well-controlled.

अथ यदेवैतदादित्यस्य शुक्रं भाः सैव साऽथ यन्नीलं परः ऋष्णं तदमस्तत्सामाथ य एषोऽन्तरादित्ये हिरण्मयः पुरुषो दश्यते हिरण्य-इमश्रुहिरण्यकेश आप्रणखात्सर्व एव सुवर्णः ॥ ६ ॥

The white light of the sun is 'Sâ' and the blue exceeding darkness 'ama'; thus they make 'Sâma'. Now the golden person that is seen in the sun,—the person with golden beard and golden hair,—all is golden, to the very tips of his nails. (6).

Com.—These lights of the sun, the white and black, are Sâ and 'ama'—thus making "Sâma". Now "the person inside the sun" who appears as if made up of gold: it is not possible for the God to be made of gold; tirstly, because in that case, it would not be possible for him to have Sama and Rik for his joints, and to be free from evil. For, anything made of gold, being inanimate, cannot be touched by evil; and as such, it (the evil) could not be prohibited (with regard to it). And secondly, because the person in the eye is not perceived to be so (made of gold). Therefore the word "Hiranmaya", (golden) must be explained as an elliptical simile, signifying "bright, effulgent," (lit. consisting of light). The interpretation of the following words also is similar. "Purusha" (person) is that which lies in the body (puri sêtê) or that which fills up (pûrayati) the body. Such a person in the sun, who is seen, by those whose exterior eye has been suppressed (from activity) and whose minds are well controlled, by such means as leading a life of studentship and the like (Brahmacharyà &c.). Inasmuch as even of one who is bright, the beard and hair might be black, it (the shape of these in the Solar Person) is specified: "with golden beard and golden hair"—i.e., his beard and hair are also effulgent (i.e., consist of gight only). "Pranakha" is the tip of the nail; all (his limbs), to the very tips of the nails, are "golden" i.e., consist of light.

तस्य यथा कप्यासं पुण्डरीकमेवमक्षिणी तस्योदिति नाम स एष सर्वेभ्यः पाप्मभ्य उदित उदेति ह वे सर्वेभ्यः पाप्मभ्यो य एवं वेद ॥ ७॥

His eyes are bright like red lotus; and His name is "ut"; He has risen above all evil. He verily rises above all evil, who knows this. (7).

Com.—Of this person of golden colour, there is a further peculiarity in the eyes. How? "A'sa of the monkey" -A'sa = A'si, to sit + ghan, instrumental. 'A'su' means that portion of the monkey's back on which it sits. And the eyes of that Person is bright like the lotus which is like the seat of the monkey. Inasmuch as the monkey's seat is compared to the lotus to which the eyes are compared, the simile cannot be said to be lower than the dignity of the eyes. Of this Person, endowed as He is with the aforesaid qualities, the secondary name is "Ut". Why secondary? Because this God (Person) has risen above all evil and its effects. It will be explained later on that "this Self is free from evil, &c., &c." (Udita = ut + ita, gone or risen above). For this reason He is named "Ut". One, who knows in the aforesaid manner, this Person, named "Ut", endowed with the aforesaid properties, he too rises above all evil. "Ha" and "Va" are indeclinables signifying certainty, the meaning being "it is certain that he rises, &c."

तस्यक्चे साम च गेष्णों तस्मादुद्गीथस्तस्मात्त्वेवोद्गीतैतस्य हि गाता स एष ये चामुष्मात्पराखो लोकास्तेषां चेष्टे देवकामानां चे-व्यिष्दैवतम् ॥ ८॥

Of Him, Rik and Sâma are joints; therefore is He $u \cdot l y i t h a$. Hence (is the priest called) ' $U \cdot l q a t a$ ', inasmuch as he is the singer (y a t a) of this (person, named ' U t'). He is the lord of the worlds beyond that, as also of the desires of the gods. This with reference to gods. (8).

Com.—With a view to explain that the aforesaid god is udgitha, just like the sun, &c., it is declared: "Of Him Rik and Sama are the joints". As the God is the Self (essence) of all, inasmuch as He is the lord of the desires of all the worlds, high and low,—it is only reasonable that He should have Rik and Sima, in the shape of the Earth and Fire, for His joints; also because He is the source of all. And since He is named "Ut" and has Rik and Sama for his joints, therefore, He is mystically called "Udaîtha"—the God being fond of things mystic—this name being suggested by the fact of His having Rik and Sana for his joints. Such is the meaning of the sentence, "therefore He is Udaitha." For this reason is the priest called "udgå'a", the singer of ut. Because he is the singer (gata) of this God named "Ut", therefore is "Udgata" the well-known name of the Udýātri priest. This god, named "Ut' is the lord of all the worlds that are beyond—i.e., above—that, i.e., the Sun. The particle "Cha" implies that He is not only the lord of these (worlds), but He also upholds (or supports) them,—as declared in such mantras as "He upheld this Earth and the Heaven," &c., &c. And further "He is the lord of the desires of the gods." "This with reference to gods"—i.e., we have described the form of the god "udgitha", with regard to gods.

Thus ends the Sixth Khanda of Adhyaya I.

ADHYA'YA I.

KHANDA VII.

--0-

अथाध्यातमं वागेवक्प्रीणः साम तदेतदेतस्यामृच्यध्यूढ ५ साम तस्माद्य्यध्यूढ५ साम गीयते । वागेव सा प्राणोऽमस्तत्साम ॥१॥

Now with reference to the body: Speech is Rik, Breath is $S\hat{a}ma$. This $S\hat{a}ma$ rests on that Rik; therefore, the $S\hat{a}ma$ is sung as resting on the Rik. Speech is ' $S\hat{a}$ ' and Breath 'ama' and that makes ' $S\hat{a}ma$ '. (1).

Com.—Now we explain that with reference to the body: "Speech is Rik and Breath Sama," on account of the similarity of position above and below. By "Breath" is meant the nose together with the air (breathed). "Speech is 'Sâ' and Breath is 'ama' &c." as explained before.

चक्षुरेवर्गात्मा साम तदेतदेतस्यामृच्यध्यूढ ५ साम तस्माद्य्यध्यू-ढ ५ साम गीयते । चक्षुरेव साऽऽत्माऽमस्तत्साम ॥ २ ॥

The eye is Rik, and the self is Såma. This Såma rests on that Rik; therefore, the Såma is sung as resting on the Rik. The eye is 'Så' and the self 'ama' and that makes 'Såma'. (2).

Com.—"The eye is Rik and the self Sâma"; by "âtmâ here is meant the shalow-self; and this Sâma, because it rests in the Eye (as Sâma rests in Rik.)

श्रोत्रमेवर्ङ्कनः साम तदेतदेतस्यामृच्यध्यूद ५ साम तस्माद्य-ध्यूद ५ साम गीयते । श्रेत्रमेव सा मनोऽमस्तत्साम ॥ ३ ॥

The ear is Rik, and the mind is $S\hat{a}ma$. This $S\hat{a}ma$ rests on that $R\hat{i}k$; therefore, the $S\hat{a}ma$ is sung as resting on the $R\hat{i}k$. The ear is ' $S\hat{a}$ ' and the mind 'ama'; and that makes ' $S\hat{a}ma$ '. (3).

Com.—"The ear is Rik, and the mind Sâma:" the mind is "Sâma", because it controls the ear.

अथ यदेतदक्ष्णः शुक्कं भाः सेवर्गथ यन्नीलं परः कृष्णं तत्सा-म तदेतदेतस्यामृच्यध्यूढ५ साम तस्मादच्यध्यूढ५ साम गीयते। अथ

यदेवेतदक्ष्णः शुक्कं भाः सेव साऽथ यत्रीलं परः कृष्णं तदम-स्तत्साम ॥ ४ ॥

Now, the white light of the eye is Rik, and the blue extreme darkness is $S\hat{a}ma$. This $S\hat{a}ma$ rests on that Rik; therefore the $S\hat{a}ma$ is sung as resting on the Rik. The white light of the eye is ' $S\hat{a}$ ' and the blue extreme darkness 'ama'; and that makes ' $S\hat{a}ma$ '." (4).

Com.—"The white light of the eye is Rik"; and the blue extreme darkness,—like that in the sun,—which is the substratum of vision, is Sûma.

अथ य एषोऽन्तरिक्षिणि पुरुषो दृश्यते सैवर्क्तत्साम तदुक्यं तद्यजुस्तद्ब्रह्म तस्यै तस्य तदेव रूपं यदमुष्य रूपं यावमुष्य गेष्णो तो गेष्णो यन्नाम तन्नाम ॥ ९ ॥

Now, the person who is seen in the eye,—He is Rik, He is Sâma, He is uktha, He is Yujus, He is Bruhman. Of this (person) the form is the same as the form of that (person), His joints are the same as those of the other, and His name is the same as that of the other. (5).

Com.—"The person that is seen in the Eye", &c., as before. This is the Rik with reference to the body, and speech &c., and the Earth &c., are so, with reference to gods. It is well-known that Rik consists of letters composed in metrical lines; the same is the case with Sâma. Or, being mentioned with "Uktha," 'Sâma' may mean the 'Stotra' hymn; "Uktha" is the 'Sastra' hymn; and different from this is Yujus—all such sentences as end in 'Svâha' 'Svadha' 'Vashat', &c., are-Yajus; and all this is this (person); because he is the essence (self) of all, and the source of all, as we have already explained (before). "He is Brahman" means that He is the three Vedas; inasmuch as what form the subject of the present discourse are Rik. &c. "Of this person in the eye, the form is the same, &c.," refers the aforesaid form to the present case. What is it? The same as the form of that,—i.e., of the person in the sun; that is to say, the "golden colour", &c., mentioned above with reference to gods. The joints of this Person in the eve are the same as the joints of that Person in the sun. His name is the same as the name of that Person in the sun-viz., "ut" and "udgitha". If it be urged that "inasmuch as there is difference of position, and there are references of the form, properties and name (of the one to the other), and as the objects of control are laid down as different.—there must be a difference between the Person in the sun and that in the eye",-(we reply) not so; because, it is not possible for one and the same (meditator) to be both, one by (meditating upon) that (person in the sun) and another by (meditating upon) this (person in the eye). That is to say, the meditator of the person in the sun becomes the lord of the worlds beyond the sun; and the meditator on the person in the eye becomes the lord of the world lower down; now, for one and the same meditator, it is not possible to acquire two different forms; therefore, the Person in the eye must be held to be the same as the person in the sun. If it be argued that "one and the same thing may have a dual form through its becoming divided two-fold,—as will be declared later on that 'he becomes one-fold, he becomes three-fold &c'."—then (we reply) not so: since it is not possible of a single sentient being, which is impartite, to be divided. Therefore, it must be admitted that that with reference to gods and that with reference to the body are one and the same. The reference of form &c., which you have asserted to be the grounds of difference, do not imply any difference. What they do is only to preclude any doubts as to these two being different on account of the difference of their positions

स एष ये चैतस्मादर्वाञ्चो छोकास्तेषां चेष्टे मनुष्यकामानां चेति तद्य इमे वीणायां गायन्त्येतं ते गायन्ति तस्मात्ते धनसनयः ॥६॥

Of all the worlds that are beneath that (the eye), He is the lord, as also of the desires of men. Therefore, those that sing to the lyre, sing Him alone and hence they obtain wealth. (6).

Com.—"Sa êsha"—the person in the eye. Of all the words that are below this self with reference to the body, He is the lord, as also of all desires in connection with men. Therefore, those that sing to the lyre, sing Him alone; and because they sing the Lord. therefore, they become endowed with wealth.

अथ य एतदेवं विद्वान्साम गायत्युभौ स गायति सोऽमुनैव स एष ये चामुष्मात्पराञ्चो छोकास्ता ५ श्वाऽप्रोति देवकामा ५ श्व

11011

He who knowing this, sings Sâma, sings to both. Through that (Person in the sun), he obtains the worlds beyond that (sun), and the desires of the gods.

(7).

Com.—One who, knowing this—i.e., knowing the aforesaid god 'udyîtha'—sings a Sâma, then he sings to both the person in the Sun, as well as the person in the eye. The result accruing to such a knower is described. One who knows this obtains the worlds that are beyond that (sun), and also the desires of gods;—that is to say, after having become the god in the sun &c., &c.

अथानेनेव ये चैतस्मादर्वाञ्चो लोकास्ता ५ श्वाऽऽप्नोति मनुष्यका-मा ५ श्व तस्मादु हैवंविदुद्गाता ब्रूयात् ॥ ८॥

कं ते काममागायानीत्येष ह्येत्र कामागानस्येष्टे य एवं विद्वान्सा-म गायति साम गायति ॥ ९॥ And through this (person in the eye), one obtains the worlds that are beneath this (the eye), and also the desires of men. Therefore, verily, the włyńri priest, knowing this, should say the following (to the sacrificer).

(8).

'What desire shall I obtain for thee, by singing?' He becomes capable of obtaining desires by singing, who, knowing this, sings a Sâmu,—yea sings a Sâmu. (9).

Com.—Through this—person in the eye—one obtains the worlds beneath the eye, and also the desires of men;—that is to say, after he has become the person in the eye. Therefore, the what is priest knowing this should address the sacrificer, and ask him "What desire, object, shall I sing out for thee?" since the udatri priest, knowing this, becomes capable of accomplishing a desirable end by means of singing. Who is so capable? One, who knowing this, sings the Sâma. The repetition (in the end) is with a view to indicate the end of the (treatment of) meditation (on the udaftha).

Thus ends the Seventh Khanda of Adhyâya I.

-()----

ADHYA'YA I.

KHANDA VIII.

---0---

त्रयो होद्गीथे कुशला बभूवुः शिलकः शालावत्यश्चेकितायनो दाल्भ्यः प्रवाहणो जैवलिशिति ते होनुरुद्गीथे वे कुशलाः स्मो हन्तोद्गीथे कथां वदाम इति ॥ १॥

There were three (persons) well-versed in ulyitha, Silaka Sâlâvatya, Chaikitâyana Dâlbhya and Pravâhana Jaivali. They said: "We are well-versed in ulyitha; let us have a discussion on ulyitha." (1).

Com.—The syllable 'Om' being capable of being meditated upon in various ways, the sruti introduces another method of its meditation, resulting in the highest (happiness). The story is introduced with a view to make the comprehension (of the subject) easy. "Three", i.e., three in number. 'Hu' signifies tradition "Such is the tradition."—"They were well-versed in the Udgitha"—i.e., efficient in the knowledge of udgitha,—that is to say, among certain persons congregated in a certain place, at a certain time, and for a certain purpose, these were the three versed in it; for, certainly in the whole world, these three alone could not have been knowing the udgitha; and we hear of such persons as Ushasti, Jânasruti, Kaikeya, &c., being almost omniscient. Who were these three? Silaka, the son of Sålåvata,—the son of Chikitåyana, among the descendants of Dålbha (or this person may have been known as the son of two men, Chikitåyana and Dålbha),—and Pravåhana, the son of Jîvali. These three persons said: "We are known to be well-versed in udgitha; therefore, if you all permit, we shall have some discussion on udgitha—i.e., we shall consider the udgitha, in the way of questions and answers." And by a discussion among people versed in it, there would be a destruction of all mistaken notions, appearance of fresh cognitions, and removal of doubts. Therefore, it is advisable to bring together people knowing a subject—such is the signification of the story. We find such meeting of Silaka &c., in the present instance.

तथेति ह समुपविविशः स ह प्रवाहणो जैविलिस्वाच भगव-न्तावप्रे वदतां ब्राह्मणयोर्वदतोर्वाच ५ श्रोष्यामीति ॥ २ ॥

They said 'yes,' and sat down. Then Pravâhana Jaivali said: 'you, sirs, speak first; and I shall listen to the words of two Brâhmanas conversing.' (2).

Com.—Having said "yes", they sat down. Then, inasmuch as a king is more forward (than the rest), Pravâhana Jaivali said to the other two: "Do you both, revered ones, speak first." From the force of the expression "two Brâhmanas" it appears that the speaker was a King (Kshatriya). "I shall listen to what you two say". On account of the addition of "speech", some people take it to imply "words without any sense."

स ह शिलकः शालावस्थैकितायनं दालभ्यम्वाच हन्त त्वा प्र-च्छानीति प्रच्छेति होवाच ॥ ३ ॥

Then Silaka Sâlàvatya said to Chaikitâyana Dàlbhya, 'Well, may I question you?' 'Do question' he said. (3).

Com.—Out of the two thus addressed Silaka Sâlâvatva said to Chaikitàyana Dâlbhya: "If you permit. I shall question you"; and being thus addressed, the other replied, "Do question".

का साम्रो गतिरिति स्वर इति होवाच स्वरस्य का गति-रिति प्राण इति होवाच प्राणस्य का गतिरित्यन्नमिति होवाचानस्य का गतिरित्याप इति होवाच ॥ ४ ॥

- 'What is the essence of Sama?' He said, 'Tune'.
- 'What is the essence of Tune?' He said 'Breath'
- 'What is the essence of Breath?' He said 'Food'
- 'What is the essence of food?' 'Water.'

Com.—Having obtained permission he said: "What is the essence or substratum, or final principle, of Sama? By 'Sâma' here is meant the udgitha, because it is this that, as an object of meditation, forms the subject of the present discourse; and it will be said later on that "udgitha is the highest" &c. Being thus questioned, Dâlbhya said: "Tune,"—because the Sâma consists of tunes; and that of which a certain thing consists, is its essence, or substratum, just as the jar, &c., have clay for their substratum or essence. "What is the essence of Tune?" He replied "Breath,"—inasmuch as tune is accomplished by means of breath; breath is its essence. What is the essence of Breath?" He replied "Food,"—because the breath rests on food, as declared by the Srutis "Breath dies up, without food," and "Food is the string". "What is the essence of food?" He replied "Water",—because food is produced out of water.

अपां का गतिरित्यसों लोक इति होवाचामुष्य लोकस्य का गतिरिति न स्वर्गे लोकमतिनयेदिति होवाच स्वर्गे वयं लोक ५ सामाभिसंस्थापयामः स्वर्गस५ स्ताव५ हि सामेति ॥ ५ ॥

'What is the essence of water?' He said 'That world.'
'What is the origin of that world?' He said 'One ought not to carry (the Sâma) beyond the world of Heaven; we locate the Sâma in the world of Heaven, since Sâma is praised as Heaven?' (5).

Com.—'What is the essence of water?' He said 'That world',—because it is from "that world" (Heaven) that rain is produced. 'What is the essence of that world?'

—being thus questioned, Dâlbhya said: "No one should carry the essence of Sama beyond that world of Heaven. Therefore, we too locate the Sama in the world of Heaven; that is to say, we recognise the Sama as resting in Heaven; inasmuch as Sama is praised as 'Heaven,"—in such Srutis as "The Sama-Vala is the world of Heaven."

त ६ शिलकः शालावत्यश्चेकितायनं दाल्भ्यमुवाचाप्रतिष्ठितं वै किल ते दाल्भ्य साम यस्त्रेताहं ब्रूयान्मूर्धा ते विपतिष्यतीति मूर्धा ते विपतेदिति ॥ ६ ॥

Then Silaka Sâlâvatya said to Chaikitâyana Dâlbhya: "Your Sâma, verily, O Dâlbhya, is not completely established. If now, some one were to say your head shall fall off, surely your head would fall off." (6).

Com.—Silaka Sâlâvatya said to Chaikitâyana Dâlbhya: "Your Sâma is not completely established."—that is to say, "you have not mentioned its final essence, the highest." 'I'a' recalls the scripture (with regard to Sâma), as does also 'Kila'. If some knower of Sâma, not tolerating such inadequate treatment, were, at this time, to say 'since you wrongly know the incomplete Sâma to be completely established, on account of the fault of making such an assertion, your head shall fall off',—then, since you have committed such a fault your head would fall off, undoubtedly; though I do not utter any such imprecation,-such is the meaning. Objection: "If he committed a fault for which his head would fall off, it should have fallen even without another person saving so; and if it did not fall off without such saving, it would not fall off even on some one saying so. Otherwise (if even without a fault one's head could fall off merely on account of some one saying so, then) such assertion by others would bring about the approach of (the results of) actions not performed, and the destruction (of the effects) of those performed." Reply: This objection does not stand; inasmuch as the actions performed, whether good or bad, depend, for the manifestation of their results, upon the agencies of place and time. In the same manner, the ignorance, which is the cause of the falling off of the head, depends upon the agency of another person's declaration.

हन्ताहमेतद्भगवतो वेदानीति विद्धीति होवाचामुष्य छो-कस्य का गतिरित्ययं छोक इति होवाचास्य छोकस्य का गतिरिति न प्रतिष्ठां छोकमित नयेदिति होवाच प्रतिष्ठां वयं छोक स्सामाभिस स्थापयामः प्रतिष्ठास स्ताव हि सामेति ॥ ७॥ "Well then, may I learn this from you, Sir?" He said 'Learn.' 'What is the essence of that world?' He said 'This world.' 'What is the origin of this world?' He said 'One ought not to carry the Sâma beyond this world as its rest. We locate the Sâma in this world as its rest; for Sâma is extolled as rest'. (7).

Com.—Being thus addressed, Dâlbhya said: "Well, may I learn from you on what the Sama rests?" Salavatya replied: "Learn it." "What is the essence or substratum of that world"?—being thus asked by Dâlbhya. Sâlâvatya replied "This world".—since this world supports that world (Heaven) by means of sacrifices, gifts, offerings, &c., as declared in the Sruti: Thus the gods live upon gifts'; and further it is a perceptible fact that this earth is the support of all creatures; therefore, of Sâma also, this world is the rest (or support). Being asked "What is the substratum of this world?" Sâlâvatya said: "One ought not to carry the Sama beyond this world, as its rest; hence, we locate the Sâma in this world, as its rest; because, Sâma is extolled as rest,"—so says the Sruti. "This (Earth) is the Rathantara (Sâma)."

त १ प्रवाहणो जैविक्श्वाचान्तवद्धे किल ते शालावत्य साम यस्त्रेताई ब्रूयान्मूर्घा ते विपतिष्यतीति मूर्घा ते विपतेदिति इन्ताहमेतद्भगवतो वेदानीति विद्धीति होवाच ॥ ८॥ To him said Praváhana Jaivali: "Your Sâma verily O Sâlàvatya, has an end. And if any one were now to say your head shall fall off, surely your head would fall off." "Well then, may I learn this from you sir?" He said "Learn." (8).

Com.—When he had said this, Praváhana Jaivali said to him: "O Sâlâvatya, your Sâma (the Earth) has an end (is perishable)" &c. &c., as before. Then Sâlâvatya said: "Well then, may I learn it from you, sir?." He replied "Learn it." And being thus permitted, Sâlâvatya asked (him).

Thus ends the eighth Khawla of Adhyâya I.

ADHYA'YA I.

KHANDA IX.

अस्य लोकस्य का गतिरित्याकाश इति होवाच सर्वाणि ह वा इमानि भूतान्याकाशादेव समुत्पद्यन्त आकाशं प्रत्यस्तं यन्त्याकाशो ह्येवेभ्यो ज्यायानाकाशः परायणम् ॥ १॥

"What is the essence of this world?" "He said A'kâsa;" for, all these creatures are produced from A'kâsa and return into A'kâsa. Because, A'kâsa is greater than these; therefore A'kâsa is the substratum. (1).

Com.—'What is the essence of this world?' 'A'kâsa', replied Pravâhana,—by A'kâsa is meant the supreme Self, as declared in the Sruti.' 'He is A'kâsa by name." The production or creation of all creatures is Its work; and in it do all creatures become dissolved. As will be declared later on: "It created Light; Light in the Supreme Deity &c. &c." All these creatures—moveable and immoveable—are produced out of A'kâsa in the order of Light, food, &c.,—by its innate energy. "They return into A'kâsa",—i.e., at the time of Universal Dissolution, return to It, in the reverse order. Because A'kâsa is greater than all these creatures, therefore It is the supreme substratum (essence) of all these creatures, at all times.

स एष परोवरीयानुद्गीथः स एषोऽनन्तः परोवरीयो हास्य भवति परोवरीयसो ह लोकाञ्जयति य एतदेवं विद्वान्परोवरीया ५ समुद्रीथमुपास्ते ॥ २॥

This is the udyitha, highest and best; this is endless. He who, knowing this, meditates upon udyitha, the highest and best, has what is highest and best, and he wins the highest and best worlds. (2).

Com.—This is the highest of the high and best of the good, udgitha,—i.e., the fully equipped Supreme Self. Hence It is endless, without an end. One who, thus knowing this to be the highest and best Supreme Self, without an end, meditates upon the highest and best udqitha,—to him accrues the following result: the life of such a knower becomes high and excellent,—this is the visible gain; and the invisible gain is that he wins the high and excellent, gradually improving worlds up to the Brahmic A'kasa. These results accrue to one who, knowing this, meditates upon udqitha.

त ६ हैतमितधन्वा शोनक उदरशाण्डिल्यायोक्त्वोवाच यावत्त एनं प्रजायामुद्गीथं वेदिष्यन्ते परोवरीयो हैम्यस्तावदिसमाँहोके जी-वनं भविष्यति ॥ ३॥

Atidhanvà Saunaka, having taught this to Udara Såndilya, said: "As long as, among your descendants, they will know the wlyitha, their life will be higher and better than ordinary lives." (3).

Com.—And further, knowing this udgitha Atidhanvâ, the son of Sunaka, taught this doctrine of the udgitha to his disciple Udara Sandilya, and said: "So long as, in the line of your descendants, they (your descendants) will know this udgitha, their life will be higher and better than the lives that are ordinarily known.

तथाऽमुष्मिँह्योंके लोक इति स य एतदेवं विद्वानुपास्ते परोव-रीय एव हास्यास्मिँह्योंके जीवनं भवति तथाऽमुष्मिँह्योंके लोक इति लोके लोक इति ॥ ४॥

And so will their state in that other world be.' One. who thus knows and meditates.—his life in this world becomes the highest and best, and so all his state in that other world—yea in that other world.

Com.—"And in the other invisible world, their state will be the highest and best"-so said Atidhanvâ Saunaka to Udara Sândilya. In order to remove the doubt-that 'though such results would accrue to the great ones of old, yet they could not belong to us of this cycle'-it is added that even now, one who knowing this meditates upon the udgitha,—his life in this world will be highest and best; and so will his state be in that other world.

Thus ends the ninth Khanda of Adhyâya 1.

_____ ADHYA'YA I.

KHANDA X.

मटचीहतेष कुरुष्वाटिक्या सह जाययोषस्तिर्ह चाक्रायण इभ्य-प्रामे प्रद्राणक उवास ॥ १ ॥

When these Kurus had been destroyed by thunder and hail, Ushasti Châkrâvana, with his child-wife, lived, in a deplorable condition, in the village of the possessor of elephants. (1).

Com.—In connection with meditation on ulgitha, one ought also to meditate upon the "Prastâva"—"Pratihâra"; and with a view to explain this, the present khanda begins: The story is meant to make the comprehension (of the subject) easier. When the crops in the Kuru country had all been destroyed by thunder and hail, and consequently famine had set in, Ushasti. the son of Châkrâyana, together with his wife who had not reached womanhood, lived in Ibhyagrâma (i.e., the Grâma' or village, belonging to 'Ibhaya' or one who possesses elephants), "in deplorable condition," i.e., arrived at the last stage of deplorability in the house of somebody.

स हेम्यं कुल्मापान्खादन्तं विभिक्षे त५ होवाच । नेतोऽन्ये विद्यन्ते यच ये म इम उपनिहिता इति ॥ २ ॥

He begged food of the possessor of elephants, who was eating beans. He (the possessor) said to him: "I have no other (food) than these, which are put up before me". (2).

Com.—Wandering about in search of food, fearlessly went over to the Master of Elephants who was eating beans of an inferior quality, and begged his food of him. The Master of Elephants said to Ushasti: "I have got no beans save those that are being eaten by me and are impure (or state), that have been thrown into this plate of mine. So, what can I do?" Then Ushasti replied.

एतेषां मे देहीति होवाच तानस्मै प्रददो हन्तानुपानमित्युच्छिष्टं वै मे पीत १ स्यादिति होवाच ॥ ३ ॥

"Give me out of these" he said. He gave them to him. (He said) 'Well, here is water?' He replied: 'I would be drinking something left by another (and hence impure).' (3).

Com.—"Out of these", i.e., these, "give me" he said. These, the Master of Elephants, gave to Ushasti. "Take this water near me to drink"—being thus addressed he (Ushasti) said: "If I will drink out of this. I will be drinking something left by another and hence impure." Being thus addressed, the other said:

न स्विदेतेऽप्युन्छिष्टा इति न वा अर्जाविष्यमिमानखादित्रिति होवाच कामो म उदकपानमिति ॥ ४ ॥

"Are not these also left over and impure?" He replied.
I will not live, if I do not eat these; while as for a drink of water, I can get it whenever I like."

Com.—"Are not these beans also impure?". On this, Ushasti said "If I do not eat these beans, I will not live; whereas I can get a drink of water whenever I like".

The meaning of this is that one, who is endowed with knowledge and fame, and capable of helping himself and others,—if such a one, falling under the aforesaid deplorable condition, should do such a thing (eat unclean food), no demerit touches him. A mean action is faulty, only when it is performed even while there are actions that are not mean, and which would as easily save one's life;—that is to say, under this latter circumstance if some one were to perform such mean actions, being proud of his knowledge, then a fall into hell would be sure to follow. These meanings are implied by the insertion of the word "pradrânaka" (in deplorable condition).

स ह खादिन्वाऽतिशेषाञ्जायाया आजहार साऽप्र एव सुभिक्षा बभूव तान्प्रतिगृह्य निदघो ॥ ९ ॥

Having eaten them, he gave the remainder to his wite. She had eaten before; and having taken them, she kept them away. (5).

Com.—Having eaten them, he gave the remainder to his wife, having been moved to pity for her. She, the child-wife had obtained food, before getting the beans. Still, in keeping with the character of (good women), she did not reject the beans, but took them from her husband's hands, and laid them aside.

स ह प्रातः संजिहान उवाच यद्भतानस्य लभेमहि लभेमहि

धनमात्रा राजाऽसौ यक्ष्यते स मा सर्वेरात्विज्येर्द्वणीतेति ॥ ६ ॥

Next morning, on awaking, he said: "Alas, if I could get something to eat, I would get a little of wealth: The king here is going to perform a sacrifice; and he should appoint me to all the priestly offices." (6).

Com.—He, knowing what she had done, having risen from sleep in the morning, spoke out, within hearing of his wife: "Alas, if I could get even a little to eat, then having eaten it, and become strong enough, I would go and obtain a little wealth, and then we would have a living." He shows the reason of his hope for wealth. "This king, not very far from here, is going to perform a sacrifice". The Atmanepada in "Yakshyate" "is due to the fact of the king being the sacrificer to whom its result would accrue." And the king, having found a fit person in me, would appoint me for the performance of all the priestly duties in connection with the sacrifice."

तं जायोवाच हन्त पत इम एव कुल्माषा इति तान्खादित्वाऽ मुं यज्ञं विततमेयाय ॥ ७ ॥

His wife said to him: 'O my lord, here are those beans'. Having eaten them, he went over to the sacrifice that was being performed. (7)

Com.—He having said this, his wife said to him:

"Well, O my lord, take these beans, which you had made over to me." Having eaten them, he went over to the king's sacrifice, which was being performed (or laid out) by the priests.

तत्रोद्गातृनास्तावे स्तोष्यमाणानुपोपविवेश स ह प्रस्तोतारमु-

There sat down, in the orchestra, near the Udgátri priests, who were going to sing out hymns of praise. He said to the Prastotri-priest. (8).

Com.—Having gone there, he went over to the Udgatri-priests in the orchestra—i.e., that in which praises are sung and sat near them. Having sat down he said to the Prastotri-priest.

प्रस्तोत्तर्या देवता प्रस्तावमन्वायत्ता तां चेदविद्वानप्रस्तोष्यासि मूर्या ते विपातिष्यतीति ॥ ९ ॥

O Prastotri, if, without knowing the Deity that belongs to the Prastâva, thou dost sing it, thy head will tall off.

(9).

Com.—"O Prastotri, &c." are meant to attract attention. The Deity that belongs to the singing of the Prastâva,—if, without knowing this Deity of the Prastâva, thou dost sing it, before me, who know it, then thy head will fall off. "Before me"—This is added because if the head were to fall off even in his absence, then such persons, as know only the action (and not the secret of its Diety &c.,) would not be entitled to any actions. And this would not be right; inasmuch as we do find actions being performed by persons knowing only the action (and not its meaning &c.,); and secondly, because we find the scuti laying down the "Southern Path" (for those who do not know the secret meanings); for certainly, if persons ignorant of the secret meaning were not entitled to actions, then the sruti would mention the "Northern Path" only. Nor can it be said that the "Southern Path" is mentioned with regard to only such actions as are prescribed in the scrutis (the "Northern Path" referring to actions prescribed in the Veda);—because of such srutis, as "by means of sarifices and gifts, &c." And further "after having been thus exhorted by me" clearly shows that the ignorant are debarred from priestly duties, only in the presence of a learned person, and not in every case, such as those of Aquihotra, actions prescribed in stutis, study of the Vedu and the like;—because we find the Vedu permitting certain such actions (to be performed by the uninitiated). Thus it is established that even those that know only the form of the action, are entitled to its performance.

एवमेवोद्गातारम्वाचोद्गातर्या देवतोद्गीथमन्वायत्ता तां

चेदविद्वानुद्रास्यासे मूर्धा ते विपतिष्यतीति ॥ १० ॥

एवमेव प्रतिहर्तारमुवाच प्रतिहर्तया देवता प्रतिहारमन्वायत्ता तां चेदविद्वान्प्रतिहरिष्यिस मूर्घा ते विपतिष्यतीति ते ह समा-रतास्तृष्णीमासांचित्रिरे ॥ ११॥

In the same manner, he addressed the Udgâtri priest: 'O Udgâtri, if without knowing the Deity that belongs to udgitha thou dost sing it, thy head will fall off'. In the same manner, he addressed the Pratihartri-priest. 'O Pratihartri, if without knowing the Deity that belongs to the Pratihâra, thou shouldst sing, thy head will fall off'. They stopped and sat down in silence. (10. 11).

Com.—In the same manner, he addressed the Udgatri priest and the Pratihartri-priest. The rest is similar to what has gone before. "They"—the Prastotri-priest &c.—" stopped," i.e., desisted from their respective actions, for fear of their heads falling off, and sat down in silence, without doing anything else.

Thus ends the tenth Khunda of Adhyaya I.

ADHYA'YA I.

--0---

KHANDA XI.

अथ हैंनं यजमान उवाच भगवन्तं वा अहं विविदिषाणीत्यु-षस्तिरस्मि चाक्रायण इति होवाच ॥ १॥

Then the sacrificer said to him: 'I should like to know you, Sir.' He said: 'I am Ushasti Châkrâ-yana.' (1).

Com.—After this, the sacrificer, the king, addressed him: 'I should like to know you, respected sir'. Being thus addressed, he said: 'I am Ushasti Châkrâyana, a name, which you may have heard.'

स होवाच भगवन्तं वा अहमेभिः सर्वेरार्त्विज्येः पर्येषिषं भ-गवतो वा अहमवित्त्याऽन्यानवृषि ॥ २ ॥

He said: 'Sir, I looked for you, for all these priestly offices; and not finding you I appointed others.' (2).

Com.—The sacrificer said: "Indeed, I did hear of you, as endowed with many qualities, and hence I looked out for you for all these priestly duties; and having searched you, and not having found you I have appointed others."

भववा ६ स्वेव मे सर्वेरार्त्विज्येंरिति तथेत्यथ तर्ह्येत एव सम-तिसृष्टाः स्तुवतां यावत्त्वेभ्यो धनं दद्यास्तावन्मम दद्या इति तथेति ह यजमान उवाच ॥ ३॥

But now, Sir, please take up all priestly duties. 'Very well; let these, with my permission, sing the hymns of praise. But as much wealth as you give to them, so much give to me also.' The sacrificer said 'very well.' (3).

Com.—"Even now. Sir, do please accept the priestly offices". Being thus addressed, Ushasti said: "Very well, but let these,—that had been appointed by you previously.—being gladly permitted by me, sing the hymns of praise. But you must do this. This wealth that you give to all of these Prastotri and the rest,—that much wealth you must give to me." Being thus addressed, the sacrificer said "very well."

अथ हैनं प्रस्तोतोपससाद प्रस्तोत्तर्या देवता प्रस्तावमन्वाय-त्ता तां चेदविद्वान्प्रस्तोष्यिस मूर्घा ते विपातिष्यतीति मा भगवान-वोचत्कतमा सा देवतेति ॥ ४ ॥

Then the Prastotri-priest approached him (and said) "Sir, you said to me, 'O Prastotri, if, not knowing the Deity belonging to the Prastâva, thou dost sing it, thy head will fall off';—which is that Deity?" (1).

Com.—Having heard this assertion of Ushasti, the Prastotri-priest respectfully approached Ushasti. "O Prastotri &c, you had said to me. Now, which is the Deity that belongs to the Prastava."

प्राण इति होवाच सर्वाणि ह वा इमानि भूतानि प्राणमेवा-भिसंविशन्ति प्राणमभ्युज्जिहते सेवा देवता प्रस्तावमन्वायत्ता तां चेदविद्वान्प्रास्तोष्यो मूर्घा ते व्यपतिष्यत्तथोक्तस्य मयेति ॥५॥

He said 'Breath.' For all these creatures merge into Breath alone, and from Breath alone do they rise. This is the Deity belonging to the Prastava; and if, without knowing this, thou hadst sung it, thy head would have fallen off, after thou hadst been warned by me. (5).

Com.—Being thus asked, he said "Breath." It is true that Breath is the Diety of Prastâva; How? Because all creatures, moveable and immoveable, merge into Breath, at the time of dissolution, and again from Breath do they rise, at the time of the creation. Therefore this is the Deity belonging to the Prastâva; and if, without knowing thus, thou hadst sung it, thy head would surely have fallen off, after thou hadst been warned by me that 'thy head will fall off'. Therefore you did well to desist from the action prohibited by me. Such is the meaning.

अथ हैनमुद्गातोपससादोद्गातर्या देवतोद्गीथमन्वायत्ता तां चेदविद्वानुद्गास्यसि मूर्घा ते विपतिष्यतीति मा भगवानवोचत्कतमा सा देवतेति ॥ ६ ॥

Then the Udgatri-priest approached him: "You, sir. told me, 'Udgatri, if, not knowing the Deity belonging to the udgitha, thou dost sing it, thy head will fall off'.
—which is that Deity?" (6).

Com.—The Udgâtri-priest asked "which is that Deity, which belongs to the udgîtha?"

आदित्य इति होवाच सर्वाणि ह वा इमानि भूतान्यादित्य-मुचैः सन्तं गायन्ति सेषा देवतोद्गीथमन्वायत्ता तां चेदविद्वानुद-गास्यो मूर्वा ते व्यपतिष्यत्तथोक्तस्य मयेति ॥ ७ ॥

He said 'The sun'; for, all these creatures sing to the sun when It stands on high; this is the Deity belonging to the ndqîtha; and if, without knowing this, thou hadst sung it, thy head would surely have fallen off, after thou hadst been warned by me. (7).

Com.—Being thus asked, he said "The sun." Because all these creatures sing praises of the sun, when It is high above. (The sun is this Deity) Because of the similarity of ut (in "Uchchaiti" and "udyitha"), just as from the similarity of pra (Prāna is the Deity of Prastâva). This is the Deity, as before.

अथ हैनं प्रतिहर्तीपससाद प्रतिहर्तयी देवता प्रतिहारमन्वायत्ता तां चेदविदान्प्रतिहारिष्यसिमूर्घा ते विपतिष्यतीति मा भगवानवो-चत्कतमा सा देवतेति ॥ ८॥

Then the Pratihartri-priest approached him: 'You, sir, told me, O Pratihartri, if, without knowing the Deity that belongs to the Pratihara, thou dost sing it, thy head will fall off',—which, then, is that Deity. (8).

Com.—In the same manner the Pratihartri-priest approached him, and asked him "which is the Deity that belongs to the Pratihâra?"

अन्नामिति होवाच सर्वाणि ह वा इमानि भूतान्यन्नमेव प्रतिहर-माणानि जीवन्ति सैषा देवता प्रतिहारमन्वायत्ता तां चेदविद्वान्प्र-त्यहारेष्यो मूर्घा ते व्यपतिष्यत्तथोक्तस्य मयेति तथोक्तस्य मयेति

11911

He said 'Food'; for, all these creatures live, when they partake of food; this is the Deity that belongs to the Pratihâra; and if, without knowing this, thou hadst sung it, thy head would surely have fallen off, after thou hadst been warned by me. (9).

Com.—Being thus asked, he said "Food"; because all these creatures live, while they are taking food for themselves. This the Deity that belongs to the Pratibuara. The rest up to "warned by me" is similar to what has gone before. The meaning of the whole of this Khanda is that one ought to meditate upon the Deities of Prastêva, Udyîtha and Pratihâva, in the shape of Breath, Sun and Food respectively.

——o——
Thus ends the Eleventh Khanda of Adhyâya I.

ADHYA'YA I.

KHANDA XII.

अथातः शौव उद्गीथस्तद्ध बको दाल्म्यो ग्लावो वा मैत्रेयः स्वाध्यायमुद्धवाज ॥ १ ॥

Now then, the adjitha of the dogs. Baka Dâlbhya or Glâva Maitiêya went out for the study of the Veda .(1). ... Com.—In the last Khanda has been described the deplorable state brought about by want of food,—a state characterised by the eating of impure and stale food. Hence in order to avoid this, with a view to the acquirement of food, the srâti now begins the treatment of the adjitha as seen by the dogs. Baka, the son of Dâlbhya or Glâva, the son of Maitiêyi—the particle 'cha' has a collective force, signifying that Bâka was the son of two fathers (and we accept this interpretation) because, as in actions, so in objects also, there can be no alternative views; and further we also have such scatis as "with two names, belonging to two families," and we do actually come across, cases of people entitled to cakes from both families. Or the word "Va" may be simply taken as facilitating the reading of the Veda, its signification being the disregard of the Rishi, due to the mind being engrossed in the udgitha. In order to study the Veda, he went outside the village, near a river, in some quiet place. Since we find the singular number in the verb "Udravrāja," therefore we conclude that Baka and Glāva are two names of one and the same Rishi. The meaning is that since the sage awaited the tune of the udgitha of the gods, his study must be bred to be urged by a desire to obtain food.

तस्मै श्वा श्वेतः प्रादुर्बभूव तमन्ये श्वान उपसमेखोचुरत्रं नो भगवानागायत्वशनायाम वा इति ॥ २ ॥

Before him a white dog appeared; and other dogs gathering round him, said: 'Sir, sing food for us, we are hungry.' (2).

Com.—Pleased with his study, the Deity or the Sage, taking the form of a white dog, appeared before him, with a view to help him. This white dog was surrounded by other smaller dogs; and they told him "Sir. please sing—i.e., sing and obtain—food for us". This (allegorically) implies that Speech and the rest, partaking of food in the wake of Breath, spoke to the Breath in the mouth. Since these,—speech, &c.—being satisfied with the study, would naturally help this—Breath in the mouth,—therefore it is only proper that we should interpret the sentence as we have done. "Because we are hungry."

तान्होत्राचेहैत मा प्रातरूपसमीयातेति तद्भ बको दारुभ्यो ग्लावो त्रा मैत्रेयः प्रतिपालयांचकार ॥ ३ ॥

He said to them: 'Come to me here to-morrow morning'. Baka Dâlbhya or Glâva Maitreya watched (them.) (3).

Com.—Having been thus addressed, the white dog said to the smaller dogs: "Come to me to-morrow in this very place." In 'Upasamiyata' the length of the vowel is a vedic peculiarity, or it may be an incorrect reading. The appointment of morning as the time is with a view to show that what he will sing is rightly done in the morning; because the sun, who is the supplier of food, is not in our front in the afternoon. In the same place Baka watched his coming.

ते ह यथेवेदं बहिष्यवमानेन स्तोष्यमाणाः स ५ स्ब्धाः सर्प-न्तीत्येवमाससृपुस्ते ह समुपविश्य हिंचकुः ॥ ४ ॥ Just as the priests, that are going to sing praises by the Bahishparamâna hymn, move along joined to one another, so did the dogs move along. Having sat down, they began to pronounce 'He is.' (4).

Com.—The dogs did come to the Sage.—just as in a certain sacrifice, the Udgâtri-priests, that are going to sing the 'Bahishparamâna' hymn, move along joined to one another; so did the dogs move along, holding in the mouth one another's tail. And having thus moved along, they sat down and uttered 'Him.'

ॐ३ मदा३ मों३ पित्रा३ मों३ देवो वरुणः प्रजापतिः सविता२ऽत्रमिहा२ऽऽहरदन्नपते३ऽन्नमिहा२ऽऽहरा२ऽऽहरो३िमिति

11911

Om, let us eat! Om, let us drink! Om, may the God Varuna, Prajâpati, Savitri bring us food. Lord of food, bring hither food, yea bring it. (5).

Com.—"Om, let us cut! Om, let us drink!" "Deva" (god), so called because He shines; "Varuna," because he rains in the world; "Prajāpati," because He protects the people; "Savitri" is one who brings forth everything, i.e., the Sun. May the Sun, having so many names, bring us food. Having done this, they again said: "O Lord of food!"—being the producer of all food, He is called its 'Lord', inasmuch as without his ripening influence, no food is produced for any living creatures: hence He is called "Lord of food." "Bring hither food for us, yea bring it."—The repetition is meant to show regard for the subject.

Thus ends the twelfth Khanda of Adhyâya I.

ADHYA'YA. I

--0--

अयं वाव लोको हाउकारो वायुर्हाइकारश्चन्द्रमा अथकारः । आत्मेहकारोऽग्निर्राकारः ॥ १ ॥

This world is the syllable ' $h\hat{a}u$ '; the Air is the syllable ' $h\hat{a}i$ '; the moon is the syllable 'atha'; the Self is the syllable 'iha'; the fire is the syllable 'i'. (1).

Com.—Inasmuch as meditation upon objects of devotion is connected with parts of Sāma, what are explained next are other forms of meditation, spoken of collectively, with reference to the syllables of the 'Stobha,' which is another part of Sāma; and they are all spoken of together, because all of them form parts of the Stobha. "This world is the syllable 'hâu", which is a Stobha known in the 'Rathantara' Sâma; and this earth is the Rathantara; hence on account of this similarity of relations, one ought to meditate upon the Stobler · hâu', as this world. "The Air is the syllable ' hâi',-The syllable 'hâi' is known in the 'Vâmadêrya' Sâma; and the connection of Air and Water is the origin of the "Vâmadêvya" Sâma; hence, on account of this similarity, one ought to meditate upon the syllable 'hâi'. as the Air. "The moon is the syllable 'atha'" i.e., one ought to meditate upon the syllable 'atha' as the moon: inasmuch as this world rests on food, and the moon consists of food; and also because of the similarity of the presence of that and a in both (that in athat is the same as the da in 'Chandra'). "The Self is the syllable 'ih'". The Stobha 'iha' signifies perceptibility, hence the Self is called 'iha'; and 'iha' is a Stobha. On account of this similarity (one ought to meditate upon the syllable 'ilia' as the Self. "The Fire is 'i':" because of the similarity consisting in the fact of all Samas containing an ' $\hat{\iota}$ ' being sacred to fire.

आदित्य ऊकारो निहव एकारो विश्वे देवा औहोयिकारः प्रजा-पतिर्हिकारः प्राणः स्वरोऽत्रं या वाग्विराट् ॥ २ ॥

The Sun is the syllable 'u'; Invocation is the syllable ' \hat{e} '; the $Visc\hat{e}d\hat{e}ras$ are the syllable 'auhoyi'; $Praj\hat{a}pati$ is the syllable 'hin': Breath is svara; the food is ' $y\hat{a}$ '; the syllable ' $r\hat{a}g$ ' is $Vir\hat{a}t$. (2).

Com.—The sun is the syllable 'u', because people sing to the sun when He is high above (uchchaih), and the Stobba is 'u'; since in the Sâma sacred to the sun, the Stobha is 'u', therefore the sun is the syllable 'u'. "The Invocation is the Stobha ' ê'; since people call or invoke by saying 'come' (chi), and there is similarity (with the syllable 'ê'). "The Visvêdêras are the syllable 'auhoyi"; because this Stobha is found in the Sâma sacred to the Visvédéras. "Prajápati is the syllable · Hin.'" because Prajapati is indefinable, and the syllable 'hin' too is indistinct, "Breath is svara", 'svara' is a Stobla; and Breath is 'svara', because it is the source of 'srara' (tune). "Food is 'yâ'", i.e., the Stoblea 'ya' is food, because of the similarity lying in the fact of this world moving by means of food. The Stobha 'vaq is 'Virat' which may mean 'food' or a particular Deity of that name; because this Stobla is found in the Sâma sacred to Virât.

अनिरुक्तस्त्रयोदशः स्तोभः संचरो हुंकारः ॥ ३ ॥

Undefinable is the thirteenth Stobha—viz., the indefinite syllable 'hun'. (3).

Com.—" Undefinable"—because not distinct, and hence incapable of saying whether it is this or that; and hence "sanchara"—"indefinite"—i.e., having only a shape assumed (according to the exigencies of different sections of the Veda.) Which is this? The thirteenth syllable 'hun'. As this is indistinct, it ought to be meditated upon without having its peculiarity defined:—such is the sense of the sentence.

दुग्धेऽस्मे वाग्दोहं यो वाचो दोहोऽन्नवाननादो भवति य एतामेवर् साम्नामुपनिषदं वेदोपनिषदं वेद ॥ ४ ॥

Speech yields to him the milk, which is the milk of speech itself, and he becomes rich in food and an eater of food—one who thus knows the secret doctrine of the Sâmas—yea' knows the secret doctrine of the Sâmas."

(4).

Com.—The result of meditating upon the letters of the Stobba are now mentioned. "Speech yields the milk &c." has already been explained. One who knows, as explained above, the secret doctrine of the syllables of Stobba, which forms part of Sāma, to him accrues the result mentioned. The repetition is to point out the end of the Adhyāya; or it may be taken as pointing to the end of the explanation of a particular form of meditation on a particular part of Sāma.

Thus ends the thirteenth Khanda of Adhyâya I.

Thus ends the First Adhyâya of the Chhândogya Upanishad.

The Chha'ndogya Upanishad.

ADHYA'YA II

--- () ---

KHANDA I

--() --

ॐ समस्तस्य खलु साम्न उपासन ६ सापु । यत् खलु साधु तत् सामेत्याचक्षते यदसाधु तदसामेति ॥ १ ॥

Meditation upon the whole $S\hat{a}ma$ is good. Whatever is good, that they call $S\hat{a}ma$; and what is not good $AS\hat{a}ma$. (1).

Com.—The section beginning with "one ought to meditate upon the syllable Cm' &c.," has laid down the meditation upon parts of Sama, leading to manifold results; and subsequently the meditation upon the letters of the 'Stobha' has been laid down. Because this too is connected with certain parts of the Sama. And now the Srati begins a treatment of the meditations upon the whole Sama; and it is only proper that after the treatment of the meditation upon parts, there should follow that of the meditation of the whole, "of the whole &c."—i.e. of the Sama endowed with all its parts, fivefold and sevenfold. "Khalu" serves only as an ornament of speech. Since meditation upon the whole Sama is said to be good, the word "good" should not be taken as deprecating the aforesaid meditations. Objection: "But it seems as if goodness, not belonging to the former ones, is mentioned here as belonging to the present one," Not so: inasmuch as the sentence concludes by asserting that "Sama is good," The word "Sâdlar" means good, "How do you know (that Sâma is good)?" It is explained: Whatever is known, among people, as good or irreproachable, is called 'Sâma' by intelligent people; and what is otherwise is called 'Asâma'.

तदुताप्याहुःसाम्नेनमुपागादिति साधुनैनमुपागादिखेव तदाहुः । असाम्नेनमुपागादिखसाधुनैनमुपागादिखेव तदाहुः ॥ २ ॥

Thus they say the approached with $8\hat{a}ma'$, where they say the approached him well; and they say the approached him with $As\hat{a}ma'$, when they say the approached him not well. (2).

Com.—In the matter of differentiating good and bad, people say—'he approached this King or subordinate lord with Sâma'—Meaning by the', one from whom people feared ill-treatment of the king. And ordinary people, in giving expression to the same thought, say, the approached him well', when they find a person not imprisoned or in any other way badly treated. In a contrary case, where they find imprisonment or some other ill-treatment, they say, 'he approached him with Asâma'—i.e., 'he treated him badly.'

अथोताप्याहुः साम नो बतेति यत्साधु भवति साधुबतेत्येव तदाहुः । असाम नो बतेति यदसाधु भवत्यसाधु बतेत्येव तदाहुः

11 3 11

And they say 'this verily is $S\hat{a}ma$ for us', where they say 'this is good for us', when anything is good. And they say 'this is $As\hat{a}ma$ for us', where they say 'this is not good' when anything is not good. (3).

Com.—And when they say that 'this that we know is Sāma for us, wholly', they mean to say that it is good, when anything is good for them. When the contrary is the case, they say 'this is Asāma for us',—meaning that it is not good, when anything is not good for them. Hence it is established that the words "Sāma" and "Sādhu" (good) are synonymous.

स य एतदेवं विद्वान् साधु सामेत्युपास्तेऽभ्याशो ह यदेन ५ साधवो धर्मा आ च गच्छेयुरुप च नमेयुः ॥ ४॥

If any one, knowing this thus, meditate upon the Sâma as good, all good qualities would quickly approach him, and accrue to kim. (4).

Com.—Hence, if any one meditate upon the Sama as endowed with goodness, knowing the complete Sama to be good,—to him belongs the following result: quickly do approach such a meditator, all good qualities, in keeping with the Sruti and Smritis; and they not only approach him, but also accrue to him,—i.e., become his own objects of experience and enjoyment.

Thus ends the First Khanda of Adhyâya II.

ADHYA'YA II.

--0--KHANDA II

लोकेपु पश्चविधय सामोपासीत । पृथिवी हिंकारोऽग्निः प्रस्ताबो-ऽन्तरिक्षमुद्गीथय आदित्यः प्रतिहारो चौर्निधनमित्यूर्ध्वेषु ॥ १॥

Among the worlds one ought to meditate upon the Sâma as fivefold: the Earth as the syllable hin, the Fire as the prastâva, the Sky as the udgitha, the Sun as the pratihâra, and the Heaven as the nidhana. This among the upper.

(1).

Com.—Now, what are those complete Sâmas, looked upon as good, that are to be meditated upon? These are now laid down: Among the worlds, fivefold de." Objection: "That they should be meditated upon as the worlds, and again as good, is a contradiction". It is not so: inasmuch as the word "good", signifying the cause, extends also to the effects in the shape of the worlds; just as clay does, to its modifications, jar and the rest. Hence, just as wherever we have a notion of the jar, it is always followed by the notion of clay; so, in the same manner, the notion of the worlds is always followed by a notion of the "good"; inasmuch as the world &c are the effects of Righteousness &c. Though, from the above, it would follow that the character of the aforesaid cause belongs equally to Brahma and Righteousness (since both are equally denoted by the word "good"); yet, here it must be admitted that it is Righteousness alone that is signified by the word "good"; inasmuch as we find people using the word "good" in the sense of righteous, in such sentences as 'One who performs righteous deeds is good'. Objection: "Since the notion of the cause invariably follows that of the effect in the shape of the worlds; therefore the notion of the 'good' would follow by itself; and there is no need of any such injunction as that 'one meditates upon Sama as the good'". Not so: because such notion is got at only through scriptures: since in all cases, only such righteous deeds are to be performed, as are laid down in the scriptures, and never those that are not so laid down, even though they be righteous. "One ought to meditate upon Samu, as the good, fivefold—i.e., in five forms,—among the worlds. How? "The earth as the syllable hin". The locative in "lokeshu" is to be changed into the nominative, in interpretation ("one ought to meditate upon the worlds as the fivefold Sâma") and the meaning of the subsequent sentences is: One ought to think of the Earth as the syllable hin.'-i.e., one ought to meditate upon the Earth as the syllable hin'. Or the Locative in 'lokeshu' may be transferred to 'hinkâra'.--the meaning, in this case, being one ought to meditate upon the syllable hin, thinking it to be the Earth.' Among these "the Earth as the syllable hin", because both are the first (the Earth among the worlds and 'hin' among the Sama syllables). "Fire as the prastâva"—because actions are performed in the Fire. "Prastâva" is the Bhakti (a technicality in connection with Sâma). "The sky as the udgitha" -because the sky is called 'gagana', and the letter 'ga' occurs in "udgitha" also. "The sun as the pratihâra"—inasmuch the sun faces all beings; and each of these thinks 'he is facing me.' "The Heaven as the nidhana "-inasmuchas those that depart from this world are deposited (nidhiyantê) in Heaven. among the upper "-i.e., the meditation upon the Sâma, as the worlds among those that are above (in the ascending line.)

अथाऽऽश्वतेषु । चौहिंकार आदित्यः प्रस्तावोऽन्तरिक्षमुद्गीथोऽग्निः प्रतिहारः पृथिवी निधनम् ॥ २ ॥

Now among the lower: The Heaven as the syllable hin, the sun as the prastâva, the sky as the udgitha, the Fire as the pratihâva, the earth as the nidhana. (2).

Com.—Next, we have laid down the meditation upon the fivefold Sâma, among the lower worlds (i.e., in the descending line): The worlds are endowed with motion &c; and hence since these are mobile, hence we have here the meditation upon Sâma as mobile also. Hence among the worlds in the descending line, (one ought to meditate upon) "the Heaven as the syllable hin"—because both are first. "The sun as the prastâva"—because it is only when the sun has risen that the actions of creatures are begun (to be performed). "The sky as the wlgitha", as before. "Fire as the pratihâra"—because Fire is carried here and there (pratiharana) by creatures. "The earth as the nidhana"—because people that come back to the Earth are deposited here (on the Earth).

कल्पन्ते हास्मै लोका ऊर्ध्वाश्चाऽऽवृत्ताश्च य एतदेवं विद्वा ५ लो-केप पञ्चविध ५ सामोपास्ते ॥ ३ ॥

The worlds in the ascending as well as the descending lines belong to him, who, knowing this thus, meditates upon the fivefold Sâma among the worlds.

Com.—Now follows the result of such meditation: The worlds, both ascending and descending,—i.e., endowed with motion backward and forward—become fit for him; i.e., come to be fit objects for his enjoyment, for one, who knowing this thus, meditates, among the worlds, upon the complete fivefold Sâma as the "good". Such is the construction to be followed everywhere—both in the case of the fivefold and the sevenfold (Sâma).

Thus ends the Second Khanda of Adhyâya II.

ADHYA'YA II.

KHANDA III

वृष्टों पञ्चविधय सामोपासीत । पुरोवातो हिंकारो मेधी जायते स प्रस्तावो वर्पति स उद्गीथो विद्योतते स्तनयति स प्रतिहारः

11 8 11

One ought to meditate upon the fivefold Sâma, i.e., the rain: the preceding wind as the syllable hin, the advent of the cloud as the praslâva, the raining as the udgitha, and the lightning and thunder as the pratihâra."

Com.—One ought to meditate upon the fivefold Sâma in the rain:—the immediate sequence of Rain is due to the fact of the continuance of the worlds being due to Rain. "The preceding wind as the syllable hin"—by "rain" here is meant all the processes from the preceding wind to the cessation of the rain; just as the name "Sâma" belongs to all beginning from the syllable hin down to the nidhana. Hence is the preceding wind the syllable hin,—both being the first. "The advent of the cloud as the prastâva"—because it is well-known that the rains begin only when the clouds have appeared, during the rainy season. "The raining as the udgitha"—because of importance. "The lightning and the thunder as the pratihâra"—because these are diffused.

उद्गृह्णाति तन्निधनम् । वर्षाते हास्मे वर्षयति ह य एतेदवं विद्वान्तृष्टो पञ्चविध< सामोपास्ते ॥ २ ॥

The cessation as the nidhana. It rains for him, and he brings on rain,—one, who knowing this thus, meditates upon the fivefold Sâma in rain. (2).

Com.—The cessation as the nilhana—because both are ends. Next follows the result of such meditation. It rains for him, whenever he desires, and he brings rain, even when there is no rain,—one who &c. &c., as before.

Thus ends the Third Khanda of Adhyaya II.

ADHYA'YA II.

- ()---

KHANDA IV-

--()--

सर्वास्त्रप्सु पञ्चविध ६ सामोपासीत । मेघो यत्संप्लवते स हिं-कारो यद्वर्षित स प्रस्तावो याः प्राच्यः स्यन्दन्ते स उद्गीथो याः प्रतीच्यः स प्रतिहारः समुद्रो निधनम् ॥ १॥

One ought to meditate upon the fivefold Sama, in all the waters: the gathering of clouds as the syllable hin, the raining as the prastâva, those that flow to the East as the udgitha, those that flow to the West as the pratihâva, and the Ocean as the nidhana. (1).

Com.—One ought to meditate upon the firefold Sama, in all the waters—since all reservoirs of water owe their origin to rain; therefore they follow after it. The collecting of the clouds, one over the other, into one thick mass, is called "gathering of the clouds," and this, the beginning of the water, is the syllable hin. The raining is the prastâva—because after rain, the water begins to spread all over. Those that flow to the east are the udgitha,—being the more important. And those that flow to the west are the pratihâra,—because the particle 'prati' is common (to pratihâra and pratichi). The ocean is the nidhana—because the water is deposited therein.

न हाप्सु प्रैट्यप्सुमान्भवति य एतदेवं विद्वान्सर्वास्वप्सु पञ्च-विध ९ सामोपास्ते ॥ २ ॥

He does not die in water, he becomes rich in water, —one who, knowing this thus, meditates upon the five-fold $S\hat{a}ma$, in all the waters. (2).

Com.—" He does not die in water"—i.e., if he does not wish it; and he becomes rich in water,—such is the result of the aforesaid meditation.

Thus ends the Fourth Khanda of Adhyâya II.

ADHYA'YA II.

KHANDA V.

ऋतुषु पञ्चविध ६ सामोपासीत वसन्तो हिंकारो प्राष्मः प्रस्ता-वा वर्षा उद्गीथः शरत्प्रतिहारो हेमन्तो निधमम् ॥ १॥

One ought to meditate upon the fivefold Sâma, among the Seasons;—the Spring as the syllable hin, the Summer as the prastâva, the Rains as the udgitha, the Autumn as the pratibora, and the Winter as the nidhana.

(1).

Com.—One ought to meditate upon the firefold Sâma among the seasons—since the order of the seasons depends upon what has gone before; hence the sequence. The spring is the syllable hin,—because both are first. The summer is the prastâva—because the gathering of barley &c for the rains is begun in the summer. The Rains as the udgitha—because of importance. The autumn is the pratihâra—because the sick and the dead are struck down during this season. The winter is the nidhana—because many creatures die during this.

कल्पन्ते हास्मा ऋतव ऋतुमान्भवति य एतदेवं विद्वानृतुषु पञ्चविध्य सामोपास्ते ॥ २ ॥

The seasons belong to him, he becomes rich in seasons,—one who, knowing this thus, meditates upon the fivefold $S\hat{a}ma$ in the seasons. (2).

Com.—Result. The seasons belong to him—i.e., afford for him all objects of enjoyment, according to the season. And he also becomes rich in the objects of enjoyment, afforded by the seasons.

Thus ends the Fifth Khanda of Adhyâya II.

ADHYA'YA II.

KHANDA VI.

पशुषु पञ्चविधय सामोपासीत । अजा हिंकारोऽवयः प्रस्तावो गाव उद्गीथोऽश्वाः प्रतिहारः पुरुषो निधनम् ॥ १ ॥

One ought to meditate upon the fivefold Sâma, among the animals: the goats as the syllable hin, the sheep as the prastâva, the cows (as the udgîtha, the horses as the pratihâra, the man as the nidhana." (1).

Con.—" One ought to meditate upon the fivefold Sama, among animals"—when the seasons are in right order, animals prosper hence the sequence. The goats are the syllable hin—because they are the most important or because they are the first; so says the Sruti: "The goats were the first among animals". The sheep are the prastâva—because we find the sheep accompanying the goats. The cows are the wdgitha—because of importance. The horses are the pratihâra—because they carry men. The man is the nidhana—because the animals depend upon the man.

भवन्ति हास्य पशवः पशुमान्भवति य एतदेवं विद्वान्पशुषु पञ्चविधः सामोपास्ते ॥ २ ॥ Animals belong to him, he becomes rich in animals.—one who, knowing this thus, meditates upon the fivefold Sāma, among animals. (2).

Com.—Result: "Animals belong to him, he becomes rich in animals"—i.e., he becomes endowed with the effects of the possession of animals—viz.. the enjoyment and the giving away of these.

Thus ends the Sixth Khanda of Adhyâya II.

ADHYA'YA II.

KHANDA VII.

-- () ---

प्राणेषु पञ्चिविधं परोवरीयः सामोपासीत । प्राणोहिकारो वा-क्प्रस्तावश्चक्षुरुद्गीथः श्रोत्रप्रतिहारो मनो निधनम् । परोवरीया ५ सि वा एतानि ॥ १ ॥

One ought to meditate upon the highest of the high fivefold \hat{Sama} , among the senses: smell as the syllable hin, speech as the prastâra, eye as the pulgitha, ear as the pratihâra, mind as the nidhana. These, verily, are one greater than the other. (1).

Com.—"One ought to meditate upon the highest firefold Sama, among the senses"—that is to say, one ought to-meditate upon the Sama, thinking it to be the senses, one greater than the other. Smell is the syllable hinbecause among the successively greater, this is the first. Speech is the prastava-because everything is eulogised by means of speech. And speech is greater than smell, inasmuch as speech can describe even imperceptible objects, whereas smell can cognise the odour that is presented to it. The eye is the whyitha;inasmuch as the eye illumines a greater number of objects than speech, the eye is greater than speech; and this is the udqîtha, because of importance. The ear is the pratibûra, -because it is contracted; and this is greater than the eye, inasmuch as it hears on all sides. The mind is the nidhana, because it is in the mind that are deposited all the objects cognised by the different senses, as their respective objects of enjoyment; and the mind is greater than the ear, because the mind pervades over the objects of all the senses; as a matter of fact, even such objects as transcend the other senses, are amenable to the mind. For these aforesaid reasons these senses are, one greater than the other.

परोवरीयो हास्य भवति परोवरीयसो ह लोकाञ्जयति य एतदेवं विद्वान्प्राणेषु पञ्चविधं परोवरीयः सामोपास्त । इति तु पंचविधस्य ॥ २ ॥ What is greater than the great belongs to him, and he wins such worlds as are greater than the great,—one who meditates upon the highest of the high \hat{Sama} , among the senses. This of the fivefold. (2).

Com.—One who meditates upon the highest of the high \hat{Sama} , thinking it as aforesaid, his life becomes greater than the great, as has already been explained. Thus has been explained the meditation upon the five-fold \hat{Sama} . This is added in order to attract attention to the sevenfold \hat{Sama} , treated of in the next Khanda.

Thus ends the Seventh Khanda of Adhyûya II.

ADHYA'YA II.

. ()----

KHANDA VIII.

अथ सप्तिविधस्य । वाचि सप्तिविधः सामोपासीत । यिकाच वाचो हुमिति स हिंकारो यत्प्रेति स प्रस्तावो यदेति स आदिः

11 8 11

Next of the sevenfold: One ought to meditate upon the sevenfold Sâma in speech; whenever there is the syllable "hum" in speech, that as the syllable hin, the syllable 'pra' as the prast îra, and the syllable 'â' as the 'â' i or first. (1).

Com.—Now begins the treatment of the meditation, as good, of the complete sevenfold Sâma. The locative in Tâchi' is to be explained as before (in 'lokeshu'),—the meaning being that one ought to meditate upon the sevenfold Sâma, thinking it to be speech. The particular form of speech. Thum' is the syllable hin,—because of the common letter 'ha'. The word 'pra' is the prastâva,—because of the common letter 'pra'. The syllable 'â' is the â'li,—because of the common letter 'a'. By 'âsli' is meant the syllable 'Om', because this is the beginning of all.

यदुदिति स उद्गीथो यत्प्रतीति स प्रतिहारो यदुपेति स उपद्रवो यन्नीति तन्निधनम् ॥ २ ॥

Ut as the udgitha, prati as the pratihâra, upa as the upudrava, and ni as the nidhana. (2).

Com.—Ut is the udgitha—because the udgitha begins with ut; prati is the pratihâra,—because of the common syllable prati; upu is the upadrava,—because upadrava begins with upu; ni is the nidhana,—because of the common letter ni.

दुग्धेऽस्मे वाग्दोहं यो वाचो दोहोऽन्नवानन्नादो भवति य एत-देवं विद्वान्वाचि सप्तविध समोगास्ते ॥ ३ ॥ For him speech yields milk, which is the milk of speech, and he becomes rich in food and eater of food,—one who, knowing this thus, meditates upon the sevenfold Sâma in speech.

(3).

Com.—Speech yields milk &c., has already been explained.

Thus ends the Eighth Khanda of Adhyâya II.

ADHYA'YA II.

KHANDA IX.

अथ खल्वमुमादिख ५ सप्तिविध ५ सामोपासीत । सर्वदा समस्तेन साम । मां प्रति मां प्रतीति सर्वेण समस्तेन साम ॥ १ ॥

One ought to meditate upon the sevenfold $S\hat{a}ma$ in the sun: He is $S\hat{a}ma$, because He is always the same. He is $S\hat{a}ma$, because He is equal, (all men thinking) 'He faces me', 'He faces me.' (1).

Com.—In the first Adhyâya, among the fivefold, it has been explained how one ought to think of the members of Sâma as the sun. What is laid down now is that one ought to think of the sun as the complete Sâma, with due regard to its members, and then he ought to meditate upon the sevenfold Sâma. How does the sun have the character of Sama? Reply: the reason for the sun being Sâma is the same as the sun being the udgi-And, what is that reason? Inasmuch as the sun is always the same, never undergoing any increase or decrease, He is Sama; and as he produces in the minds of all men, the idea that 'he faces me' 'he faces me;' hence the sun is Sâma. And thus being equally looked upon by all men, he is Sâma, on account of his equality. And from the assertion of the similarity of this with the Udgitha Bhakti, it follows that there is a similarity also as to the syllable hin &c., as in the case of the worlds &c; and for this reason the text does not give any reasons for the syllable hin &c (with regard to the sun). On the other hand, it would not have been easy to comprehend why the sun is $S\hat{a}ma$; hence the reason in the shape of equality, has been clearly explained.

तस्मित्रिमानि सर्वाणि भूतान्यन्वायत्तानीति विद्यात्तस्य यत्पुरो-दयात्स हिंकारस्तदस्य पशवोऽन्वायत्तास्तस्मात्ते हिंकुर्वन्ति हिंकार-भाजिनो ह्येतस्य साम्रः ॥ २ ॥

One ought to know that all beings depend upon Him. What He is before rising, that is the syllable hin; on this depend the animals. Therefore they utter 'hin',—partaking as they do of the hinkûra of this Sâma. (2).

Com.—On this sun—on different parts of Him—all these beings, mentioned hereafter, are dependent,—i.e., they live by Him: this one ought to know. How? Because the form that the sun has before rising—viz., the form of Dharma—, that is the Bhakti consisting of the syllable hin. And the only similarity between the two is that that form of the sun, which is the syllable hin,—on this the animals, the cow &c., are dependent; i.e., they live by this. And because it is so, therefore, before sunrise, the animals utter 'hin'; hence these partake of the hinkara of this Sâma;—that is to say, they exist so, because they are only capable of worshipping this particular Bhakti.

अथ यत्प्रथमोदिते स प्रस्तावस्तदस्य मनुष्या अन्वायत्ता-स्तस्मात्ते प्रस्तुतिकामाः प्रश्र साकामाः प्रस्तावभाजिनो ह्येतस्य

साम्नः ॥ ३॥

That which appears when He is first risen is the prastâva; on this men are dependent. Hence they are desirous of eulogy and desirous of praise, partaking as they do of the prastâva of this Sâma. (3).

Com.—The form of the sun, that appears when he has just risen, —viz., the form of the Sun—is the prastâva of the Sâma, and on this the men are dependent—as before. Therefore they desire eulogy and praise. Because they partake of the prastâva of this Sâma.

अथ यत्संगववेलाया ५ स आदिस्तदस्य वया ५ स्यन्वायत्तानि । तस्मात्तान्यन्तरिक्षेऽनारम्बणान्यादायाऽऽत्मानं परिपतन्त्यादिभा-जीनि ह्येतस्य साम्नः ॥ ४ ॥

And what appears at the sangara time, that is A'di. On this, the birds are dependent. Therefore they hold themselves without support, in the sky, and fly about,—partaking as they do of the A'di of this Sâma. (4).

Com.—At the sangura time—at the time when the rays are put forth; or, at the time when the calves are allowed to be with the cows,—the form of the sun that appears at that time, that is the A'di Bhakti—i.e., the syllable 'Om'. And on this, the birds are dependent. And because it is so, therefore the birds hold themselves in the sky without support—i.e., having themselves for their only support—and fly about. Hence they partake of the A'di of this Nâma,—on account of the common letter 'â'.

अथ यत्सम्प्रति मध्यंन्दिने स उद्गीथस्तदस्य देवा अन्वायत्ता-स्तस्मात्ते सत्तमाः प्राजापत्यानामुद्गीथभाजिनो ह्येतस्य साम्नः ॥ ५॥

That which appears just at midday is the udgitha. On this the Devas are dependent. Hence they are the best among the offsprings of Prajapati,—partaking as they do of the udgitha of this Sâma. (5).

Com.—That which appears precisely at midday is the Udgithu Bhakti,—and on this the Devas are dependent; because the sun shines best at that time. Therefore they are the best among the offsprings of Prajapati,—partaking as they do of the udgithu of this Sâma.

अथ यदूर्व्वे मध्यन्दिनात्प्रागपराह्वात्स प्रतिहारस्तदस्य गर्भा अन्त्रायत्तास्तरमात्ते प्रतिहृता नावपद्यन्ते प्रतिहारभाजिनो ह्येतस्य साम्रः ॥ ६ ॥

That which appears after midday and before afternoon, that is the pratihâra. On this all germs are dependent. Therefore, being conceived, they do not fall down;—partaking as they do of the pratihâra of this Sâmu.

(6).

Com.—That form of the sun which appears after midday, and before afternoon,—that is the pratihâra. On this the germs are dependent. * Hence it is that after they have been once held up (in conception) by means of the Pratihâra Bhakti of the sun, they do not fall down,—even though there is a way (for them to fall through). Because they partake of the pratihâra of this Sâma.

of this ८वंक्यः. अथ यद्ध्वमपराह्णात्प्रागस्तमयात्स उपद्रवस्तदस्याऽऽरण्या अन्वायत्तास्तस्मात्ते पुरुषं दृष्ट्वा कक्षण् श्वभ्रमित्युपद्रवन्त्युपद्रव-भाजिनो ह्येतस्य साम्नः ॥ ७॥ That which appears after afternoon and before sunset, is upadrava. On this the wild animals are dependent. Therefore, when they see a man, they run to the forest as a safe place;—partaking as they do of the upadrava of this Sâma. (7).

Com.—That form of the sun which appears after afternoon and before sunset is upadrava; and on this the wild animals are dependent. Hence when they see a man, they run away to the forest, as a place free from dangers. And since they run away on seeing a man. therefore they partake of the upadrava of this Sama.

अथ यत्प्रथमास्तामिते तिन्नधनं तदस्य पितरोऽन्वायत्तास्तस्मा-त्तान्निदधति निधनभाजिनो ह्येतस्य साम्न एवं खल्वमुमादित्य ५ सप्तविध ५ सामोपास्ते ॥ ८॥

That which appears first, on sunset is the nidhana. On this the Pitris are dependent. Hence people deposit them,—partaking as they do of the nidhana of this Sâma. Thus does one meditate upon the sevenfold Sâma, in the sun. (8).

Com.—The form that appears on sunset, when the sun has gone out of sight, is the nidhana; and on this the Pitris are dependent; hence people deposit these—i.e., put them away upon the kusa, in the shape of father, grandfather &c., or lay down pindas for them. And since these are connected with the nidhana, therefore they partake of the nidhana of this Sâma. Thus does one meditate upon the sevenfold Sâma, in the form of the sun divided, in the above manner, into seven parts. And one who meditates thus becomes identified with the sun—this, as putting down the result—has to be supplied from without.

Thus ends the Ninth Khanda of Adhyáya 11.

ADHYA'YA II.

KHANDA X.

--0---

अथ खल्त्रात्मसंमितमतिमृत्यु सप्तविध< सामे।पासीत । हिंकार इति त्र्यक्षरं प्रस्तिवै इति त्र्यक्षरं तत्समम् ॥ १ ॥

Now one ought to meditate upon the sevenfold Sâma which is uniform in itself, and leads beyond death. Hinkâra has three syllables, and 'Prastâva' has three syllables. That is equal. (1).

Com.—Death is the sun. And inasmuch as He measures the world by means of time in the form of day and night,—in order to cross beyond this, one ought to meditate upon Sima, which is now taught. "Now" i-i.e., after this, meditation upon the Sima with regard to the sun and death is what is "uniform in itself"-i.e., is measured by the equality of its own parts, or measured by the uniformity of the Supreme Self,—and "leads beyond death" being, as it is, a means of conquering death. Just as the letters of the udgitha have been described, in the first Adhyâya, as fit objects of meditation as the udgitha; so here also, the letters that make up the names of the sevenfold Bhakti, are to be taken equally by threes; and being thus assumed to be Sama on account of equality, these (triads) become fit objects of meditation, as here explained. By means of this meditation, one approaches death, by means of a number of letters which are amenable to death (viz., $21:7\times3$.) and by means of the remaining letters, he creates a way of crossing beyond this Death, the sun. "One ought to meditate upon the sevenfold Sama, which leads beyond death". Such a Sâma is that which goes beyond death by means of the extra letter. And of this the first three letters, are 'hinkara', and the other three-lettered name of Bhakti is "Prastâva"; and this is equal to the former name.

आदिरिति द्यक्षरं प्रतिहार इति चतुरक्षरं तत इहैकंतत्स-मम् ॥ २ ॥

A'di has two syllables; "Pratihâra" has four syllables. Taking over one from this, it is equal. (2).

Com.—A'di has two syllables. "A'di" is the syllable "Om", which serves to make up the number of sevenfold Sama. "Pratilâra" has four syllables." Now one syllable, taken out of this latter, is thrown into the former; and thus they become equal.

उद्गीथ इति त्र्यक्षरमुपद्रव इति चतुरक्षरं त्रिभिक्षिभिः समं भवत्यक्षरमितिशिष्यते त्र्यक्षरं तत्समम् ॥ ३ ॥

Udgitha has three syllables, and 'Upadrava' has four syllables. Three and three become equal. One syllable is left; and this becoming tri-syllabic, becomes equal.

Com.—Udgitha has three syllables, and 'Upadrava' has four syllables. Three and three become equal; one syllable remains behind. Thus when this discrepancy presents itself, in order to restore the uniformity of the Sâma, a devise is laid down. Though one, this syllable becomes tri-syllabic; and hence it becomes equal.

निधनमिति त्र्यक्षरं तत्सममेव भवति तानि ह वा एतानि द्वाविश्व शतिरक्षराणि ॥ ४॥

Nidhana has three syllables; and this is uniform. These indeed are the twenty-two syllables. (4).

Com.—Nidhana has three letters; and this is uniform. Thus then, having accomplished the Sâma through the uniformity of three syllables, the said syllables are counted. These indeed are the twenty-two syllables of the names of Bhaktis.

एकवि ए रात्यादित्यमामोत्येकवि ५ शो वा इतोऽसावादियो द्वा-वि ५ शेन परमादित्याज्जयति तन्नाकं तद्विशोकम् ॥ ५ ॥

By the twenty-one, one reaches the sun; for the sun verily is the twenty-first from this (world). With the twenty-second he conquers what is beyond the sun. That is bliss; that is freedom from pain. (5)

Com.—Then by the twenty one—the number of syllables,—one reaches the sun, i.e., Death. Because the sun is the twenty-first, in number, from this world. "The twelve months, the five seasons (taking the whole of winter as one), and the three worlds (make up twenty); and the sun is the twenty-first"—says the Sruti.

And by the remaining, the twenty-second syllable, one conquers that which is beyond, and higher than, Death, i.e., the sun. Now, what is it which is higher than the sun? "That is bliss"—that is to say, that where there is an absolute negation of absence of pleasure, i.e., Bliss, pure and simple. And since all pain is based upon death; therefore it is also "freedom from pain"—i.e., freedom from all mental agony. One conquers this (by means of the twenty-second syllable).

आप्रोति हाऽऽदित्यस्य जयं परो हास्याऽऽदित्यजयाज्जयो भवति

य एतदेवं विद्वानात्मसंमितमतिमृत्यु सप्तविध सामोपास्ते सामो-पास्ते ॥ ६ ॥

He obtains victory over the sun; and to him accrues a victory higher than the victory over the sun,—one who, knowing this thus, meditates upon the sevenfold $S\hat{a}ma$, uniform in itself, which leads beyond death,—yea one who meditates upon $S\hat{a}ma$. (6).

Com.—The upshot of what has gone before is laid down. He obtains victory over the sun by means of the (twenty-first syllable) and to him accrues a victory higher than the victory of the sun, which latter is amenable to death,—such higher victory accruing to him by means of the twenty-second (syllable). All this belongs to him "who knowing this thus &c."—as already explained. The repetition (one who meditates upon $S\hat{a}ma$) is meant to point out the fact of the treatment of the sevenfold $S\hat{a}ma$ ending here.

Thus ends the Tenth Khanda of Adhyáya II.

ADHYA'YA II

KHANDA XI.

मनो हिंकारो वाक्प्रस्तावश्वक्षुरुद्गीथः श्रोत्रं प्रतिहारः प्राणे। निधनमेतद्गायत्रं प्राणेषु प्रोतम् ॥ १ ॥

Mind is the syllable hin, speech is Prastâva, the eye is Udyitha, the ear is Pratihâra, the Breath is nidhana; this is the Gâyatra Sâma, interwoven in the senses. (1).

Com.—In the above sections has been described the meditation of the fivefold and sevenfold Sama, without the mention of the specific name of any of these. Now are described the other meditations of the Sama, as bringing about certain specified results, and as bearing certain specified names. The Gayatra and the rest are to be employed in actions, in the same order in which they are here explained. "The mind is the syllable hin"—because of the functions of all sense organs, that of the mind comes first. And since speech follows it next, it is Prastava. The eye is Udqitha—because of its importance. The ear is Pratihava—because it is closed. The Breath is Nidhava—because during sleep all the aforesaid become deposited in the Breath. This is the Gâyatra Sâma interwoven in the senses.

स य एवमेतद्गायत्रं प्राणेषु प्रोतं वेद प्राणीभवति सर्वमायुरेति ज्योग्जीवति महान्प्रजया पशुभिर्भवति महान्कीर्त्या महामनाः स्या-

त्तद्रतम् ॥ २ ॥

He who thus knows this Gâyatra, interwoven in the senses, keeps his senses, reaches the full life, lives well, becomes great with children and cattle, and great with fame. And the rule is 'be high-minded.' (2)

Com.—(This is Gâyatra) because the gâyatri hymn has been eulogised (in Srutis) as among Prânas. 'He who thus knows this Gayatra interwoven in the senses, keeps his senses',—i.e., none of his senses loses its activity. "Reaches the full life"—'a hundred years is the full life of man' as says the Sruti. "Lives well"—literally brightly. He becomes great with children and fame. And one who meditates upon the Gâyatra Sâmu follows the rule "be high-minded"—i.e., 'never be mean'.

Thus ends the Eleventh Khanda of $Adhy\hat{a}ya$ II

ADHYA'YA II.

KHANDA XII.

--0--

अभिमन्यति स हिंकारो धूमो जायते स प्रस्तावो ज्वलित स उद्गीथोऽङ्गारा भवन्ति स प्रतिहार उपशाम्यति तन्निधन स्सर् शाम्यति तन्निधनमेतद्रथन्तरमग्गो प्रोतम् ॥ १॥

That one rubs is the syllable hin; that the smoke rises is the Prastâva; that it burns is the Udgîtha; that embers are produced is the Pratihâra; that it goes down is the Nülhana; that it is completely extinguished is the Nülhana; this is the Rathantara interwoven in fire.

(1).

Com.—That one rubs is the syllable hin—because it happens first. That the smoke rises from the fire is the Prastâva—because of its immediate sequence. That it burns is Udgitha,—because the burning fire is connected with the offerings, and, as such, is the most important. The embers that there are are the Pratihâra,—because the embers are closed and collected. "Going out" signifies a slight remnant of the fire; whereas "Extinguishing" is complete cessation,—and this Nidhana, because both signify End. This is the Rathantara interwoven in Fire; and is sung when Fire is being produced by rubbing.

स य एवमेतद्रथन्तरमग्नी प्रोतं वेद ब्रह्मवर्चस्यन्नादो भवति सर्वमायुरेति ज्योग्जीवति महान्प्रजया पशुभिभेवति महान्कीर्स्या न प्रसङ्ख्यामाचामेन्न निष्ठीवेत्तद्रतम् ॥ २ ॥

He who thus knows the Rathantara interwoven in Fire becomes radiant with Brâhmic light, and endowed with good appetite; he reaches full life, lives well, becomes great with children and cattle, and great with fame; the rule is 'do not sip water or spit before the Fire'. (2).

Com.—He who &c., as before—"Radiant with Brâhmic light"—" Brâhmic light" is the radiance arising from a proper study of the vedas; mere light is common brightness. "Annâda" is one who has a good appetite. One should not sip or eat anything before Fire, nor should one spit out phlegm &c—such is the rule to be observed (by one who meditates upon the Rathantara Sâma as interwoven in Fire.

Thus ends the Twelfth Khanda of Adhyâya 11.

ADHYA'YA II

-- o---KHANDA XIII

--()--

उपमन्त्रयते स हिंकारो ज्ञपयते स प्रस्तावः स्त्रिया सह शेते स उद्गीथः प्रति स्त्रीं सह शेते स प्रतिहारः कालं गच्छिति तिन-धनं पारं गच्छिति तिन्नधनमेतद्वामदेव्यं मिथुने प्रोतम् ॥ १ ॥

स य एवमेतद्वामदेव्यं मिथुने प्रोतं वेद मिथुनीभवित मिथुना-न्मिथुनात्प्रजायते सर्वमायुरेति ज्योग्जीवित महान्प्रजया पशुभि-भवित महान्कीर्त्या न कांचन परिहरेत्तद्वतम् ॥ २ ॥

This the Vâmadêcya Sâma interwoven in pair.

Thus ends the Thirteenth Khanda of Adhyaya II.

ADHYA'YA II

KHANDA XIV

---()---

उद्यन्हिकार उदितः प्रस्तावो मध्यंदिन उद्गीथोऽपराह्वः प्रति-हारोऽस्तं यन्निधनमेतद्वृहदादित्ये प्रोतम् ॥ १ ॥

When rising, it is the syllable hin; when risen it is Prustâva; at midday it is Udgitha; in the afternoon, it is Prutihāra; when setting, it is Nidhana. This is the Brihat, interwoven in the sun. (1).

Com.—The rising sun is the syllable hin,—because it is the first to be seen. The risen sun is Prastâva,—because it is this that is eulogised at sacrifices. At midday it is Udyitha,—because it is the most important. In the afternoon, it is Pratikûra,—because at this time the cattle are driven into their homes. The setting sun is Nidhana,—because, at this time, all creatures are confined within their homes. This is the "Brihat" interwoven in the sun,—because this Sâma has got the sun for its deity.

स य एवमेतद्भृहदादिखे प्रोतं वेद तेजस्व्यन्नादो भवति सर्व-मायुरेति ज्योग्जीवति महान्प्रजया पशुभिर्भवति महान्कीर्खा तपन्तं

न निन्देत्तद्रतम् ॥ २ ॥

He who thus knows this Brihat as interwoven in the sun, becomes refulgent and endowed with good appetite; he reaches full life, lives well, becomes great with children and cattle, great in fame. The rule is one should not decry the burning sun. (2).

Com.—"He who &c." as before. The rule is one should not decry the burning sun.

Thus ends the Fourteenth Khanda of Adhyâya II.

ADHYA'YA II.

KHANDA XV.

--0-

अभ्राणि संप्लबन्ते स हिंकारो मेघो जायते स प्रस्ताबो वर्षति स उद्गीधो विद्योतते स्तनयति स प्रतिहार उद्गृह्णाति तिन्नधन-मेतद्वेरूपं पर्जन्ये प्रोतम् ॥ १॥

That the mists gather is the syllable hin; that the cloud rises is Prastava; that it rains is Udgitha; that it lightens and thunders is Pratihara; that it ceases is Nidhana. This is the Vairapya interwoven in the cloud. (1).

Com.—"Abhra" (literally) is that which holds water; "Mégha" is that which sprinkles water. The rest is clear. This is the Sâma named "Vairûpya", interwoven in the cloud; because the cloud has manifold shapes, on account of the mists &c.

स य एवमेतद्वेरूपं पर्जन्ये प्रोतं वेद विरूपा श्र श्र सुरूपा श्र श्र पश्नवरुन्धे सर्वमायुरेति ज्योग्जीवति महान्प्रजया पशुभिर्भवति महान्क्रीर्था वर्षन्तं न निन्देत्त इतम् ॥ २ ॥

He who thus knows this Vairūpya as interwoven in the cloud, obtains cattle, badly shaped as well as handsome; he reaches full life, lives well, becomes great with children and cattle, and great with fame. The rule is one should not decry it raining.

(2)

Com.—He obtains ugly as well as handsome cattle—sheep &c, The rule is one should not decry it while raining.

Thus ends the Fifteenth Khanda of Adhyaya 11.

ADHYA'YA II.

KHANDA XVI

वसन्तो हिंकारो प्रीष्मः प्रस्तावो वर्षा उद्गीयः शरूप्रतिहारो हमन्तो निधनमेतद्वैराजमृतुषु प्रोतम् ॥ १॥

Spring is the syllable hin, Summer is Prastâva, the Rains is Udgitha, the Autumn is Pratihâra, the Winter is Nidhana. This is the Vairāja interwoven in the seasons. (1).

Com.—The Spring is hin-because it is the first. The Summer is Prastâva &c &c, as before.

स य एवमेतद्वेराजमृतुषु प्रोतं वेद विराजित प्रजया पशुभि.

र्ब्रह्मवर्चसेन सर्वमायुरेति ज्योग्जीवति महान्प्रजया पशुभिभेवति महान्क्षीर्स्यतून निन्देत्तद्वतम् ॥ २ ॥

He who thus knows this Vairāja as interwoven in the seasons, shines with children, cattle and Brāhmic radiance; he reaches full age, lives well, becomes great with children and cattle and great with fame. The rule is 'one should not decry the seasons.' (2).

Com.—One who knows this Tairaja Nama as interwoven in the seasons, shines:—just as the seasons shine in their respective properties; so does one knowing the above, shine with children &c. The rule is 'one should not decry the seasons.'

Thus ends the Sixteenth Khanda of Adhyaya II.

ADHYA'YA II.

KHANDA XVII.

पृथिवी हिंकारोऽन्तरिक्षं प्रस्तावो चौरुद्गीथो दिशः प्रतिहारः समुद्रो निधनमेताः शक्तर्यो छोकेषु प्रोताः ॥ १ ॥

The Earth is the syllable hin; the Sky is Prastâva; the Heaven is Udgîtha; the Quarters are Pratihàra; the ocean is Nidhana. These are the Sakvari interwoven in the worlds.

Com.—The Earth is him &c &c as before. "Sakvarr" is always used in the plural just like Révali; and these are interwoven in the worlds.

स य एवमेताः शक्तर्भी छोकेषु प्रोता वेद छोकीभवति सर्वमा-युरेति ज्योग्जीवति महान्प्रजया पशुभिर्भवति महान्कीर्त्या छोकान्न निन्देत्तद्वतम् ॥ २ ॥

One who knows these Sakwari interwoven in the worlds, becomes possessed of the worlds; he reaches full life, lives well, becomes great with children and cattle, and great with fame. The rule is one should not decry the worlds.

Com.— Possessed of the worlds—i.e., endowed with the results peculiar to the worlds. The rule is 'one should not decry the worlds.'

Thus ends the Seventeenth Khanda of Adhyaya II.

ADHYA'YA II.

KHANDA XVIII.

अजा हिंकारोऽवयः प्रस्तावो गाव उद्गीथोऽश्वाः प्रतिहारः पुरुषो निधनमेता रेवत्यः पशुपु प्रोताः ॥ १ ॥

The goats are the syllable hin: the sheep are Prastâva: the cows are Vilgitha: the horses are Pratihâra; the man Nidham. These are the Revali interwoven in the animals. (1).

Com.—The goats are hin &c. &c. &c. as before "interwoven in animals".

स य एवमेता रेवत्यः पशुषु प्रोता वेद पशुमान्भवित सर्व-मायुरेति ज्योग्जीवित महान्प्रजया पशुभिर्भवित महान्कीर्त्या पशून निन्देत्तद्वतम् ॥ २ ॥

He who thus knows these Recati as interwoven in animals, becomes rich in animals; he reaches full age. lives well, becomes great with children and cattle, and great with fame. The rule is one should not decry the animals. (2).

Com.—The rule is 'one should not decry the animals.'

Thus ends the Eighteenth Khanda of Adhyâya II.

ADHYA'YA II.

KHANDA XIX.

--0--

छोम हिंकारस्वक्प्रस्तावो मा ५ समुद्रीथोऽस्थिप्रतिहारो मज्जा-निधनमेतद्यज्ञायज्ञीयमङ्गेषु प्रोतम् ॥ १ ॥

The hair is the syllable hin: the skin is Prastâva; the flesh is Vagitha; the bone is Pratihira; the marrow is Nidhana. This is the yajnâyajnîya, interwoven in the members of the body. (1).

Com.—The hair is the syllable him, because of all parts of the body, it is the first. The skin is the Prastâva,—because it is next (to hair.) The flesh is Udgilla,—because of its importance. The bone is Pratihâra,—because it is closed up. The marrow is the Nidhana,—because it is the last. This is the Sâma, named "Yajnâyajniya," interwoven in the members of the body.

स य एवमेतद्यज्ञायज्ञीयमङ्गेषु प्रोतं वेदाङ्गीभवति नाङ्गेन विहू-र्छिति सर्वमायुरेति ज्योग्जीवति महान्प्रजया पशुभिर्भवति महान्कीर्त्या संवत्सरं मज्ज्ञो नाश्चीयात्तद्वतं मज्ज्ञो नाश्चीयादिति वा ॥ २ ॥

He who thus knows this Vajnayajniya, as interwoven

in the members of the body, becomes equipped with limbs, he is not crippled in any limb; he reaches full life, and lives well, great in children and cattle. great in fame. The rule is one should not eat marrow for a year, or that one should not eat marrow at all. (2).

Com.—Becomes equipped with limbs—i.e., with all his limbs complete; and he does not become crippled in any limb,— lame or without hands. For the period of a year one should not eat marrow i.e., meat. The plural number in majjuo is meant to include jish as well. Or that one should never eat marrow at all. Such is the rule.

Thus ends the Nineteenth Khanda of Adhyaya 11.

ADHYA'YA II.

KHANDA XX

-0--

अग्निर्हिकारो वायुः प्रस्ताव आदित्य उद्गीथो नक्षत्राणि प्रतिहार-श्रन्द्रमा निधनमेतद्राजनं देवतासु प्रोतम् ॥ १ ॥

Fire is the syllable hin: the Air is Prastâva: the Sun is Udgitha: the Stars are the Pratihara, and the Moon is Nidhama. This is the Râjana interwoven in the deities. (1).

Com.—Fire is the syllable hin,—because it occupies the first place. Air is Prastâva,—because both are next (to the former two). The sun is Udgitha,—because of its importance. The stars are Pratihâra,—because they are collected together. The moon is Nidhana,—because the sacrificers migrate into it, at death. This is the Râjana, as interwoven in the deities,—since the deities are effulgent beings.

स य एवमेतद्राजनं देवतासु प्रोतं वेदैतासामेव देवताना ५ सल्डोकता ५ साष्ट्रिता ५ सायुज्यं गच्छिति सर्वमायुरेति ज्योग्जीवित महान्प्रजया पशुभिभविति महान्कीर्त्या ब्राह्मणान्न निन्देत्तद्रतम्॥२॥

He who thus knows this Rajana as interwoven in the deities, obtains the same world or the same prosperity, as, and union with, these deities; he reaches full life, lives well, and becomes great with children and cattle, great in fame. The rule is one should not decry the Braitmanas. (2).

Com.—The result accruing to one knowing this is mentioned. He obtains the same world, the same prosperity as, and union with, these very deities. Fire and the rest. The word "or" must be taken as understood here: "obtains the same world" or &c &c. Because there is a difference in results, due to difference in the ideas of the agent; and also because it is not possible for all these three to accrue collectively. The rule is that one should not decry the Brâhmanas;—because of such srutis as "The Brâhmanas are the perceptible deities &c," the decrying of the Brâhmana would be decrying of the deities themselves.

Thus ends the Twentieth Khanda of Adhyâya II.

ADHYA'YA II

KHANDA XXI

त्रयी विद्या हिंकारस्त्रय इमे लोकाः स प्रस्तावोऽग्निर्वायुरादित्यः स उद्गीथो नक्षत्राणि वया ५ सि मरीचयः स प्रतिहारः सर्पा गन्ध-र्वाः पितरस्तिन्धनमेतत्साम सर्वस्मिन्प्रोतम् ॥ १ ॥

The triadic knowledge is the syllable hin; these three worlds are the $Frast \hat{a} v a$; the Fire, Air and Sun are the Udgitha; the stars, the birds and the rays are the $Pratih \hat{a} r a$; the serpents, the Gandharvas, and the Fathers are the Nidhana. This is the $N\hat{a} m a$, interwoven in everything. (1).

Com.—"The trustic knowledge is the syllable hin".— The sequence of triadic knowledge to the Fire—Sâmu and the rest is due to the sruti passages which mention it as being the effect of Fire &c. 'The syllable Hin'—because it is the first of all the duties imposed upon men. These three worlds—following upon the aforesaid, as being the effects thereof—are the Prastava. Fire &c are ndyitha, because of their importance. The stars &c are Pratihâra,—because they are held together. Serpents &c are Nidhana—because of the letter dha being common. This is the Sâma—without any other specific name—a collection of Sâmas, interwoven in everything; because the triadic knowledge is everything. The Bhaktis of Sâma Hin &c, are to be meditated upon as triadic knowledge and the rest. The meaning of all that has gone before is also that in whatever object the Sâma is interwoven, it is to be meditated upon as that object. Because these meditations serve to purify Actions just like the clarified butter.

स य एवमेतत्साम सर्वस्मिन्प्रोतं वेद सर्व ५ ह भवति ॥ २॥

One who thus knows this Sama as interwoven in everything becomes everything. (2).

Com.—The result accruing to one who knows the Sâma with regard to all things is that "he becomes everything"—which must be taken to mean that he becomes identified with everything); because it is only when there has been no such identification, and the deities occupy the various quarters that there is any chance of offerings reaching them.

तदेष श्लोको यानि पञ्चधा त्रीणि त्रीणि तेभ्यो न ज्यायः परमन्यदस्ति ॥ ३ ॥

Hence this verse: 'there are the fivefold three; greater than these, there is nothing else besides.' (3).

Com.—To the same effect there is the following verse: The "three"—the triadic knowledge and the rest—that have been explained to be fivefold, through division into the syllable hin &c.—than these five triads there is nothing greater; and besides these, nothing else exists; inasmuch as all things are included therein.

यस्तद्वेद स वेद सर्व % सर्वा दिशो बलिमस्मे हरन्ति सर्व-मस्मीत्युपासीत तद्रतम् तद्रतम् ॥ ४॥

He who knows that knows everything. All the quarters offer him gifts. That 'I am everything.' so must be meditate: that is his rule,—yea that is his rule. (4).

Com.—One, who knows the $S\hat{a}ma$, consisting of everything, as explained above, knows everything,—that is becomes omniscient. All the quarters—i.e., persons and deities residing in all regions—offer to such a knower objects of enjoyment. That 'I am everything,' so must be meditate upon the $S\hat{a}ma$; this alone is his rule. The repetition is meant to point to the fact of the treatise on $S\hat{a}ma$ -meditation having ended here.

Thus ends the Twenty-first Khanda of Adhyaya II.

ADHYA'YA II

KHANDA XXII.

विनर्दि साम्नो वृणे पशन्यमित्यग्नेरुद्गाथोऽनिरुक्तः प्रजापते-र्निरुक्तः सोमस्य मृदु श्रक्ष्णं वायोः श्रक्ष्णं बळवदिन्द्रस्य क्रीश्चं बृहस्पतेरपध्वान्तं वरुणस्य तान्सर्वानेवोपसेवेत वारुणं त्वेवं वर्जयेत् ॥ १ ॥

Of the Sama, I seek the high-sounding one, as good for cattle'—this is the song sacred to Agni, the undrined one to Prajapati, the defined one to Soma, the soft and smooth to Voyn, the smooth and strong to Indra, the herm-like to Brihaspati, and the dull to Varuna. Let a man employ all these, but avoid the one sacred to Varuna. (1).

Com.—In connection with Nâma meditation, the Text now lays down a few instructions with regard to the richness of the varieties of Nâma, as belonging to the radyâtri,—inasmuch as each variety is accompanied by a definte specific result. "High-sounding"—i.e., a song having the high tone of the voice of a bull; and this is related to Nâma, and good for cattle; and this song has got Agni for its deity and I seek this song,—so thinks a certain sacrificing Udgátri. The one which is undefined—i.e., not specified as being similar to any particular sound, is a song having Prajúpati for its deity,—because Prajúpati himself is of an undefined form. The "defined" or distinct one is a song, having Soma for its deity. The soft and smooth song has Viya for its deity. The "smooth" and "strong"—i.e., that which is accompanied by much effort—is a song sacred to Indra. That which 'heron-like'—i.e., like the sound of the heron—is sacred to Briliuspati. The "dull"—i.e., the one similar to the sound of a broken brass vessel—is a song sacred to Varana. One ought to employ all these, avoiding, however, that which is sacred to Varana.

अमृतत्वं देवेम्य आगायानीत्यागायेत्स्वधां पितृम्य आशां मनु-ष्येम्यस्तृणोदकं पशुभ्यः स्वर्गे लोकं यजमानायान्नमात्मन अगा-यानीत्येतानि मनसा ध्यायन्नप्रमत्तः स्तुवीत ॥ २ ॥

'May I sing out immortality for the Devas',—thus should one sing. 'May I sing out Scatha for the Fathers, hope for the men, grass and water for animals, heaven for the sacrificer, and food for myself'—thus reflecting, in his mind on all these, he ought to sing out praises carefully. (2).

Com.—'May 1 sing out i.e., obtain—inmortality for the Devas. 'May 1 sing out Sradhâ—oblations—for the fathers; hope, i.e., expectation i.e., the object desired and hoped for—for men; grass and water for the animals; the heavenly regions for the sacrificer; and food for myself —reflecting in his mind upon all these, one ought to sing out praises. 'carefully' i.e., with due to regard to the proper pronunciation of the vowels and consonants &c.

सर्वे स्त्ररा इन्द्रस्याऽऽत्मानः सर्वे ऊष्माणः प्रजापतेरात्मानः सर्वे स्पर्शा मृत्योरात्मानस्तं यदि स्त्ररेषूपालभेतेन्द्र ५ शरणं प्रपन्नोऽभू. वं स त्वा प्रति वक्ष्यतीत्येनं ब्रूयात् ॥ ३ ॥

All vowels belong to Indra; all sibilants belong to Prajâpali; all consonants belong to Death. If any one should reprove him for his vowels, he should tell him 1 had taken my refuge in Indra; He will answer thee. (3).

Com.—All vowels a and the rest—are the parts of—i.e., take the place of the different members of the body of—Indra,—i.e., of the Breath with strong actions. All sibilants—sa, shu, sa, ha &c.—are the parts of Prājapati—i.e., Virūt or Kasyapu. All sparsu letters i.e., the consonants Ka &c.,—are the parts of Death. If some one reprove the Udgūtri knowing all this, as that 'You have pronounced the vowels wrongly,'— being thus reproved, he should tell him this: 'When pronouncing the vowels, I had taken refuge in Indra, the Vital Breath, the Supreme Lord; hence it is Indra who will give thee whatever answer befits thee.'

अथ यद्येनमूष्मसूपालभेत प्रजापति ५ शरणं प्रपन्नोऽभूवं स त्वा प्रति पेक्ष्यतीत्येनं ब्र्यादथ यद्येन ५ स्पर्शेषूपालभेत मृत्यु ५ शरणं प्रपन्नोऽभूवं स त्वा प्रति घक्ष्यतीत्येनं ब्र्यात् ॥ ४ ॥

If some one should reprove him for his sibilants, he should tell him: 'I had taken my refuge in Prajapati: He will smash thee.' If some one should reprove him for his consonants, he should tell him: 'I had taken my refuge in Death; He will burn thee.' (4).

Com.—Now then, if some one were to reprove him for his sibilants, as before, he should tell him: 'I had taken my refuge in Prajapati; He will smash thee—reduce thee to dust.' And if one were to reprove him for his consonants, he should tell him: 'I had taken my refuge in Death; He will burn thee, reduce thee to ashes.'

सर्वे स्वरा घोषवन्तो बलवन्तो वक्तव्या इन्द्रे बलं ददानीति सर्व ऊष्माणोऽप्रस्ता अनिरस्ता विवृता वक्तव्याः प्रजापतेरात्मानं परिददानीति सर्वे स्पर्शा लेशेनानभिनिहिता वक्तव्या मृत्यो-रात्मानं परिहराणीति ॥ ८ ॥ All vowels should be pronounced with sound and strength,—(thinking) 'may I impart strength to Indra'. All sibilants should be pronounced neither as if swallowed, nor as if thrown out, but well-opened,—(thinking) 'may I give myself to Prajapati': all consonants should be pronounced slowly without crowding them together,—(thinking) 'may I withdraw myself from Death.' (5).

Com.—Since vowels &c are the parts of Indra &c., therefore all vowels should be pronounced with sound and strength,—with a view that '1 am imparting strength to Indra'. Similarly all sibilants should be pronounced, neither as if swallowed,—i.e., not totally concealed—nor, as if thrown out, but 'well-opened,' i.e., endowed with a well-opened out effort,—(with a view that), 'I am offering myself to Prajāpati.' All consonants should be pronounced slowly and without being crowded together,—(with a view that), 'I am slowly withdrawing myself from Death, just as little children are slowly (extricated from nets &c).'

Thus ends the Tewenty-second Khanda of Adhyiya II.

ADHYA'YA II.

KHANDA XXIII.

त्रयो धर्मस्कन्धा यज्ञोऽध्ययनं दानमिति। प्रथमस्तप एव दि-तीयो ब्रह्मचार्याचार्यकुळवासी तृतीयोऽत्यन्तमात्मानमाचार्यकुळेऽ वसादयन्सर्व एते पुण्यळोका भवन्ति ब्रह्मस ५ स्थोऽमृतत्वमेति॥१॥

There are three branches of Duty: Sacrifice, Study and Charity are the first; Austerity alone is the second; and one who leads the life of a Student in the house of the Teacher, absolutely mortifying his body in the Teacher's house, is the third. All these attain to the worlds of the Virtuous; but only one who is firm in Brahma attains immortality. (1).

Com.—With a view to lay down the meditation of the syllable "Om" the Text begins with "There are the three branches of duly" &c. It should not be mistaken that the result hereafter mentioned is obtained only from meditation upon the syllable "Om", specified above as the Udgitha &c.. forming parts of the Sama; but what is meant is that the result, the attainment of Immortality—which is 'unapproachable by all sorts of Sāma—meditations and sacrifices—is obtained solely by meditation upon the syllable "Om," alone by itself. And the mention of this in the chapter on Nama is only with a view to add to its glory. "Three"-in number-"are the branches"-divisions-" of Duty." Which are these? "Sacrifice"—Agniholra &c., "Study"—the getting up of the Rik &c., with proper restrictions and observances,-"Charity"-giving away to beggars, outside the sacrificial altar:—this is the first branch of Duty. Inasmuch as these duties belong to the Householder, these are called "tirst"—i.e., one (branch of Duty), and not the best; because the "second" and. the "third" are also mentioned. "Austerity is the second" -by "Austerity" are meant the observances of the Krichehra "Chândrâyana" &c; and this branch of Duty belongs to the Tapasa or the "Parivrât" who is still leading the life of the Householder, and not one who (has renounced the House and) takes his stand on Brahma i.e., the "Sanyasi"; because it is declared that this latter obtains Immortality (which does not belong to the Tapasa). One who leads the life of the Student. and lives in the house of the Teacher, " absolutely " i.e., all through his life-mortifying his body by means of penances and observances: this is the third branch of duty. The adverb "absolutely" implies the "perpetual Brahmachâri" or Life-Student." As for the ordinary student, his studentship is only for the purpose of studying the Veda, and hence such studentship cannot be the means of attaining the regions of the Virtu-"All these"—that is, people belonging to all these three states of life, attain by means of the aforesaid duties, to regions of the Virtuous. The remaining fourth, not mentioned by name is the " Paritrât" who 'stands firm in Brahma' in the right manner; and he obtains Immortality, which is something beyond, and distinct from the regions of the Virtuous; and this Immortality is absolute, and not Comparative like the Immortality of the gods; because the Immortality here mentioned is laid down as something apart from the regions of the Virtuous and the blessed ones (i.e., the regions of the gods). If Immortality were only a certain phase of the "regions of the blessed," then it would not have been mentioned apart from these "regions." Therefore, on account of its being mentioned apart, it must be taken to signify absolute "Immortality." In this connection the laying down of the duties of the different states of the Householder is with a view to add to the glory of meditation upon the Pranava (Om),—and not as leading to the results belonging particularly to this latter. Because if it be taken to be for the sake of adding glory to meditation of the Pranava, and also as leading to the results thereof, then there would be a split of the sentence. Therefore it must be admitted that by describing Immortality as resulting from meditation upon "Om,"--after an explanation of the duties of the different states of the Householder,—the Text means to eulogise the meditation of "Om." Just as in the case of the ordinary assertion "the serving of Purnavarma brings only apparels for the servant, while the serving of Rejavarmâ brings to him comforts befitting a king." The Pranava (Om) is the True Supreme Brahma: because it is the name of this latter; as is laid down in the Katha Upanishad: "This syllable alone is the imperishable Brahma, this syllable alone is the imperishable Supreme"; and hence it is only proper that immortality should result from meditation upon It (the Pranava).

Some people (the author of the Vritti among others) make the following remarks in this connection: What is meant here is that the attainment of the regions of the blessed accrues equally to persons in all states of the Householder, if they perform their duties properly but are without knowledge; that is to say, all such persons, who have no real knowledge, attain to the regions of the blessed. And the Sanyâsi is not left out of these; because for the Sanyâsi also, the duties are Knowledge, Restraints, Observances and Austerity; hence the sentence "Austerity is the second" includes both the Sangasi and the Tapasa. Therefore the meaning is that from amongst the aforesaid four. whoever happens to be firm in Brahma, and a meditator upon "Om," he attains Immortality; because all the aforesaid four classes of men being equally entitled to it: and because the standing firm in Brahma is not prohibited to any one; and lastly, because it is quite possible for one, during intervals in the performance of his duties, to stand firm in (i.e., think of) Brahma. Nor can it be held that, like the significations of the words 'Yara' Varâhu &c, the denotation of the word "Brahmasanstha" is restricted by convention, to the " Nanyasi" alone; because the word is used on the basis of the fact of standing firm in (meditating upon) Brahma (and as such it cannot have its meaning restricted to any particular class, as it is a qualifying term. and as such can be applied to any one who so stands); and as for the fact of standing firm in Brahma, this is applicable to all. Wherever the ground of the application of the word,-in the shape of standing firm in Brahma—exists, all such become denotable by the word "Brahmasanstha"; and as there is no reason for restricting the word, so denotative, to the "Sanyasi" alone, it is not proper to preclude it (from applying to other classes of men).

Nor again can it be said that Immortality results only from the performance of the duties of the "Sanyâsi"; because, in that case, knowledge would come to be of no use. If it be urged that it is knowledge, accompanied by the due performance of the duties of the Samuâsi, that brings about Immortality,-this cannot be; because all are equally the prescribed duties of the different stages of the Householder (and as such no special preference can be reasonably given to the duties of the Sanyasi, knowledge, accompanied by the performance of any duties, being the means to Immortality). Even it it be held that 'the performance of duties, accompanied by knowledge, leads to Immortality',—this too would apply equally to the duties of all stages of the Householder. Nor is there any such direct assertion (in the Veda) that it is only the Sanyasi standing firm in Brahma-and none other-that obtains Liberation;—the view held by all the Upanishads being that Liberation results from knowledge (without any specification of the class of duties to be stuck to). Therefore, from among those that duly perform the duties of their respective states, whoever meditates upon Brahma, attains Immortality."

This cannot be (the meaning of the text); because there is a mutual contradiction between the Ideas bringing about Actions, and those leading to knowledge (of Brahma). The injunctions of Actions are chiefly based upon the fact of the person concerned having notions of the diversities of the Doer, the Means, the Action and the Result. And this basis does not originate in the Scriptures; inasmuch as such notions of diversity are found to exist in all living creatures. And the Idea, in the form of knowledge is such as is brought about by such Scriptural assertions as "Real entity is one only, without a second," "All this is Self alone," "All this is Brahma alone" &c. &c. And this Idea never appears without having previously completely suppressed the basis of Actions, in the shape of notions of diversities of Action, Means and Result: (1) because there is a mutual contradiction between the notion of diversity and that of Unity or Identity; the idea of the singleness of the moon, on the removal of darkness, does not appear without the suppression of the idea of its duality due to darkness; (2) because there is a mutual contradiction between the notion of Knowledge and that of Ignorance. Therefore one, for whom all notion of diversity—on which injunctions of Actions are based—has been suppressed by the notion of unity, brought about by such assertions as "the real entity is one only, without a second," "that alone is true", "the diversity of modifications is unreal" and the like,—such a one alone is free from all Actions, because of the removal of the basis of all Actions: and one who is thus free from Actions is called "Brahmasanstha, (meditator of Brahma); and this is the Sanyasi alone; it being possible for none else (all others being absorbed in Actions). Because all others having their notions of diversity unsuppressed, and seeing one thing, hearing another, then being of a third, and knowing another. always think that "having done this, I will obtain that" and so forth. And one who does all this cannot be said to be "Brahmasanstha,"—because all his notions are based upon unrealities in the shape of modifications, which have their origin in speech alone (having no other than a verbal existence.) And when the notion of diversity has been suppressed as untrue, there arises no such further notions of the means and object of knowledge, such as 'this is true, and this is to be done by me' and so forth; -just like the notion of the dirtiness of surface with regard to Akasa, for one who has the power of discriminating (the real nature of things). If even after the suppression of the notion of diversity one were not to desist from actions—just as before the suppression of the notion of diversity,—then, in that case, all vedic passages laying down the reality of the idea of unity would become falsified. And the authority of the passages laying down unity is just as proper as that of the passages prohibiting the eating of uneatable (prohibited) food; specially as all the Upanishads treat of that (unity). If it be urged that in that case, the passages enjoying Actions would become falsified,—we deny this : because these have their authority for those whose ideas of diversity have not been suppressed; just like the cognitions in a dream, before awakening. If it be urged that wise and descriminative persons not performing the Actions, the passages enjoining these would lose their authority,—we deny this: because we do not find deficiency in the authority of such passages as lay down Actions with a definite end. Because Actions with definite ends are not performed, by such people as have the idea that it is not proper for one to have any desire; it does not follow that the injunctions of such Actions lose all their authoritysuch Actions being performed by people desiring certain ends. In the same manner, because such people as meditate upon Brahma, and know Brahma do not perform the duties (laid down for the Householder &c.); it does not follow that passages enjoining such duties lose all their authority,-such duties being duly performed by people not knowing Brahma. If it be urged that "just as the actions of begging for food &c., do not cease for even the Sanyasi,—so in the same manner, even if the Householder happens to realise the notion of unity, the actions of Agnihotra &c. will not cease for him ",-this cannot be: because when considering the validity of Injunctions, the actions of men (such as the begging of food instanced) cannot serve as (authoritative) instances, e.g., the "killing" (cf an enemy, being prohibited,—simply because some one has been found to be doing it, it does not follow that such killing is to be done by wise discriminative people, even though they be without any harmful intention towards an enemy. And on the suppression of the notion of diversity.—which is the sole foundation for the application of the passages laying down Actions,—there is no active agency left which would urge people towards such actions as the Agaihotra and the like; though in the case of the Nanyasi what urges him to beg for food is hunger. If it be urged that "in the case in question too, what will urge people to the performance of such Actions will be the fear of sin resulting from their non-performance,"-this cannot be; because it is only one who has notions of diversity that is entitled to such Actions; we have already explained that it is only one who has notions of diversity, whose notions of diversity have not been suppressed by knowledge, that is entitled to the performance of Action. And the sin, resulting from the non-performance of an Action, accrues to him only, who is entitled to its performance,-and not to one who is not so entitled; for instance the non-performance, by a "Householder," of the duties of the "Student" does not constitute a sin. If it be urged that "in that case, all people, who are still in one of the four stages, but have realised unity, would be Sanyasis',—this cannot be; because so long as a man continues in one of the stages the ideas of ownership are not suppressed; and because the other stages are for the performance of Actions, as declared in the Sruti "then should be perform Actions." Therefore the Mendicant alone, who is devoid of all notions of ownership, can be a "Sunyasi," which the Householder and others can never be. If it be urged that "inasmuch as all notions of diversity, on which injunctions for actions are based, are suppressed by the notion of unity got at by means of the texts laying it down, none of the Restraints, Observances, &c. can apply to the Sanyasi,"—we deny this: because these (Restraints &c), helping one to restrain himself, do apply to the Sanyasi, when he happens to be separated, from the notion of unity, by Hunger &c. But from this it does not follow that for the Sanyasi, there is also a chanceof stooping to prohibited deeds. Because such deeds are prohibited even before the realisation of unity.

As for instance, because one falls into a well or in a thicket in the darkness of night, it does not follow that he should fall down, even when the sun has risen. Therefore it is established it is only the Mendicant, who desists from all Actions, who is called "Brahmasanstha." It has been said above that all that are devoid of knowledge, attain to the regions of the blessed; this is true enough. But it has also been said that the "Sanyasi" is implied in the word "Austerity"; this is not true. Why? Because it is the Sanyasi alone, to whom the character of "Brahmasanstha" can possibly belong as we have already explained that it is the Sanyasi alone who is left, after the other orders have been mentioned: because there is a cessation of all such actions as the Agnihotra &c., for one who has realised unity. The duty of performing penances devolves only upon one who has notions of diversity. These reasons also serve to set aside the possibility of being "Brahmasanstha" in the intervals of Actions, and also the fact of the non-prohibition (of the character of Brahmasanstha for the Householder &c.)--(both these facts having been urged by the author of the Vritti). It had also been urged that if only such men endowed with knowledge. as have desisted from Actions were to be Sanyasis, then knowledge by itself would have no use. And this reasoning too is met by our arguments. Then again, it has been urged that the signification of the word "Brahmasanstha" is not conventionally restricted to the "Sanyisi" like the significations of such words as "uava" "I'arâha" and the like. This too has been set aside by the arguments advanced by us, showing that the name "Brahmasanstha" can apply to the Sanyasi alone, and to none else. It has also been said that words whose significations are fixed by convention, do not stand in need of any reasons for their application. But such is not the case; since we do find this to be the case with such words as "Grihastha" "Taksha" "Parirrâjaka" &c.--which have for grounds of their significations the facts of remaining in the house, of carpentering and of wandering about as mendicants; and yet they have their significations fixed by convention to two stages of life (in the case of the words "Grihastha" and "Parivrajaka") and to a particular class of men (in the case of the word "Takshå"); but there is no such hard and fast rule as that these are not to be used where the aforesaid grounds are not immediately perceived; because such is not the commonly recognised fact. In the same manner, the word "Brahmasanstha" can be held to be applicable to the "Paramahansa" who is beyond the ordinary stages of human life, and who is a Sanyasi having all Actions and their means supressed for himself; because the accruing to him of the chief result of Immortality is directly asserted (in the Veda). Hence it must be admitted that the character of the Sampâsi mentioned in the Veda is only this what has been explained, and not the taking up of the sacred thread, the "tridanda" or the sacred water-pot, &c., -as laid down in such passages, as "with head shaved, without acquisitions and without attachment, &c," and also "the supreme and sacred for those who are above the ordinary stages of life, &c. &c.," in the Swetas' watara Upanishad; and also in such Smriti passages as, "without prayers, without obeisances," &c., &c.; and also "for this reason Self-restrained ones, seeing beyond, do not perform actions," and " for this reason he is without marks, knowing the Law, having his marks unmanifested." &c. &c. The renunciation of Actions propounded by the $S\hat{a}_{n}kk$ yas is false; because they hold the ideas of the diversities of Actions, Instruments and Results to be real (and not unreal as the Vedânti does). And the theory of the non-activity (of the agent) as propounded by the Banddha, is also untenable; because they hold all things to be void; and the theory of non-activity presupposes the fact of its being an Entity. And the theory of inaction held by lazy illiterate persons is also untrue; because these people have not their notions of activity suppressed by any valid authoritative means

(as it is for the Vedanti). Therefore it is established that the character of the "Brahmasanstha" or the Sanyasi,"—which consists in the cessation of all Actions—belongs only to one who has come to realise Unity by means of the valid reasonings and authorities of the Vedânta. From this also follows the fact that the Householder too becomes a Sanyâsi, if he happens to get at the realisation of unity. Objection: "But. a householder, becoming a Sanyasi would become guilty of neglecting the (Sacrificial) Fire,—as says the Struti, 'one who neglects the fire, becomes the murderer of the brave among the gods," Not so: because as soon as unity becomes realised the Fire by itself becomes, neglected as mentioned in the Sruti. "Fire loses the character of fire" &c. Therefore a householder becoming a Sanyâsi, is not guilty of any crime.

प्रजापितर्छीकानभ्यतपत्तेभ्योऽभितत्तेभ्यस्त्रयी विद्या संप्रा-स्रवत्तामभ्यतपत्तस्या अभितत्ताया एतान्यक्षराणि संप्रास्रवन्त भूर्भुवः स्वरिति ॥ २ ॥

Prajāpati brooded on the worlds. From them, thus brooded upon, the Triadic knowledge issued forth. He brooded on this. And from this, brooded upon, issued the syllables Bhāh, Bhuvah and Swah. (2).

Com.—The Text now begins to explain that, wherein standing firm one attains Immortality. "Prajāpati"—i.e., Virat or Kasyapa—with a view to find out the pith of the worlds brooded upon them,—that is to say, performed meditation and penance, with that end in view. From these thus brooded upon, their pith, the Triadic knowledge, issued forth,—i.e., appeared in the mind of Prajāpati. "He brooded on this"—as before. And from this, thus brooded upon, these syllables issued forth; viz., the Vyāhritis "Bhāh" "Bhuvah", and "Swah."

तान्यभ्यतपत्तेभ्योऽभितप्तेभ्य ॐकारः संप्रास्रवत्तद्यथा

शङ्कुना सर्वाणि पर्णानि संतृण्णान्येवमोंकारेण सर्वा वाक्सं-

तृण्णोंकार एवेद ५ सर्वमोंकार एवेद ५ सर्वम् ॥ ३॥

He brooded on them; and from them, thus brooded upon, issued the syllable 'Om.' As all leaves are attached to the stalk, so is all speech attached to the syllable 'Om.' The syllable 'Om' is all this—yea the syllable 'Om' is all this. (3).

Com.—He brooded upon these syllables; and from them, thus brooded upon, issued the syllable 'Om,' which is Brahma. Of what nature was this? Just as all the leaves are attached or fastened to the stalk—i.e., are pervaded over by it; so is all speech—all words—pervaded over by the syllable 'Om.' which is Brahma, and which is the counterpart of the Supreme Self:—As is also declared in such Srutis—as "the syllable u verily is all speech." And since all name is a modification of the Supreme Self; therefore the syllable 'Om' is all this. The repetition is meant to show reverence for the subject treated of. The mention of the accomplishment of the worlds, &c., is with a view to eulogise the syllable 'Om.'

Thus ends the Twenty-third Khanda of Adhyâya 11.

ADHYA'YA II.

KHANDA XXIV.

--0--

ब्रह्मवादिनो वदन्ति यद्वसूनां प्रातःसवन ५ रुद्राणां माध्यं-दिन ५ सवनमादित्यानां च विश्वेषां च देवानां तृतीयसवनम्॥१॥

The teachers of Brahma declare that the 'morning ---oblation' belongs to the Vasus, the 'midday---oblation' to the Rudras, and to Adityas and the Visuci-Dêwas the third oblation. (1).

Com.—In connection with Sama-meditation, the syllable 'Om' has been accomplished as secondary to Actions, and then it has been highly eulogised as being the counterpart of the Supreme Self and bringing about Immortality; and now the Text begins to lay down the Sâma and the Incantations of the Homa. &c., which form parts of the sacrifice. The teachers of Brahma declare that what is known as the 'morning-oblation' belongs to the Vasus:—that is to say, this world while connected with the morning-oblation is kept under control by these Lords of this oblation. Similarly, the worlds of the sky is kept under control by the Rudras, who are the Lords of the midday-oblation. And the third world is kept under control by the Adityas and the Visuce-Dewas, who are the Lords of the third oblation. Thus then there is no other world left for the sacrificer

क तर्हि यजमानस्य छोक इति स यस्तं न विद्यात्कथं कुर्यादय विद्वान्कुर्यात् ॥ २ ॥

Where then is the world of the sacrificer? He who does not know this, how can be perform (sacrifices)? If he knows this, then he should perform (them). (2)

Com.—Then where is the world of the sacrificer, for the sake of which he sacrifices? That is to say, his world is nowhere. And the Sruti says. "One who sacrifices sacrifices for the sake of a world." And if the sacrificer were not to know the means of acquiring a world—such means being in the shape of the Sâma, Iloma, Mantra, &c.,—not knowing this, how could be perform sacrifices? That is to say, the proper character of the sacrificer can never belong to an ignorant person. This is meant to eulogise the Sama, de., and as such, should not be taken as prohibiting the performance of sacrifices for one who is ignorant of these, and knows only the sacrifice. Because if it were taken as eulogising the knowledge of Súma, de., and, at the same time, as prohibiting the performance by ignorant persons,—there would be a split of the sentence. And we have explained in the beginning, in the Chapter treating of Ushasti, showing why even an ignorant person can perform sacrifices. It however he knows such means as the \hat{Sama} , dc—to be hereafter explained -then he should perform sacrifices.

पुरा प्रातरनुवाकस्योपाकरणाज्जघनेन गार्हपत्यस्योदङ्मुख उप-विश्य स वासव ५ सामाभिगायति ॥ ३ ॥

Before the beginning of the 'Matin-chant,' sitting behind the Garhapatya fire, and facing the north, (the sacrificer) sings the Sâma sacred to the Vasus. (3).

Com.—Now what is it that has to be known (for the performance of sacrifices)? It is explained. Before beginning the hymns constituting the "Morning Chant," sitting behind the Gårhapatya fire, and looking towards the North, the sacrificer sings the Sâma sacred to the Vasus.

लो ३ कद्वारमपात्रा ३ पू ३ ३ पश्येम त्वा वय ५ रा ३३३३३ हुं ३ आ ३३ ज्या ३ यो ३ आ ३२१११ इति ॥ ४ ॥

Open the door of this world, that we may see thee, for the Kingdom. (4).

Com.—Open the door of this world of the Earth—O Fire,!—So that, through that door, we may see thee, for the sake of the kingdom (of this world).

अथ जुहोति ? नमोऽग्नये पृथिवीक्षिते छोकक्षिते छोकं मे यज-मानाय विन्देष वे यजमानस्य छोक एताऽस्मि ॥ ५ ॥

Then he makes offerings (reciting). 'Adoration to Fire, who dwells on the Earth, who dwells in the world! obtain this world for me, the sacrificer! To this world of the Sacrificer I am to go. (5).

Com.—After this he makes offerings into the fire, reciting the Mautra. "Adoration to Fire"—we bow, O Fire, to thee, who dwellest on the Earth, and who dwellest in the world; obtain for me the world of the sacrificer; verily, to this world of the sacrificer I am to go.

अत्र यजमानः परस्तादायुषः स्त्राहाऽपजिहे परिघमित्युक्त्वो-त्तिष्ठति तस्मै वसवः प्रातःसवन ५ संप्रयच्छिन्ति ॥ ६ ॥ Thither will the sacrificer, after this life, $Sv\hat{a}h\hat{a}$ take away the bolt having said this, he rises. For him the Vasus fulfil the morning oblation. (6).

Com.—"Thither" i.e., to this world, I the sacrificer, after death, will go—Srâhâ thus he makes the offering, adding—" remove the bolt"—i.e., the bolt closing the door of the world. Having pronounced this Mantra, he rises. And by means of these, the world connected with the morning oblation, are purchased, from the Vasus; hence these fulfil the morning oblation for the sacrificer.

पुरा माध्यंदिनस्य सवनस्योपाकरणाज्ञघनेनाऽग्नाऽध्रीयस्योदङ्-मुख[ं]उपविश्य स रोद्र ५ सामाभिगायति ॥ ७ ॥

लो३कद्वारमपावा३ र्णू ३३ पश्येम त्वा वयं वैरा ३३३३ ३ हुं३ आ ३३ ज्या ३ यो ३ आ ३२१११ हीत ॥ ८ ॥

Before the beginning of the Midday oblation, sitting down behind the Aguidhriya fire and facing the North, he sings the Samu sacred to the Rudras. (7).

"Open the door of the world, that we may see thee, for Vairājya." (8).

Com.—In the same manner, sitting behind the "Agnidhriya"—the Southern fire, and looking toward the North he sings the Sâma, sacred to the Rudras for the sake of attaining "Vairājya" Kingdom of the Sky).

अथ जुहोति नमो वायवेऽन्तरिक्षक्षिते लोकक्षिते लोकं मे यजमानाय विन्देष वै यजमानस्य लोक एताऽस्मि ॥ ९ ॥

अत्र यजमानः परस्तादायुषः स्वाहाऽपजिह पीरघीमत्युक्त्वो-त्तिष्टति तस्मे रुद्धा माध्यंदिन ५ सवन ५ संप्रयच्छन्ति ॥ १०॥

"Then he makes the offering, (reciting): Adoration to $V\hat{a}yu$, who dwells in the sky, and dwells in the world obtain this world for me, the sacrificer, to this world the sacrificer I am to go? (9).

Thither will the sacrificer, after this life—Sváha? "Remove the bolt!"—having said this, he rises; and the Rudras fulfil the midday oblation for him. (10). Com.—Who dwells in the sky, &c., &c."—as before.

पुरा तृतीयसवनस्योपाकरणाज्ञघननाऽऽहवनीयस्योदङ्मुख उप-विश्य स आदित्य ५ स वैश्वदेव ५ सामाभिगायति ॥ ११ ॥

लो २ कद्वारमपावा २ र्णू ३ २ पश्येम त्वा वय ५ स्वारा ३ ३ -३ ३ ३ हुं ३ आ ३ ३ ज्या ३ यो ३ आ ३ २ १ १ १ इति ॥ १ २ ॥ आदित्यमथ वैश्वदेवं लो २ कद्वारमपावा २ र्णू ३ ३ पश्येमत्वा चय ५ साम्रा ३ ३ ३ ३ हुं ३ आ ३ ३ ज्या ३ यो ३ आ ३ -२ १ १ १ इति ॥ १ ३ ॥ Before the beginning of the third oblation, sitting behind the Ahavaniya fire, and facing the North, he sings the Sāma sacred to the Adityas, and also that sacred to the Viswedewas.

"Open the door of the world,—that we may see thee, for the kingdom of Heaven."

"This is sacred to the Adityas. Now the one sacred to the Visuedevas. 'Open the door of the world,—that we may see thee, for kingdom Supreme." (11—13).

Com.—Similarly, sitting behind the Ahavaniya Fire, and looking towards the North, he sings the Sâma sacred to the Adityas, and then the one sacred to the Viswedêvas—for the sake of the Kingdom of Heaven and Kingdom Supreme respectively.

अथ जुहोति नम आदित्येभ्यश्च विश्वेभ्यश्च देवेभ्यो दिवि-क्षिदुभ्यो लोकक्षिदुभ्यो लोकं मे यजमानाय विन्दत॥१४॥

एष वै यजमानस्य लोक एताऽस्मयत्र यजमानः परस्ता-दायुषः स्वाहाऽपहत परिघमित्युक्त्वे।तिष्ठति॥१५ ॥

तस्मा आदित्याश्च विश्वे च देवास्तृतीयसवन ५ संप्रयच्छ-न्त्येष ह वे यज्ञस्य मात्रां वेद य एवं वेद य एवं वेद ॥ १६॥

Then he makes the offering (reciting): 'Adoration to the Adityas and to the Visuedevas, the dwellers of Heaven, and the dwellers of the world! obtain the world for the sacrificer!

To this world of the sacrificer, I will go. Thither will the sacrificer after this life—Svåha. Remove the bolt, !—having said this, he rises.

For him, the Adityas and the Viswedêras fulfil the third oblation. One who knows this, knows the real character of sacrifice—yea, one who knows this. (14-16).

Com.—"Dwellers of Heaven" &c., &c.,—as before; the only difference being the plural number in "Vindata" and "Apahata." All these recitations belong to the sacrificer,—on account of the marks in "I will go" pointing to the sacrificer; the meaning being "I. the sacrificer, knowing this, &c." "One who knows this"—i.e., the Sâma, &c., as explained above—knows the real character of sacrifices. The repetition of "one who knows this" is meant to denote the close of the Adhyâya.

Thus ends the Twenty-fourth Khanda of Adhyaya II.

Thus ends the Second Adhyâya.

The Chhandogya Upanishad.

ADHYA'YA III.

KHANDA I

--0--

असौ वा आदित्यो देवमधु तस्य द्यौरेव तिरश्वीनव ५ शो ऽन्तरिक्षमपूर्पो मरीचयः पुत्राः ॥ १ ॥

This sun verily is the honey of the Devas. Of this. Heaven is the cross-beam, the sky is the hive, and the rays, the Eggs. (1).

Com.—"This sun, &c."—shows the context of the coming Adhyâya. At the close of the last Adhyâya, it has been said "One who knows the measures of the sacrifice;" and the articles of the sacrifice, as they arise out of the Sâma, the Homa and the Mantras, and constituting the parts of the sacrifice,—have all been clearly explained, with a view to the attainment of particular ends. And the Sun, embodying the accomplishment of the results of all the sacrifices, shines with great splendour. And this Sun, being the result of the actions of all living beings, is directly perceived by Hence, after having explained the sacrifices, the Text begins a treatment of the meditation of their result in the shape of the Sun, with a view to describe the highest of the ends of man. "The Sun indeed is the · honey of the Devas," &c., &c. The Sun is the honey of the Gods, as It gives them pleasure, and, as such is like honey. The fact of the Sun being a source of pleasure to the Vasus and the rest will be explained later on, as being based upon the fact of the Sun embodying the results of all sacrifices. But how does the character of "honey" belong to It? Of this honey, Heaven is the cross-beam, just like the beam to which the bee-honey hangs. Because the Heaven appears to be slanting crossly (to the Gods who dwell in the sky, when they look upwards); and the sky is the hive, hanging as it were, by the beam of Heaven; hence resembling, in this, the hive, the sky is the hive, -- as also because it is the support of honey in the shape of the Sun-By "rays," are meant the watery vapours drawn from the Earth by the Sun, and contained in Its rays; as described elsewhere "the water is the rays of the Sun." And these "rays"—being contained in the rays existing in the hive of the sky, and thus resembling the eggs of the bee-appear like "eggs,"-i.c., the eggs contained in the cells of the bee-hive.

तस्य ये प्राञ्चो ररमयस्ता एवास्य प्राच्यो मधुनाड्यः । ऋच एक मधुक्कत ऋग्वेद एव पुष्पं ता अमृता आपास्ता वा एता ऋचः ॥ २ ॥

"Its Eastern rays are the honey-cells on the East. The Riks are the honey-producers; the Rigveda is the flower; and those waters are the nectar; and those very Riks indeed (as the bees)."

Com.—Of this Sun—the receptacle of honey—the rays that point to the East are its honey-cells on the East. And since the Riks produce the red honey contained in the Sun, therefore these are the bees producing the honey; inasmuch as like the bees, these also produce the honey after extracting the essences of flowers; and this flower is the Rigveda. By the word "Rigveda" is meant the Action prescribed in the Rigveda; because the name "Rigveda" rightly belongs to the collection of verses and Brahmanas; and as such. consisting only of words, it is not possible for such collection to pour out (bring about) essences &c; while it is quite possible for Actions to bring about such essences, as honey and the like. Just as the bees produce honey by extracting the juices of flowers, so do the Riks accomplish their honey by extracting the juices of Actions prescribed in the Rigveda. Now, what are these juices? These juices are the "waters," in the shape of the Soma-juice, butter and milk, that are poured out into the fire; and these, being therein cooked, become "nectar" (so called, because they are supposed to lead to immortality); that is to say, they become juices with excellent flavours and those very Riks, taking the essences of these, are like the bees extracting juice from the flowers.

एतमृग्वेदमभ्यतप ५ स्तस्याभितप्तस्य यशस्तेज इन्द्रियं वीर्य-मन्नाद्य ५ रसोऽजायत ॥ ३ ॥

These impressed the Rigveda. And from it thus impressed, proceeded, as essence, fame resplendence, the senses, strength and health. (3).

Com.—These Riks, employed in Actions, impressed the flower—like Actions prescribed in the Rigveda. Proper essences, like honey, are given out only by such Actions as are performed by means of the Rik—Mantrus employed during the sacrifice, in the form of the various hymns; just as honey is produced only by the sucking of the flowers by the bees. With this view it is said "from it thus impressed". It is next explained what is the essence that flows from the brooding of the Rik-bees: "Fame"—i.e., renown, "resplendence" i.e., brightness of the body, "the senses", i.e., the full activity of all the senses in their virility, "strength"— i.e., power and "health",—i.e., that whereby there would be a continuance of the gods every day. Such was the essence that proceeded from Action, in the shape of sacrifice &c.

तद्यक्षरत्तदादित्यमभितोऽश्रयत्तद्वा एतचेदतदादित्यस्य रोहित ५ रूपम् ॥ ४ ॥

It flowed out. It went towards the sun. This it is that appears as the red form of the Sun. (4).

Com.—The Essence—'fame' &c., ending in 'health'—flowed out; and having flowed out, it went by the side of the sun. to the Eastern side of the Sun. Just as the fire is prepared by the peasant, so Actions are performed by men for the purpose of acquiring certain results, in the shape of Fame &c,—the idea in their minds being 'we will eat of the honey stored up in the sun in the shape of the results of all the Actions'. And in order to bring about confidence, this is directly shown. "This it is &x., what is it? It is the red light of the rising sun.

Thus ends the First Khanda of Adhyaya III.

ADHYA'YA III.

KHANDA II.

---o---

अथ येऽस्य दक्षिणा रश्मयस्ता एवास्य दक्षिणा मधुनाड्ये। यजू ५ ध्येव मधुकृतो यजुर्वेद एव पुष्पं ता अमृता आपः ॥१॥

Its southern rays are the honey-cells to the South. The Yajush verses are the honey-producers; Yajur Veda is the flower; and those waters are the nectar.(1)

Com.—"Its southern rays, &c.," as above. The honey-producers are the Yajush verses;—i.e., the actions prescribed in the Yajurveda are like bees, as explained above. The actions prescribed in the Yajurveda perform the work of flowers; hence they are called the "flower." Those waters—Soma &c., are the nectar.

तानि वा एतानि यजू ५ ध्येतं यजुर्वेदमभ्यतप ५ स्तस्याभितप्त-स्य यशस्तेज इन्द्रियं वीर्यमन्नाद्य ५ रसोऽजायत ॥ २ ॥

तद्यक्षरत्तदादित्यमभितोऽश्रयत्तद्वा एतचदेतदादित्यस्य शुक्र ५ रूपम् ॥ ३ ॥

And those very Yajush verses impressed the Yajurveda. And from it, thus impressed, proceeded, as essence, fame, resplendence, the senses, strength and health. (2).

"It flowed out; it went towards the Sun; this it is that appears as the white form of the Sun." (3).

Com,—"These Yajush versus, &c."—all as before. It is this "honey" that appears as the white form of the Sun.

Thus ends the Second Khanda of Adhyaya III.

ADHYA'YA III.

KHANDA III.

अथ येऽस्य प्रत्यश्चो रश्मयस्ता एवास्य प्रतीच्यो मधुनाड्येः सामान्येव मधुकृतः सामवेद एव पुष्पं ता अमृता आपः ॥ १॥ तानि वा एतानि सामान्येत ५ सामवेदमभ्यतप ५ स्तस्याभि-तप्तस्य यशस्तेज इन्द्रियं वीर्यमन्नाद्य ५ रसोऽजायत ॥ २॥ तद्यक्षरत्तदादित्यमभितोऽश्रयत्तद्वा एतद्येदतदादित्यस्यकृष्ण ५ रूपम् ॥ ३॥ And its western rays are the honey-cells to the East, the Sâmus are the honey-producers; the Samaveda is the flower, and these waters are the nectar. (1).

"The Sâmas impressed the Sama Veda, and from it, thus impressed, proceeded, as essence, fame, resplendence, senses, strength and health." (2).

"It flowed out. It went towards the Sun. This it is that is in the black form of the Sun." (3).

Com.—"Its Western rays &c.,"—same as before. The honey of Sâmas constitutes the blackness of the Sun.

Thus ends the Third Khanda of Adhyâya III.

ADHYA'YA III.

---υ---KHANDA IV.

अथ येऽस्योदञ्चो रहमयस्ता एवास्योदीच्यो मधुनाडचोऽ थर्वाङ्गिरस एव मधुकृत इतिहासपुराणं पुष्पं । ता अमृता आपः ॥ १ ॥

ते वा एतेऽथर्वाङ्गिरस एतदितिहासपुराणमभ्यतप ५ स्तस्याभि-तप्तस्य यशस्तेज इन्द्रियं वीर्यमन्नाद्य ५ रसोऽजायत ॥ २ ॥

तंद्र्यक्षरत्तदादित्यमभितोऽश्रयत्तद्वा एतद्यदेतदादित्यस्य परं

कृष्ण ५ रूपम् ॥ ३ ॥

Now, its northern rays are the honey-cells to the north. The Atharvângirusa are the honey-producers: the Itihasas and Purunus are the flower. Those waters are the nectar. (1).

"These Atharvingirusa impressed these Itihusus and Puranus. And from these, thus impressed, proceeded, as essence, fame, resplendence, the senses, strength and health."

It flowed out. It went towards the Sun. This it is that is the extremely black form in the Sun." (3).

Com.—" Now, its northern rays, &c."—as before. "Atharvângirasa," means the Atharvana and the Angirasa Mantras' employed at sacrifices; these are the honey-producers. "The Itihasas and Parânâs are the flower." It is an established fact the Itihâsas and Parânas are employed at sacrifices,—as for instance, at the Aswamedha, during the "Pariplava nights." This honey is that form of the Sun which is extremely black.

Thus ends the Fourth Khanda of Adhyâya III.

ADHYA'YA III.

KHANDA V.

अथ येऽस्योध्वी रश्मयस्ता एवास्योध्वी मधुनाडं यो गुह्या एवाऽऽदेशा मधुकृतो ब्रह्मेव पुष्पं ता अमृता आपः ॥ १ ॥

ते वा एते गुह्या आदेशा एतद्रह्माभ्यतप ५स्तस्याभितप्तस्य यशस्तेज इन्द्रियं वीर्यमन्नाद्य ५ रसोऽजायत ॥ २ ॥

तद्यक्षरत्तदादित्यमभितोऽश्रयत्तद्वा एतचेदतदादित्यस्य मध्ये क्षोभत इव ॥ ३ ॥

Now its upward rays are the honey-cells on the top.

The secret instructions are the honey-producers; and Brakma Itself is the flower. Those waters are the nectar. (1).

These secret instructions impressed this Brahma; and from It, thus impressed, proceeded, as essence, fame, resplendence, the senses, strength and health. (2).

It flowed out. It went towards the Sun; this it is that appears as quivering in the centre of the Sun. (3).

Com.—Now its upward rays &c.—as before. "Secret" means undisclosable; and "instructions" mean the injunctions with regard to the gates of the worlds, and also the various meditations, as forming parts of Actions; these are the honey-producers. "Brahma" here signifies the Pranava (Om), because the section deals with words. This is the flower. The rest is as before. This is the honey that appears to one who fixes his eyes, to be quivering or moving in the centre of the Sun."

ते वा एते रसाना ५ रसा वेदा हि रसास्तेषामेते रसास्तानि वा एतान्यमृतानाममृतानि वेदा ह्यमृतास्तेषामेतान्यमृतानि ॥ ४ ॥

These indeed are the essence of the essences: The Vedas are the essences; and these are their essence. These indeed are the nectar of the nectars: the Vedas are the nectars; and these are their nectar. (1).

Com.—"These"—the forms red and the rest—" are the essence of the essences." It is explained of what these are essences. The Vedas are the essences, because they flow from men. And of these Vedas as essences, and as they take the forms of Actions—these red and other forms become the essence; i.e., the final essence. In the same manner, these are the nectar of the nectars. "The Vedas are the nectars"—because they are eternal; and of these, the red and other forms are the nectar. "Essence of essences, &c." are meant to eulogise Actions, of which such nectars are shown to be the results.

Thus ends the Fifth Khanda of Adhyâya III.

ADHYA'YA III.

-- 0---

KHANDA VI.

तद्यत्प्रथमममृतं तद्वसव उपजीवन्त्यग्निना मुखेन न वे देवा अश्नीन्त न पिबन्त्येतदेवामृतं दृष्ट्या तृष्यन्ति ॥ १॥

That which is the first nectar, on that live the Vasus with Agni at their head. Verily the Gods do not eat or drink; looking upon this nectar, they are satisfied.

(1).

Com.—Of the above, that which is the first nectar—in the shape of the red form of the Sun,—on that live the Vasus. the lords of the morning hymns with Agai at their head. The assertion that "from it proceeded as essence, health or appetite" would show that they eat in the ordinary way, with their hands. This is denied. "The Gods do not cat or drink." How then do they live? Having seen, i.e., enjoyed by the senses,—the aforesaid red form, they become satisfied. The Eye being the door so to say of all the sense-organs. Objection: "It being directly mentioned that it is only on seeing, that they become satisfied, how do you make out the shape to be amenable to all the senses,?" Not so; since Fame, &c., are amenable to the ear and the rest: Fame is cognisable by the Ear; Light and colour belong to the eye, and the activity of the other senses too are to be inferred from the nature of the various effects. "Strength" is virility of the body. And "Annâdya" (Health) is that which daily leads to the continuance of the body. "Essence"—i.e., all the aforesaid are essences; seeing which, they are satisfied. "Seeing this, the Gods become satisfied" means that they enjoy it by all their senses, and then become satisfied,—becoming, through their connection with the Sun, free from bad smell and such like discrepancies of the body and the senses.

त एतदेव रूपमीभसंविशन्यतरमादूपादुद्यन्ति ॥ २ ॥

They retire into this colour; and rise from this colour. (2).

Com.—Do they live upon the nectar idly? No. Having realised with regard to this colour, that "now there is no occasion for my enjoyment," they retire—i.e., become indifferent. And when again the opportunity of enjoying this colour occurs, they again "rise from this colour,"—i.e.,—again become active for the sake of that colour. And it is seen in the ordinary world that there is no enjoyment for those who are idle and inactive.

स य एतदेवममृतं वेद वसूनामेवैको भूत्वाऽग्निनेव मुखेनेत-देवामृतं दृष्ट्वा तृष्यति स एतदेव रूपमभिसंविशत्येतस्माद्र्-पादुदेति ॥ ३ ॥

One who knows this nectar, becomes one of the Vasus; and, with Agni at his head, he comes to be satisfied by looking upon this nectar. He retires into this colour, and rises from this colour. (3).

Com.—Whoever knows (1) the bees in the shape of the Riks to give rise to the flowing of honey from the flower in the shape of the Actions prescribed in the Rigreda, (2) the nectar to lie in the Sun to have a red colour, to be located in the Eastern rays of the Sun, and to be enjoyed by the Vasus, and (3) the knowers of these to be identified with the Vasus, to live upon it with Agui at their head, to be satisfied by mere sight, to rise on the occasion of their enjoyment, and to retire on the lapse of this opportunity,—whoever knows all this, enjoys all this, just like the Vasus.

स यावदादित्यः पुरस्तादुदेता पश्चादस्तमेता वसूनामेव तावदाधि-पत्य ५ स्वाराज्यं पर्येता ॥ ४ ॥

So long as the Sun rises in the East and sets in the West, so long does he attain the sovereign heavenly kingdom of the Vasus. (4).

Com.—How long does such a knower live upon the nectar? This is explained: So long as the Sun rises in the East, and sets in the West,—so long does he attain the sovereign heavenly kingdom of the Vasus,—that is to say as long as the period of enjoyment of the Vasus. One who resides in the lunar disc, doing actions, is dependent, the food of the gods. Not so the knower of the nectar, who attains to the kingdom of heaven.

Thus ends the Sixth Khanda of Adhyáya III.

ADHYA'YA III.

KHANDA VII.

--0--

अथ यद्द्वितायममृतं तद्वदा उपजीवन्तीन्द्रेण मुखेन न वै देवा अश्नन्ति न पिबन्त्येतदेवामृतं दृष्टा तृप्यन्ति॥ १ ॥

That which is the second nectar, on that live the Radras, with Indra at their head. Verily the gods do not eat or drink; looking upon this nectar, they are satisfied.

त एतदेव रूपमभिसंविशन्येतस्माद्र्पादुद्यन्ति ॥ २ ॥
They retire into this colour, and rise from this colour.
(2).

स य एतदेवममृतं वेद रुद्राणामेवैको भूत्वेन्द्रेणेव मुखेनैत-देवामृतं दृष्ट्या तृप्यति स एतदेव रूपमभिसंविशत्येतस्माद्रूपादु-देति ॥ ३ ॥

One who knows this nectar becomes one of the Brulras; and with Irulra at his head, he comes to be satisfied by looking upon this nectar; he retires into this colour, and rises from this colour. (3).

स यात्रदादित्यः पुरस्तादुदेता पश्चादस्तमेता द्विस्तावहाक्षिण-त उदेतोत्तरतोऽस्तमेता रुद्राणामेव तावदाधिपत्य ५ स्वाराज्यं पर्येता ॥ ४ ॥

So long as the Sun rises in the East, and sets in the West, twice as long does it rise to the South, and set to the North; and so long does he attain the sovereign heavenly kingdom of the Rudras. (4).

Com.—"That which is the second nectur, on that live the Rwlras" &c.,—the same as before. So long as the Sun rises in the East and sets in the West. twice that time does It rise to the South and set to the North. So long is the time for enjoyment by the Rudras.

(1—4).

_____()_____

Thus ends the Seventh Khanda of Adhyaya III.

ADHYA'YA III.

KHANDA VIII.

-0-

अथ यत्तृतीयममृतं तदादित्या उपजीवन्ति वरुणेन मुखेन न वे देवा अश्नन्ति न पिबन्त्येतदेवामृतं दृष्ट्या तृप्यन्ति ॥ १ ॥ त एतदेव रूपमभिसंविशन्त्यतस्माद्रूपादुद्यन्ति ॥ २ ॥ स य एतदेवममृतं वेदाऽऽदित्यानामेवेको भूत्वा वरुणेनेव मुखेनेतदेवामृतं दृष्ट्या तृप्यति स एतदेव रूपमभिसंविशत्ये-तस्माद्र्पादुदेति ॥ ३ ॥

स यावदादित्यो दक्षिणत उदेतोत्तरतोऽस्तमेता द्विस्तावत्प-रचादुदेता पुरस्तादस्तमेताऽऽदित्यानामेव तावदाधिपत्य ५ स्वा-राज्यं पर्येता ॥ ४ ॥

That which is the third nectar, on that live the A'dityas, with Varuna at their head. Verily the Gods do not either eat or drink. Looking upon this nectar, they are satisfied. (1).

They retire into this colour, and rise from this colour. (2).

One who thus knows this nectar becomes one of the A'dityas; and with Varuna at his head, he comes to be satisfied by looking upon this nectar. He retires into this colour, and rises from this colour. (3).

So long as the Sun rises in the South and sets in the North, twice as long does It rise in the West and set in the East. And so long does he attain the sovereign heavenly kingdom of the A'dityas. (4).

Com.-Similarly so long as the Sun rises in the West, in the north and overhead: and sets opposite to these respectively. The mention of the period of time following being twice the time preceding is opposed to the theory of the Puranas. Those versed in the Purana have declared that, on the four sides of the Sun--in the regions of Indra, Yama, Varuna and Some-the time of rising and setting is the same; inasmuch as to the North of the Mânasa lake, on the top of Mount Mern, the space traversed around is always the same. The teachers of old have explained this discrepancy (between the Text and the Puranas). In the regions of Amarâvati and the rest the time of residence in the one following would be double of the one of residence in the region mentioned before; and so on. the "rising" of the Sun here is meant the capability of the Sun to the visible to the eyes of the creatures inhabiting those regions; and "setting" means its invisibility. It is not the ordinary "rising and setting" that is meant here. If there be no inhabitants in any region, then, though the Sun would be passing through that region, yet it would not be said either to "rise" or to "set", because in such a case there would be no visibility or invisibility. So the Samyamani (the Southern Region of Gods) continues to be inhabited twice as long as Amarârati (the Eastern Region); and for the inhabitants of the Southern Region the Sun would rise towards what would be South in our conception, and set towards what would be North for us; and similarly with the Northern Region. For all these Regions, the Meru is to the North. At the time that in Amarârati the Sun would be meridian, in Samyamani It would be seen to be just rising; and when It would be at meridian at this latter place, it would be found to be rising in Varuna's regions (the Western). And similarly in the North; the circle traversed being everywhere the same. For the inhabitants of Ilâvrita, who have the rays of the Sun stopped by enclosures of mountains all round, the Sun is always seen to rise overhead and set below the feet; since the light of the Sun enters through the crevices in the top of the mountains. In the same manner, it may be inferred that persons living upon the various nectars, Rik &c., -as also among the nectars themselves, -there is a gradual increase in their strength and virility; such inference being based upon the fact of the time of enjoyment being doubled, one after another. The "retirement" "rising." &c., are the same for the God's Rudras, &c., as well as for those that know the aforesaid nectars. (1-1).

Thus ends the Eighth Khanda of Adhyûya III.

ADHYA'YA III.

---0---KHANDA IX.

----()----

अथ यचतुंथममृतं तन्मरुत उपजीवन्ति सोमेन मुखेन न वै देवा अश्नित न पिवन्सेतदेवामृतं दृष्ट्वा तृष्यन्ति ॥ १ ॥ त एतदेव रूपमभिसंविशन्सेतस्माद्रूपादुद्यन्ति ॥ २ ॥ स य एतदेवममृतं वेद मरुतामेवेको भूत्वा सोमेनेव मुखेनेतदे-वामृतं दृष्ट्वा तृष्यति स एतदेव रूपमभिसंविशस्येतस्माद्र्पादु-देति ॥ ३ ॥

स यावदादित्यः पश्चादुदेता पुरस्तादस्तमेता द्विस्तावदुत्तरत उदेता दक्षिणतोऽस्तमेता मरुतामेव तावदाधिपत्य ५ स्वाराज्यं पर्येता ॥ ४ ॥ That which is the fourth nectar, on that live the Maruts, with Soma at their head. Verily, the Gods do not either eat or drink; looking upon this nectar. they are satisfied. (1).

They retire into this colour, and rise from this colour. (2).

One who knows this nectar, becomes one of the Maruts, and with Soma at his head, he comes to be satisfied by looking upon this nectar. He retires into this colour, and rises from this colour. (3).

So long as the Sun rises in the West and sets in the East, twice as long, does It rise in the North and set in the South. And so long does he attain the sovereign heavenly Kingdom of the Maruts. (1).

Thus ends the Ninth Khanda of Adhyâya III.

ADHYA'YA III

---O---KHANDA X.

.....()----

अथ यत्पञ्चमममृतं तत्साध्या उपजीवन्ति ब्रह्मणा मुखेन । न वे देवा अश्नन्ति न पिबन्त्येतदेवामृतं दृष्ट्वा तृष्यान्ति ॥ १ ॥ त एतदेव रूपमभिसंविशन्त्येतस्माद्रूपादुद्यन्ति॥२॥ स य एतदेवममृतं वेद साध्यानामेवेको भूत्वा ब्रह्मणेव मुखेने-तदेवामृतं दृष्ट्वा तृष्यति स एतदेव रूपमभिसंविशस्यतस्मा-द्रूपादुदेति ॥ ३ ॥

स यावदादित्य उत्तरत उदेता दक्षिणतोऽस्तमेता द्विस्तावदू-र्ध्व उदेताऽवीङस्तमेता साध्यानामेव तावदांधिपत्य ५ स्वाराज्यं पर्येता ॥ ४ ॥

That which is the fifth nectar, on that live the Sâdh-yas, with Brahmâ at their head. Verily, the gods do not either eat or drink. Looking upon this nectar, they are satisfied. (1).

They retire into this colour, and rise from this colour. (2).

One who knows this nectar, becomes one of the Sådhyas; and with Brahma at his head, he comes to be satisfied by looking upon this nectar. He retires into this colour, and rises from this colour. (3).

So long as the Sun rises in the North, and sets in the South, twice as long does, It rise overhead and set down below. And so long does he attain the sovereign heavenly kingdom of the Nádhyas. (4).

Thus ends the Tenth Khanda of Adhyâya 111.

ADHYA'YA III.

· ·--()----KHANDA XI.

-0-

अथ तत ऊर्ध्व उदेख नैवोदेता नास्तमेतिकल एव मध्ये स्थाता तदेष इलोकः ॥ १॥

Now rising from thence upward, He neither rises nor sets; He stands alone in the middle. (1).

Com.—Having by the aforesaid rising and setting helped the creatures to experience the effects of their actions,—when these experiences have ended—the Sun takes all the creatures into himself; and then, having risen beyond the time of helping the creatures, He rises within himself, on account of the absence of the creatures for whose sake he used to rise. And thus being located within himself, He does not rise, nor does He set; but alone, by Himself,—i.e., without any parts—He stands in the "middle"—i.e., within himself. Now a certain learned person, being in the position of the Vasus, &c., and partaking of the enjoyment of the nectars "Red" and the rest, and having worshipped the Sun as the Self, and thereby becoming meditative, saw this mantra; and then rising from his meditation spoke to another person who had questioned him thus: "Since you have come from the Brahmic regions, will you tell me whether, there too as here, the Sun moves along nights and days and thereby cuts short the lives of living beings." Being thus asked, the reply that the meditating person gave is expressed in the following verse, as mentioned in the text below.

न वै तत्र न निम्लोच नोादियाय कदाचन देवास्तेनाह ५ सत्येन मा विराधिषि ब्रह्मणेति॥ २ ॥

It is not so there; He has not set; nor has He ever risen. O ye gods! by this truth, may I not fall from Brahma. (2).

Com.—In the regions of Brahma, from where I have come, there is nothing like what you ask. Because there the Sun has never set; nor has He ever risen at any time. Being exhorted that his assertion as to the Brahmic region being without the Sun rising or setting, is not possible,—the Yogi swears, as it were: O ye gods who are witness to what I say, listen to what I say as the truth; and by this truth may I not fall from—be opposed to Brahma.

न ह वा अस्मा उदेति न निम्छोचित सक्वादिवा हैवास्मै भव-ति य एतामेवं ब्रह्मोपनिपदं वेद ॥ ३ ॥ One who thus knows the secret of Brahma.— for him, the Sun neither rises nor sets; for him, there is day once for all.

(3).

Com.—With a view to show that the reply given above is true, the Text declares: "For him dv." For one who knows Brahma as explained above, the Sun neither rises nor sets; but for the Brahma-knower, there is day once for all.—i.e., for him there is always day; inasmuch as he is self-luminous. This is for one, who knows the secret of Brahma—i.e., the three Vasus &c., the relations of the nectars, and whatever else has been explained above. The meaning is that the knower becomes the eternal unborn Brahma, not conditioned by time as marked by the rising and setting of the Sun.

तद्भेतद्रह्मा प्रजापतय उवाच प्रजापितमनवे मनुः प्रजाभ्य-स्तद्भेतदुद्दालकायाऽऽरुणये ज्येष्टाय पुत्राय पिता ब्रह्म प्रोवाच॥४॥

Brahma explained this to Prajāpati, Prajāpati to Manu, and Manu to his descendants. And to Uddālaka A'runi the eldest son, his father explained this Brahma. (4).

Com.—This doctrine of Honey, Brahmâ Hiranyagarbha explained to Prajâpati Virât. This latter explained it to Manu. And Manu to his descendants Ikshvâlu, &c. This line of teachers is mentioned in order to enhance the value of the doctrine. And further this doctrine of Honey was explained to Uddâlaka A'runi by his Father,—A'runi being the eldest son.

इदं वाव तज्ज्येष्टाय पुत्राय पिता ब्रह्म प्रब्रूयात्प्रणाय्याय वाऽन्ते-वासिने ॥ ५ ॥

This Brahma the Father may explain to his eldest son or to a worthy disciple. (5).

Com.—The aforesaid doctrine of Brahma may be explained by other people also to the eldest son, who is the dearest of all, or to a worthy or deserving disciple.

नान्यस्मे कस्मैचन यद्यप्यस्मा इमामद्भिः परिगृहीतां धनस्य पूर्णी दद्यादेतदेव ततो भूय इत्येतदेव ततो भूय इति ॥ ६ ॥

And to no one else; even if he gave him the whole of the sea-girt earth full of treasure; for this is greater than that,—yea greater than that. (6).

Com.—He should not explain it to any body else. For all the teachers of innumerable places, only two are allowed (for the imparting of the secret). Why this limitation? If to such a teacher, one was to give all this sea-girt earth filled with all sorts of treasures and necessaries of life,—in exchange for the secret doctrine,—even then, all this would not be a fit exchange for it, because the imparting of the secret of the Honey-doctrine is very much greater—more useful—than all the treasures &c. The repetition implies reverence for the doctrine.

Thus ends the Eleventh Khanda of Adhyâya III.

ADHYA'YA III.

KHANDA XII.

---0---

गायत्री वा इद ५ सर्वे भूतं यदिदं किंच वाग्वे गायत्री वाग्वा इद ५ सर्वे भूतं गायति च त्रायते च ॥ १ ॥

Gâyatri is everything, whatsoever here exists. Speech indeed is Gâyatri; for speech sings out and protects everything whatsoever here exists. (1).

Com.—Inasmuch as this doctrine of Brahma leads to such excellent and transcendental results, it should be explained in another way also. In order to do this the text begins with "Gâyatri is &c." and explains the Brahma by means of the Gâyatri; because Brahma—being free from all specifications and amenable only to such negations as 'not this, not that '—is incomprehensible by itself. Though there are many metres, yet it is the Gâyatri alone that is taken as a means of explaining Brahma; simply because this is the most important of all the metres. And the all-importance of the Gânatri at a sacrifice is due to the facts (1) of the Soma being held by this, (2) of its including the letters of all other metres and thus pervading over them, and (3) of its pervading over all the oblations at a sacrifice. And further, since Gâuatri is the essence of the Brahmana. even the aforesaid Brahma does not have recourse to anything greater, neglecting the Gâgatri, which is very great in itself, and which is like the mother of the Brâhmana. And this, because it is a well-known fact. the Gâyatri is something very great. For this reason it is by means of the Gâyatri that Brahma is explained. "Vâ" means indeed. "Everything" i.e., all the living beings, animate or inanimate-is Gâyatri. Since it would be impossible for a metre to be everything, the text explains Gâyatri as "speech" which is the source of the Gâyatri. "Speech indeed is Gâyatri." "Speech is everything." Because speech, having the form of Word "sings out all living beings,"—i.e., names them as "the Cow" "the Horse"—and protects them—i.e., encourages them, such as 'don't be afraid of this; wherefore dost thou fear ' and the like: and these being thus encouraged, become saved from all cause of fear. speech sings and protects all things is due to the fact of its being identical with Gâyatri. Because the Gâyatri is called "Gâyatri," simply because it sings Gâyatri and protects (trâyatê).

या वे सा गायत्रीयं वाव सा येयं पृथिव्यस्या ५ हीद ५ सर्वे भूतं प्रतिष्ठितमेतामेव नातिशीयते ॥ २ ॥

That Gâyatri is this earth. For everything that exists rests on this; and does not go beyond it. (2).

Com.—The aforesaid Gâyatri, which is everything that exists, is this earth. It is explained how it is the earth; because it is related to all living beings. But how is it related to all beings? Because all beings, either animate or inanimate, rest on the earth and never transcend it. Just as the Gâyatri comes to be related to all beings, by singing and protecting, so does the earth become related to all beings, on account of the beings resting upon it. Hence Gâyatri is this earth.

या वे सा पृथिवीयं वाव सा यदिदमस्मिन्पुरुषे शरीरम-स्मिन्हीमे प्राणाः प्रतिष्ठिता एतदेव नातिशीयन्ते ॥ ३ ॥

That earth again is the body in man; because the vital airs are located in this and do not go beyond it (3).

Com.—That earth which has been said to be $G\hat{a}yatri$ is this. What is it? It is that aggregate of causes and effects which is known as the "body" in a living man. Because the body is earthy. But how does the body come to be $G\hat{a}yatri$? Well, because it is in this that are located the vital airs—known by the name "Bhûta" (Element). Thus then like the Earth, the body is the residence of the vital airs known as "elements" and hence the body is Gâyatri. Also because the vital airs do not transcend this body.

यद्वे तत्पुरुषे शरीरिमदं वाव तद्यदिदमस्मिन्नन्तः पुरुषे हृदयम-स्मिन्हीमे प्राणाः प्रतिष्ठिता एतदेव नातिशीयन्ते ॥ ४ ॥

That body in the man is the heart within the man. Because, in that, the vital airs rest; and they do not go beyond it.

(4)

Com.—The body in man is Gâyatri. And that which is the heart in man—known by the name of "lotus"—is Gâyatri. How? Because the vital airs rest in it therefore like the body, it is Gâyatri. And the vital airs do not transcend this. "Prâna is the father, Prâna the mother! not harming any beings"—such are the srutis. The vital airs are denoted by the word "Bhûta."

सैषा चतुष्पदा षड्विधा गायत्री तदेतदृचाऽभ्यनूक्तम् ॥ ५ ॥

This Gàyatri has four feet, and is six fold. This is also declared by a Rik. (5).

Com.—The Gâyatri is a metre with four feet, each foot having four syllables. It is six-fold in the shape of speech, creatures, earth, body, heart, and vital airs.

Speech and vital airs, though mentioned in connection with something else, are also forms of the Gâyatri. Otherwise, the number six would be impossible. This Brahma, known as "Gâyatri" is also declared by another Rik, through the Gâyatri.

तावानस्य महिमा ततो ज्याया ५२च पूरुषः पादोऽस्य सर्वा भूतानि त्रिपादस्यामृतं दिवीति ॥ ६ ॥

Such is the greatness of It. Greater than It is the Purusha. His foot are all things. The three-footed Immortal is in heaven. (6).

Com.—Such is the greatness of this Brahma called "Gâyatri." "Such "-i.e., as much as has been just explained as the Gâyatri having its foot as an emanation from Brahma, and having four feet and being six fold. Than this Brahma, named Gâyatri, and partaking of the nature of an emanation, and having only a verbal existence,—the Purusha is greater,—this Purusha, having an existence in reality and not being a product, is called "Purusha" because it fills everything and lies in the body. "His foot are all things"-Light, Food, &c., animate as well as inanimate. "Three-footed" -i.e., having three feet. The three-footed immortalknown as "Purusha"—lies in the heaven of all that consists of Gayatri; that is to say, in the resplendent Self of his own.

यद्वे तद्वहोतीदं वाव तद्योऽयं बहिर्धा पुरुषादाकाशो यो वै स बहिर्धा पुरुषादाकाशः ॥ ७॥

This Brûhma is the A'kâsa outside the Purusha. (7).

Com.—That which has been explained by means of the Gâyatri, as the three-footed Immortal Brahmo, is the same as the well-known element A'kâsa, which surrounds the Purusha on the outside.

अयं वाव सयोऽयमन्तः पुरुष आकाशो यो वै सोऽन्तः पुरुष आकाशः ॥ ८ ॥

The A'kāsa that is outside the Purusha is the A'kasa that is inside the Purusha. (8).

Com.—The A'kâsa which surrounds the Purusha on the outside is that A'kâsa which is within the Purusha.

अयं वाव स योऽयमन्तर्हृदय आकाशस्तदेतत्पूर्णमप्रवातैं पूर्णामप्रवर्तिनी ५ श्रियं लभते य एवं वेद ॥ ९ ॥

The $A'k\hat{a}sa$ that is inside the Perusha is the $A'k\hat{a}sa$ within the heart; and this is omnipresent and unchanging. He who knows this obtains complete and imperishable greatness. (9).

Com.—The A'kâsa that is inside the Purusha is the A'kâsa within the lotus of the heart. How can a single A'kâsa be three-fold? This is explained with regard to the objects of the external senses in the A'kâsa of the waking state, we come across an excess of unhappiness.

In comparison with this the pain is less intense inside the body, which is the place for dreams; for, one is dreaming. In the A'kâsa inside the heart again, one does not desire any desires, and dreams no dreams; hence the $A'k\hat{a}sa$ of deep sleep is one, wherein there is complete cessation of all pain. In this way it is only proper that a single A'kâsa should be three-fold. Beginning with the A'kasa, outside the person, the Text has gradually confined the A'kâsa to within the heart, with a view to eulogise the place where the mind is to be concentrated. Just as "among the three worlds Kurukshetra is the most important; half of it is Kurukshetra and half Prithûdaka." This Brahma, in the shape of the A'kasa in the heart is omnipresent, and should not be taken as being confined within the heart only. And though the mind is concentrated upon the A'kâsa in the heart, yet, It is unchangingi.e., not capable of any changes, and as such imperishable. Other things being changeable and limited are perishable; but the A'kasa within the heart is not so. He obtains complete and imperishable greatness,—one who realises, during the present life, the existence of the omnipresent and unchanging Brahma just described.

Thus ends the Twelfth Khanda of Adhyaya III.

ADHYA'YA III.

--0--

KHANDA XIII.

तस्य ह वा एतस्य हृदयस्य पञ्च देवसुषयः स योऽस्य प्रा-ङ् सुषिः स प्राणस्तचक्षुः स आदित्यस्तदेतत्तेजोऽन्नाद्यमित्युपासीत तेजरूयन्नादो भवति य एवं वेद ॥ १ ॥

Of that Heart there are five gates of the Devas. That which is the Eastern gate is the $Pr\hat{u}na$; that is the Eye; that is the Sun. One ought to meditate upon this as brightness and health. One who knows this becomes bright and healthy. (1).

Com.—"Of that &c.": this section is begun with a view to lay down the specialities of the gate-keeper &c., as forming part of the meditation of the Brâhma named "Gâyatri." Just as in the ordinary world, the gate-keepers, being won over by the service of the King, become the means of approaching the King himself, so too, in the present case. Of the Heart, spoken of above, there are five gates belonging to the Devas; that is to say, the door-ways by which one could get at the Heavenly Regions, and which are guarded by the Devas, Prâna, Sun and the rest. It is for this reason that they are called the "Gates of the Devas." Of this Heart-which is, as it were the Palace of Heaventhat which is the Eastern gate—that is to say, the gate-way on the Eastern side, -is Prâna residing therein,—that is to say, the particular breath that moves forward along that gate. Connected with this, and identical with it is the Eue: and so also is the Sun,—as declared by the Sruti-" He is the exterior Prâna." And the Sun resides in the heart through its residence in the shape of the eye:—as declared in the Vajasanêya: "Wherein is the Sun resident? In the eye." The deity of the up-breathing (Prâna) is one and the same with the Eye and the Sun, together with its substratum. It will be declared further on; "Svåhå to Pråna—the oblation offered with this satisfies all this." This Prana. being the keeper of the gate of Heaven, is Brahma. One desiring to get at the Heavenly regions should meditate upon Prâna as endowed with brightness—in the shape of the Eye and the Sun,—and as Health, because the Sun is health. And the result accruing is that one who knows this becomes bright and healthy. Being won over by meditation, the gate-keeper becomes the means of arriving at the Heavenly regions. This is the most important result.

अथ योऽस्य दक्षिणः सुषिः स व्यानस्तच्छ्रेात्र५्स चन्द्रमास्त-

देतच्छ्रीरच यरारचेत्युपासित श्रीमान्यरास्त्री भवति य एवं वेद ॥२॥

Now that which is its Southern gate is Vyâna, that is the Ear, that is the Moon. One ought to meditate upon it as prosperity and fame. He who knows this becomes prosperous and famous. (2).

Com.—"That which is its Southern gate"—the particular Breath located therein performs vigorous deeds by taking hold of the Prâna and Apâna, and then moving alone; hence it is Vyana; and related to this is the Ear, and similarly that is the moon,—as declared by the Sruti; "By means of the Ear are created the Quarters and also the Moon."-both of these together with their substrata, as explained above. "As prosperity and fame ": the Ear and the Moon are the causes of knowledge and food respectively; and hence through these, the Vyana has prosperity (for its attribute). And one who has knowledge and food (wealth) obtains fame; and thus leading to fame, it has the character of fame. Hence one ought to meditate upon it, as endowed with these two properties. The rest is similar to the last passage.

अथ योऽस्य प्रत्यङ् सुषिः सोऽपानः सा वाक्सोऽग्निस्तदेत-इक्कवर्चसमन्नाद्यमित्युपासीत ब्रह्मवर्चस्यन्नादो भवति य एवं वेद ॥ ३ ॥ That which is its Western gate is Apàna, that is speech, that is Fire. One ought to meditate upon it as Brahmic glory and health. He who knows this attains Brahmic glory and becomes healthy. (3).

Com.—"That which is its Western gate"—the particular breath located therein is $Ap\hat{a}na$ —so called because it serves the purpose of throwing out the excretions. It is speech. And being connected with speech, it is also Fire. This is "Brahmic glory"—the glory of countenance resulting from a proper study of the Vedas; and a proper study of the Vedas is connected with Fire. And $Ap\hat{a}na$ is also health, inasmuch as it serves to swallow food. The rest as before.

अथ योऽस्योदङ् सुषिः स समानस्तन्मनः स पर्जन्यस्तदेत-त्कीर्तिश्च व्युष्टिरचेत्युपासीत कीर्तिमान्व्युष्टिमान्भवति य एवं वेद ॥ ४ ॥

That which is its Northern gate is Samâna, that is Mind, that is Rain. One should meditate upon it as Fame and Beauty. One who knows this becomes famous and beautiful. (4).

Com.—"That which is its Northern gate"—the particular Breath located therein is Samāna,—so called because it reduces all food and drink to an equilibrium. Connected with this is the Mind, the internal organ; and it is also Rain; i.e., the deity presiding over Rain; because Water was created by the Mind; so says the Sruti: "By the Mind were created Water and Varuna." This is fame; because the knowledge of the Mind brings about Fame,—by which is meant celebrity behind one's back; and "Vyushti" is self-recognised beauty of the body. And since this leads to fame; one acquires Fame &c., &c., &c., as before.

अथ योऽस्योर्ध्वः सुषिः स उदानः स वायुः स आकाशस्त-देतदोजश्च महश्चेत्युपासीतौजस्त्री महस्वान्भवति य एवं वेदं ॥५॥

That which is its upper gate is Udâna, that is, Air, that is A'kâsa. One should meditate upon it as strength and greatness. One who knows this becomes strong and great. (5).

Com.—"That which is its upper gate is Udâna",—so called, because from the soles of the foot upward, it keeps moving along upwards, and works for prosperity. It is Air, and also its substratum, the A'kâsa. And since Air and A'kasa are the causes of strength and greatness, it is strength and greatness. The rest is similar to what has gone before.

ते वा एते पञ्च ब्रह्मपुरुषाः स्वर्गस्य लेकस्य द्वारपाः स य एतानेवं पञ्च ब्रह्मपुरुषान्स्वर्गस्य लोकस्य द्वारपान्वेदास्य कुले

वीरो जायते प्रतिपद्यते स्वर्गे छोकं य एतानेवं पञ्च ब्रह्मपुरुषा-न्स्वर्गस्य छोकस्य द्वारपान्वेद ॥ ६ ॥

These verily are the five Brahma-persons, the gate-keepers of the Regions of Heaven. One who knows these five Brahma-persons, the gate-keepers of the regions of Heaven, in his family a brave one is born; and he himself reaches the regions of Heaven,—one who thus knows the five Brahma-persons, the gate-keepers of the Regions of Heaven. (6).

Com.—The five persons described above in connection with the five gates, are the persons-i.e., servants-of the Brahma in the heart,—and these are the gatekeepers of the Regions of Heaven in the Heart; just as there are gate-keepers for a King. By means of these—the Eye, Ear, Speech, Mind and Prâna, when engaged in upward activity—are closed the gates by which the Brahma in the heart could be reached. It is a fact of ordinary perception that, so long as the organs are not subjugated, the mind does not rest in the Brahma in the Heart, on account of its being submerged in attachment to external objects, devoid of any reality. Therefore it is only too true that these five persons of Brahma are the gate-keepers of the Regions of Heaven. Consequently one, who knows and meditates upon the above-described five persons of Brahma, the gate-keepers of the Regions of Heaven,—that is to say, brings them under control, by means of meditation,—such a person reaches the Brahma in the heart; just as a person who has won over the wardens of a king, is not stopped by them, and approaches the king without any molestation. And further, in the family of such a one who knows this, is born a brave son; because he serves a brave person. And since a son serves to clear off one's debts, therefore the hope of such a result leads to people meditating upon Brahma. And again, then gradually, such knowledge leads to another result, viz., the attainment of the Regions of Heaven.

अथ यदतः परो दिवो ज्योतिर्दीप्यते विश्वतः पृष्ठेषु सर्वतः पृष्ठेष्वनुत्तमेषूत्तमेषु लोकेष्विदं वाव तद्यदिदमस्मिन्नन्तः पुरुषे ज्यो-तिस्तस्येषा दृष्टिर्यत्नेतदस्मिञ्छर्रारे स ५ स्पर्शेनोष्णिमानं विजानाति तस्येषा श्रुतिर्यत्रेतत्कर्णाविषगृह्य निनदमिव नद्युरिवाग्नेरिव ज्व-लत उपशृणोति तदेतद्दष्टं च श्रुतं चेत्युपासीत चक्षुष्यः श्रुतो भवति य एवं वेद य एवं वेद ॥ ७॥

Now that light which shines above this Heaven, above everything, above all, in the highest worlds beyond which there are no worlds, that is the same as the light within the Man. And it is thus visible: as when, in this body, we know the warmth by touch. It is thus audible: as when, on closing the Ears thus, one hears something like rumbling or bellowing, or the flaming of fire. One should meditate upon this that which is seen and heard. One who knows this, becomes conspicuous and celebrated—yea one who knows this. (7).

Com.—It has been declared that one who knows this and meditates upon the brave person, reaches Heaven; and it is also said that the three-footed immortal resides in Heaven. Now it must be proved that such a one is cognisable by means amenable to such organs as the Eye and the Ear; just as the existence of Fire is proved by the presence of smoke, &c. It is only by this means that people could have a firm belief in what has been said; by no other means could any conviction result. With this view, it is declared: "That light which shines above this region of Heaven," -the light self-luminous, and appearing as if shining (because there is no possibility of that supreme light shining, in the ordinary sense of the word, as applied to fire &c.) "Above everything" is explained by "above all things"; that is to say, above the universe; because the universe is everything; and also because that which is beyond the universe is one and non-different. "Beyond which there are no worlds." In order to avoid the chance of people interpreting 'anuttameshu

Tatpurusha compound (meaning not-high). it is added "in the highest worlds"-i.e., in the Regions of Satya &c. These are called "highest" because they are very near to the Supreme Lord, as residing in his immediate effects, Hiranyagarbha and the like. This light is the same as the one which is within the man,—cognisable, through warmth and sound which are perceivable by the Eve and the Ear. The touch that is perceived by the skin is also perceived by the Eye; the skin only serving to strengthen the visual perception; because colour and touch are always concomitant. It is now explained how the marks of that light are amenable to the Eye and the Ear. "As when "-an adverb-" in this body," touching it by the hand, one cognises the warmth of touch, which is always concomitant with form. This warmth quite consistently comes to be the mark of the Light of the Intelligent self, which has entered into the body, for the purpose of differentiating name and form. Because warmth is never apart from the Self during life. one is known to be living while he is warm, and to be dying when he is cold; and at the time of death, the Light reverts to the Supreme Deity; and is thus held to emanate from the Supreme. Therefore warmth is a distinguishing mark of the Light, just as smoke is of Fire. Thus then, of this Supreme Light, the following is the means of seeing It directly. In the same manner, of that Light, the following is the means of hearing It directly. When a person wishes to hear the mark of the Light, then he closing his ears thus, -by means of his fingers—hears within the body, a rumbling like that of a chariot, or a bellowing, like that of the bull, or a sound like the flaming of fire. Thus then, this Light, having visible and audible marks, should be meditated upon as something seen and heard. By such meditation one becomes conspicuous and famous. "Conspicuous"—this expresses the result accruing in the form or body, from meditation upon the Light as endowed with warmth of touch; because touch and form are always concomitant; and also because conspicuousness of form is what is most desired. It is only in this way that the mention of the resultconspicuousness—could be explained; and not if the the result were said to consist only in softness of touch and the like. "One who knows"-the two properties as described above. (This is the visible result). invisible result has already been explained, in the shape of the attainment of the Regions of Heaven. The repetition is meant to show reverence for the subiect treated of.

Thus ends the Thirteenth Khanda of Adhyaya III.

ADHYA'YA III.

KHANDA XIV

---0---

सर्वे खिल्वदं ब्रह्म तज्जलानिति शान्त उपासीत अथ खलु ऋतुमयः पुरुषो यथा ऋतुरस्मि ५ लोके पुरुषो भवति तथेतः प्रेत्य भवति स ऋतुं कुवीत ॥ १ ॥

All this is Brahma; beginning, ending and continuing in It. One ought to meditate upon It calmly. Now, because Man consists in his will. According as his will is in this world, so will the Man be after he has departed hence. He ought to have (this) will. (1).

Com.—With a view to lay down the meditation, as endowed with particular excellences, of the same Brahma as the one described above as the "three-footed immortal" one, endowed with endless properties and infinite powers, and capable of being meditated upon endless forms,—it is declared: "All this &c.": "Khalu" is only as an ornament of speech without any meaning here. "This" universe, differentiated into Name and Form, forming the object of Perception &c,—"is Brahma," the cause; it is called "Brahma," because of its high development. "But how can the character of Brahma belong to all?" It is explained: "as beginning, ending and continuing in it." Everything, beginning with Light, Food &c., is born out of Brahma; hence "beginning in It." Similarly in an order reverse of that of birth, all this dissolves into Brahma,—becomes identified with It: hence "ending in It." In the same manner, during existence, everything lives and moves in It; (hence "continuing in It"). Thus, at all periods of time this universe remains one with Brahma; and is never cognised apart from It. Consequently, this Universe is That (Brahma) itself. As such is the case, so it is one, without a second,—as will be explained in detail in the sixth Adhyaya. Because all this is Brahma, therefore one ought to meditate upon all this. as Brahma, endowed with the properties hereafter explained; and such meditation should be carried on with calmness,-i.e., while meditating one should keep himself controlled, free from the discrepancies of affection, aversion and the like. In what way is one to meditate? "He ought to have this will": "will" is determination that such and such a thing will be thus and never otherwise; and it is this feeling that one should have, and thereby meditate; such is the construction of the passage. Now, what is to be accomplished by having the determination? And in what way is one to have the determination? "Now man, &c." is meant to show the having of a will brings about the accomplishment of a desired end. "Atha khalu"because; because the living man consists in his will—i.e., is constituted by his determination. According as a man's will or determination is, in this world, during his present life,—so does he become when he has departed from this body;—that is to say, his condition is in keeping with a result in accordance with his will. This fact we come to know from the scriptures: "Thinking over whatever disposition, one renounces the body in the end, &c." (Bhagavad Gîta). And inasmuch as such sequence is maintained by the Scriptures, one who knows this, should have this will-i.e., the will or determination that we are going to explain. The meaning is that since the Scriptures lay down the fact of future results being in keeping with one's determinations, therefore one ought to have this will.

मनोमयः प्राणशरीरो भारूपः सत्यसंकल्प आकाशात्मा सर्वकर्मा सर्वकामः सर्वगन्धः सर्वरसः सर्वमिदमभ्यात्तोऽवाक्यनादरः ॥२॥

The Intelligent, whose form is light, whose thoughts are true, whose nature is like A'kâsa, the Creator of all, all desires, all odours. all tastes,—pervading over all this, being without speech, without confusion. (2).

Com.—What sort of will or determination is one to have? "The Intelligent"-(literally) consisting of the mind, 'Mind' being explained as that by which one thinks: i.e., that which exercises its own independent function towards objects. "Consisting of mind" means functioning like the mind and desisting also like it. Hence also it is one "whose body is spirit": by "Prâna" here is meant the "Astral self" imbedded in intelligence and activity. "That which is Prana is intelligence, that which is intelligence is Prana"-says the Sruti. And this Prana is his body. "Whose form is light": "Light" is effulgence in the shape of consciousness; and this is his form. "Whose thoughts are true": one whose determinations are never false. Of ordinary worldly people, the determination is not always successful; such is not the case with the Lord. A determination is said to have false results, when it is based upon untrue foundations; as will be explained later on-"based upon untruth &c." "Whose nature is like A'kasa": the similarity of the Lord to A'kasa censists of omnipresence, subtle character, absence of shape &c. "Creator of all" the whole universe is his creation: and the whole world being His creation, He is one whose creation everything is; says the Sruti "He is the Creator of all." "Having all desires": i.e., one who has all the desires, that are free from evil; -- says the Sruti: "I am the desires with regard to creatures, not contrary to virtue." 'Well, the assertion being that 'I am the desires,' the word 'Sarvakâma in the Text cannot be explained as a 'Bahuvrîhi' compound (but a Genitive Tatpurusha).', Not so: Inasmuch as desire is something caused. (if the Lord were held to be identical with the desire). He would come to be for another's sake, just like sound &c. Therefore the assertion "I am desire" must be explained in accordance with 'Sarvakâma' taken as Bahuvrihi compound. "Having all odours:" i.e., one who is endowed with all pleasing odours; says the Smriti: 'Pure smell in the Earth.' The same is the case with "tastes," inasmuch as the experience of impure odour and taste is declared to be due to connection with evil: says the Sruti: "Hence one smells both what is good-smelling and what is bad-smelling, because he is struck with evil." And for the Lord, 'there is no connection with evil: inasmuch as in Him, there is no possibility of the discrepancies of ignorance and the rest. "Pervading over all this" universe. "Without speech": "Vâk" is that whereany by thing is spoken, and identical with this is "Vâka"; or "Vâka" may be explained as "Vachi+ghan (instrumental)". One to whom this belongs is "Vâki." and he who is not â this is "Avâki". The negation of speech is tentative; people would think that for the purpose of cognising odour, taste, &c., the Lord has adequate organs, the nose and others; but all these are negatived by the negation of speech; say the texts also: "without hands and feet He moves and holds, sees without eyes, and hears without ears". "Without confusion:" when one fails to attain a desired object, he becomes confused; while the Lord, having all His desires fulfilled, and thus being eternally satisfied, can never have any confusion.

एष म आत्माऽन्तर्हृदयेऽणीयान्त्रीहेर्त्रा यवाद्वा सर्षपाद्वा स्यामा-काद्वा स्थामाकतण्डुलाद्वेष म आत्माऽन्तर्हृदये ज्यायान्पृथिव्या ज्यायानन्तरीक्षाज्ज्यायान्दिवो ज्यायानेभ्यो लोकोभ्यः ॥ ३ ॥

This is my Self within the heart, smaller than a corn, than barley, than mustard, than the kernel of the mustard seed. He is my Self within the heart, greater than the Earth, greater than the sky, greater than heaven, greater than all these worlds. (3).

Com.—"This" the above described, "Self" is my Self within the heart—i.e., in the lotus of the heart,—smaller than a corn, than barley &c., all of which are meant to denote Its extremely subtle nature. "Smaller than mustard, and than the kernel of the mustard,

&c. would mean that the Self having a definite size, has the size of an atom; hence with a view to nagative such an idea, it is added: "This is my Self within the heart, greater than the Earth &c. &c." This shows that, when of a great size, It is great, whereby it is signified that It is of infinite size. Such being the import of all the passages beginning with "The Intelligent" and ending with "greater than all these worlds."

सर्वकर्मा सर्वकामः सर्वगन्धः सर्वरसः सर्वमिदमभ्यात्तोऽवाक्य-नादर एव म आत्माऽन्तर्हृदय एतद्गृह्शैतमितः प्रेत्याभिसंभविता-स्मीति यस्य स्यादद्धा न विचिकित्साऽस्तीति ह स्माऽऽह शाण्डिल्यः शाण्डिल्यः ॥ ४ ॥

Having all actions, having all desires, having all odours, having all tastes, pervading over all this, without speech, without confusion;—This my self within the heart, is that Brahma. I shall attain It, on departing from this world. Verily, one who has this faith, has no uncertainties. Thus said Sândilya—yea Sândilya. (4).

Com.—The Lord is to be meditated upon as pointed out by the aforesaid qualifications, and not as qualified by them. In ordinary parlance, when one says "bring the king's man" or "one having cows of variegated colour," people do not go to fetch the qualifications; so too, people might apply the same rule to the case in question. Hence with a view to negative this misconception, the Text repeats: "Having all actions, &c." Therefore it is the Lord, as qualified by the above-described properties of Intelligence and the rest, that is to be meditated upon. It is for this reason too that in the 6th and 7th Chapters, we have "That Thou art," "All this is Self alone," "It does not make him the King of Heaven here." The force of the sentence "This my Self is Brahma" shows that the word "Self" here does not denote the "counter-self" alone; because the genitive case ending in "thy," which denotes relation, as also "this I shall attain", shows that the one is the nominative and the other the objective. "In the 6th Chapter too, 'then do I attain Eminence,' points to the fact of the attainment of Eminence being removed by a certain period of time." Not so: because the passage you quote only signifies the fact of the body continuing for a while, under the influence of the momentum imported by past experiences and as such there is no difference of time. Otherwise, the meaning of these passages would contradict the sense of such passages as "That thou art" &c. Though it is true that the fact of the word "Self" here signifying the "Counter-self" is supported by the fact of Brahma being the object of the discourse, on account of such passages as "All this is Brahma," "This my Self in the heart is that Brahma; "—yet the text makes mention of the disappearance of this Self without totally giving up the aforesaid Self: "when I shall attain this, on departing from this body." One who has a firm conviction that, 'I know the Self of the nature of the Will' and has a firm faith that on departure from this body he would surely return to it, such a one has no uncertainties as to any chance of his not reaching to that. One who knows all this becomes endowed with the powers of the Lord, with reference to the above-described results of the aforesaid determination,—so said Sandilya. the sage. The repetition is meant to show reverence to the subject treated of.

Thus ends the Fourteenth Khanda of Adhyâya III.

ADHYA'YA III.

KHANDA XV.

अन्तारक्षोदरः कोशो भूमिबुद्रो न जीर्यति दिशो ह्यस्य श्रक्तयो चौरस्योत्तरं बिल ५स एष कोशो वसुधानस्तस्मिन्विश्व-मिद ५श्रितम् ॥ १॥ The chest, having the sky for its inside and the earth for its bottom, does not decay; the quarters are its corners, and heaven is its upper lid. This chest is a treasury; within it rest all this. (1).

Com.—It has been said above that "a brave son is born in his family." But the mere birth of a brave son is not enough for the protection of the father, because says another Text, "it is only a properly instructed son that they call good." Hence with a view to consider the means of making him long-lived, the Doctrine of the chest is now begun. It would have been brought in just after the aforesaid passage; but since the consideration of more important matters intervened, it is considered The chest that has the sky for its inner space -is called 'chest' because it resembles a chest in many respects; -- and it has the Earth for its base or bottom. This chest never decays; because it constitutes all the three worlds; and as such continues to exist through thousands of aeons. The quarters are its corners, and Heaven the upper lid of this chest. This above described chest "is a treasury"—i.e., that in which treasures, in the shape of the results of the actions of living beings, are deposited. Within it, rests "all this"—the results of actions together with the causes thereof as cognised by means of sense-perception and the rest.

तस्य प्राची दिग्जुहूर्नाम सहमाना नाम दक्षिणा राज्ञी नाम प्र-तीची सुभूता नामोदीची तासां वायुर्वत्सः स य एतमेवं वायुं दिशां वत्सं वेद न पुत्ररोद ५ रोदिति सोऽहमेतमेवं वायुं दिशां वत्सं वेद मा पुत्ररोद ५ रुदम् ॥ २ ॥

Its Eastern side is called Juhu, its Southern side is called Sahamūnā, its Western side is called Rājni, its Northern side is called Subhūtā. The child of these is Air. One, who thus knows Air, as the child of the quarters, never weeps for his son. I verily know Air as the child of the quarters,—may I never weep for my son! (2).

Com.—Of this chest, the part to the East is called "Juhû,"—i.e., the side East, turned towards which sacrificers offer the oblations. The Southern side is called the "Suhamânâ"—that quarter, the region of Yama, in which people suffer the results of evil deeds. The Western side is called "Râjui"—so called because it is lorded over by the king Varuna, or because it is red with the colours of evening. The Northern side is called "Subhûtâ,"—because it is lorded over by I'sa, Kubera and others, all having much wealth. "Of these quarters Air is the child,"—because Air is produced from the quarters; as declared by such texts as the "first wind, &c." Thus then, if one who wishes his son to be long-lived, knows the above-described Air as the immortal child of the quarters, he never weeps for the sake of his son,—i.e., his son never dies. Since the knowledge of the doctrine of the Chest, the quarters and their child is so excellent, therefore I, desiring my son to be long-lived, know Air as the child of the quarters. Therefore, may I not weep for the death of my son,—i.e., may I have no occasion to weep for the sake of my son.

अरिष्टं कीशं प्रपद्येऽमुनाऽमुना प्राणं प्रपद्येऽमुनाऽमुनाऽमुना भूः प्रपद्येऽमुनाऽमुनाऽमुना भुवः प्रपद्येऽमुनाऽमुनाऽमुना स्वः प्रपद्येऽमुनाऽमुनाऽमुना ॥ ३ ॥

I turn to the imperishable chest, for such and such and such. I turn to $Pr\hat{a}_{n}a$, for such and such and such. I turn to $Bh\hat{u}h$ for such and such and such. I turn to Bhuvah for such and such and such. I turn to Svah for such and such. (3).

Com.—For the sake of the long life of my son, I turn to the imperishable chest, described above. "For such &c"—he pronounces his son's name three times. Similarly, "I turn to Prâna &c, &c., &c"; always saying "I turn" and repeating his son's name thrice.

स यदवोचं प्राणं प्रपद्य इति प्राणो वा इद ५ सर्वे भूतं य-दिदं किंच तमेव तत्प्रापत्सि ॥ ४ ॥

अथ यदवोचं भूः प्रपद्य इति पृथिवीं प्रपद्येऽन्तारक्षं प्रपद्ये दिवं प्रपद्य इत्येव तदवोचम् ॥ ९ ॥

When I said 'I turn to Prâna,' Prâna is all this that exists—to that turned. (4).

When I said, 'I turn to Bhith,' what I said was that I turn to the Earth, the Sky and Heaven. (5).

Com.—When I said "I turn to Prâna"—is introduced with a view to explain what has been said above. Prâna all this, the whole world, that exists; as will be explained later on: "Just as spokes in the wheel, &c." Hence by turning to Prâna, I turned to all this. In the same manner, when I said "I turn to Bhâh," what I meant was that I turn to the three worlds, the Earth, &c.

अथ यदवोचं भुवः प्रपद्य इत्येग्नि प्रपद्ये वायुं प्रपद्य आदित्यं प्रपद्य इत्येव तदवोचम् ॥ ६॥ अथ यदवोच ५ स्वः प्रपद्य इत्युग्वेदं प्रपद्ये यजुर्वेदं प्रपद्ये सामवेदं प्रपद्य इत्येव तदवोचं तदवो-चम् ॥ ७॥

When I said 'I turn to Bhuvah,' what I said was that I turn to Fire to Air and to the Sun. (6).

When I said 'I turn to Svah,' what I said was that I turn to Rig-veda, to Yajur-veda, to Sama-veda,—Yea that was what I said. (7).

Com.—When I said 'I turn to Bhuvah,' I meant to say that I turn to Fire, &c. When I said 'I turn to Svah, I meant to say that I turn to Rig-veda, &c. One ought to recite the aforesaid Mantras and then he should meditate upon the above-described imperishable chest, together with the child of the quarters. The repetition (of "Yadavocham") is meant to show reverence to the subject of discourse.

Thus ends the Fifteenth Khanda of Adhyaya III.

ADHYA'YA III.

KHANDA XVI

--0---

पुरुषो वाव यदस्तस्य यानि चतुर्वि ५ शतिवर्षाणि तत्प्रातः सवनं चतुर्वि ५ शत्यक्षरा गायत्रि गायत्र प्रातः सवनं तदस्य वसवोऽन्वायत्ताः प्राणा वावं वसव एते होद ५ सर्वे वासयन्ति ॥ १ ॥

Man, verily, is the Sacrifice. His twenty-four years are the morning libation. The $G\hat{a}yatri$ has twenty-four syllables, and the morning-libation is related to the $G\hat{a}yatri$. With this the Vasus are connected. The $Pr\hat{a}nas$ are the Vasus, for they make all this abide. (1).

Com.—The method of meditation and recitation, for the sake of the long life of the son, has been explained. Now the Text proceeds to lay down the meditation and recitation whereby one could prolong his own life. It is only while one is living that he enjoys the company of his son and others; hence the Text describes the person as the Sacrifice. "Man"-i.e., the material aggregate endowed with life-" Verily" "is Sacrifice." The Text next proceeds to establish the fact of the man being Sacrifice, on the ground of his similarities with the Sacrifice. How? The first twentyfour years of the man's life are the morning-libation of the Sacrifice named "Man." What is the similarity between the two? It is this: The Gâyatri metre has twenty-four syllables, and the morning-libation of the Sacrifice is connected with the Gayâtri metre. Therefore through the first twenty-four years of his life, the Man becomes, as it were, equipped with the morninglibation. And this being a point of similarity between the ordinary Sacrifice and the man, he is the Sacrifice. In the same manner the other two parts of the man's life may be explained as the other two libations, based upon the similarity of the years with the number of syllables in the Trishtub and Jagatî metres. And again, with the morning-libation of the "Man" as Sacrifice. just as with that of the ordinary Sacrifice, the Vusus are connected;—i.e., they being the deities of the Libations are their Lords. It may be considered that, as in the ordinary sacrifice, so in the "Man" too, the Vasus meant are the deities Fire and the rest; hence (in order to remove this misconception) this point is specially explained: "The Prânas are the Vasus,"—"Irâna' being the senses, Speech &c, and also the Breaths; because they make all the living creatures, beginning with Man, "abide." It is only while the Prânas abide in the body, that all these continue to live, and never otherwise. Hence inasmuch as the Prânas abide, and make others abide, they are "Vasus."

तं चेदेतिस्मिन्वयिस किंचिदुपतपेत्स ब्रूयात्प्राणा वसव इदं मे प्रातः सवनं माध्यंदिन ५ सवनमनुसंतनुतेति माऽहं प्राणानां वसूनां मध्ये यज्ञो विलोप्सीयेत्युद्धेव तत एत्यगदो ह भवति ॥ २ ॥

If, in that age, anything ail him, he should say: 'Oh ye Prânas, ye Vasus, extend this my morning-libation to the midday-libation, that I, the Sacrifice, may not be cut off in the midst of the Prânas—Vasus.' Thus he recovers from the illness, and becomes free from ailments. (2).

Com.—For one who has accomplished the aforesaid sacrifice, if, in his age equipped with the morning-libation, if some disease, or other cause of danger of death, should bring about some pain,—then the sacrificial person, thinking himself to be the Sacrifice, should recite the following mantra: "O ye Prânus, Vasus, extend this accomplished morning-libation of mine to the midday-libation; i.e., join together the first period of life with the second half; may I not be cut off in the midst of Prânus, Vasus, the lords of the morning-libation." "The particle "iti" is meant to signify the end of the Mantra to be recited. By means of this recitation and meditation, he recovers from that illness; and having recovered from it, becomes free from ailments.

अथ यानि चतुश्चत्विरि ५ शद्वर्षाणि तन्माध्यंदिन ५ सवनं चतुश्चत्वािर ५ शदक्षरा तिष्ठुप्त्रेष्टुमं माध्यंदिन ५ सवनं तदस्य रुद्रा अन्वायताः प्राणा वाव रुद्रा एते हीद ५ सर्व ५ रोदयन्ति ॥ ३ ॥

The forty-four years are the midday-oblation. The Trishtub has forty-four syllables, and the midday-libation is related to the Trishtub. With this, the Rudras are connected. The Prânas are the Rudras; for they make all this cry. (3).

तं चेदेतिसन्वयासे किंचिदुपतपेत्स भूयात्प्राणा रुद्रा इदं मे

माध्यन्दिन ए सवनं तृतीयसवनमनुसंन्तनुतेति माऽहं प्राणाना ए रुद्राणां मध्ये यज्ञो विलोप्सीये त्युद्धैव तत एत्यगदो ह भवति

11 8 11

If, in that age, anything ail him, he should say: 'O ye Prânus, ye Rudras, extend this my midday-libation to the third libation; that I, the Sacrifice, may not be cut off in the midst of the 'Prânas—Rudras.' Thus he recovers from the illness, and becomes free from ailments. (4).

Com.—" The forty-four years, &c."—similar to the above. Those that make to cry are the "Rudras." Inasmuch as people are cruel in the middle age, they are called "Rudras."

अथ यान्यष्टाचत्वारि ५ राद्वर्षाणि तत्त्वृतीयसवनमष्टाचत्वारि५ शदक्षरा जगती जागतं तृतीयसवनं तदस्याऽऽदित्या अन्वायताः प्राणा वावाऽऽदित्या एते हीद५ सर्वमाददते ॥ ५ ॥

The forty-eight years are the third oblation. The Jayatî has forty-eight syllables, and the third libation is related to the Jayatî. With this, the A'dityâs are connected. The Irânas are the A'dityas; for they take up all this. (5).

तं चेदेतस्मिन्वयासे किंचिदुपतपेत्स ब्रूयात्प्राणा आदित्या इदं

मे तृतीयसवनमायुरनुसंतनुतेति माऽहं प्राणानामादित्यानां मध्ये यज्ञो विलोप्सीयेत्युद्धैव तत एत्यगदो हैव भवति ॥ ६ ॥

If, in that age, anything ail him, he should say: 'O Prânas, ye A'dityas, extend this my third libation unto the full span of life, that I, the Sacrifice, may not be cut off in the midst of the Prânas, A'dityas.' Thus he recovers from illness, and becomes free from ailments.

(6).

Com.—In the same manner the A'dityus are the Prâuus; since they take up all this—the aggregate of sound &c., therefore they are called "A'dityus." "extend the third libation to the full span of life"—to a hundred and sixteen years; that is to say, complete the sacrifice. The rest is similar to what has gone before.

एतद्ध सम वे तिद्विद्वानाह मिहदास ऐतरेयः स िकं म एतदुप-तपिस योऽहमनेन न प्रेष्यामीति स ह पोडशं वर्षशतमजीवत्प्र ह षोडशं वर्षशतं जीवित य एवं वेद ॥ ७॥

Knowing this, Mahidasa Aitaréga said: 'Why do you afflict me, I who will not die by it?' He lived a hundred and sixteen years. He too, who knows this, lives to a hundred and sixteen years. (7).

Com.—That the requisite knowledge must necessarily bring out the proper results is shown by an example: Knowing the above philosophy of the sacrifice, the son Itara, Mahidâsa by name, said: "Why," for what purpose, "O disease, do you afflict me with this pain?—I who am sacrifice, and will never die by this disease; hence useless is your trouble." This he said. And being thus determined, he lived to a hundred and sixteen years; and any one who has the above determination, and knows the above-described philosophy of the sacrifice.

Thus ends the Sixteenth Khanda of Adhyaya III.

ADHYA'YA III.

--0--

KHANDA XVII.

-0-

स यदशिशिषति यत्पिपासति यन रमते ता अस्य दीक्षा ॥१॥

That he hungers, that he thirsts, that he is not happy,—these are his initiatory rites. (1).

Com.—"That he hungers, &c." serves to point out the similarity of the man with the sacrifice; and as such, is connected with what has gone before. "That he hungers" i.e.,—desires to eat; "that he thirsts," i.e., desires to drink; "that he is not happy," on account of the non-attainment of some desired object, when he experiences pain;—all these constitute his initiatory rites; because the sacrifice too leads to pain, and as such there is the similarity of painfulness.

अथ यदश्नाति यत्पिबति यद्रमते तदुपसंदैरेति ॥ २ ॥

And, that he eats, that he drinks, that he is happy,—and then he comes to be (one) with the Upasadas. (2).

Com.—That he eats, that he drinks, and that he enjoys, pleasure by the attainment of desired objects,—then he becomes similar to the Upasadus. The Upasadas (a particular class of sacrificers) have the pleasure due to the observance of taking nothing but milk. During the performance of a sacrifice, the sacrificer breathes freely with hope, when the days during which he can eat little draw nearer. Hence there is a similarity between Eating &c. and the Upasadus.

अथ यद्भसति यज्जक्षति यन्मैथुनं चरति स्तुतशस्त्रेरेव तदेति ॥ ३ ॥

And, that he laughs, that he eats, that he delights himself,—then he comes to be with the Stutasastras. (3).

Com.—That he laughs &c., &c., by these he comes to be similar with the Stutasastras; because there is a similarity of being accompanied by sound.

अथ यत्तपो दानमार्जवमहि ५ सा सत्यवचनमिति ता अस्य दक्षिणाः ॥ ४ ॥ And penance, charity, uprightness and not-killing,—these are his priestly gifts. (4).

Com.—Penance &c., are his priestly gifts; because of the similarity of strengthening or completing righteousness.

तस्मादाहुः सोष्यत्यसोष्टेति पुनरुत्पादनमेवास्य तन्मरणमेवाव-भृथः ॥ ९ ॥

When they say 'Soshyati,' 'asoshta,' that is his new birth. His death is the Arabhritha. (5).

Com.—Since the Sacrifice is man, therefore the mother is going to give him birth; they say "Soshyati" (will give birth), with reference to the mother. And when she has given birth, then they say "Asoshta" (i.e., has given birth). Just as in the case of the ordinary sacrifice, they say "Soshyati Somam" (Devadatta will pour out the Soma) and "Asoshta Soma" (Yaynadatta has poured out the Soma). And thus, there being a similarity of expressions in the two cases, the man is sacrifice. The fact of the man being connected, like the sacrifice, with such expressions as "Soshyati, Asoshta," constitutes his new birth. And furtheredeath is the "Anabhritha" (final Bath) of the man, in the shape of Sacrifice.

तद्भे तद्घोर आङ्गिरसः कृष्णाय देवकापुत्रायाक्त्वावाचापि-

पास एव स बभूव सोऽन्तवेलायामेतत्त्रयं प्रतिपद्येताक्षित-मस्यच्युतमसि प्राणस ५ शितमसीति तत्रैते द्वे ऋची भवतः॥६॥

Ghora A'ngirasa, after having communicated this to Krishna the son of Devaki, said to him.—and he became thirstless,—at the time of the end, one ought to take refuge in these three: 'Thou art the imperishable, Thou art the unchangeable, and Thou art the subtle Prana'. And on this subject, there are these two verses. (6).

Com.—This philosophy is such that in Krishna the son of Devaki, it put a stop to all his desire for any other philosophy; and hence the text eulogises this philosophy: Ghora A'ngirasa, having communicated the above philosophy to Krishna, said that, "One who knows the aforesaid Sacrifice, should, at the time of death, take refuge in, i.e., recite, these three Mantras". These Mantras are specified: (1) The Yajus verse beginning with "Akshitamasi",-"Thou art imperishable",—addressed to the Prana as identified with the one residing in the Sun; (2) the Yajus verse, addressed to the same, beginning with "Achyutamasi,"— "Thou art unchangeable," i.e., never changest thine form; and (3) the Yajus verse beginning with "Prânasamsitamasi,"—" Thou art Prâna, properly refined, or subtle,—i.e., the very essence of Prâna." And on this subject, of eulogising the Philosophy, there are the following two verses. These two verses are not meant for recitation; since the Text specifies the number of Mantras to be recited as "three;" and if the following two were also meant to be recited, then the number would become five; and thereby contradict the number specified before.

आदित्प्रत्नस्य रेतसः उद्वयं तमसस्परि च्योतिः पश्यन्त उत्तर स्वः पश्यन्त उत्तरं देवं द्रेवत्रा सूर्यमगन्म ज्योतिरुत्तममिति ज्यो-तिरुत्तममिति ॥ ७ ॥

Of the eternal seed, they see the day-like light, which shines in the Effulgent. Perceiving, above darkness, the higher light, as the higher light within the heart, we reached the bright divine source of energy, the sun, the highest light,—yea the highest light.

(7).

Com.—The 'ta' in 'at' and the particle 'it' are both without meaning. "Of the eternal seed"—' seed' is the cause of the Universe, named "Sat"; of this. they see the light or brightness. The 'â' deprived of the accompanying 'ta' is to be taken with "pasyanti." What is that light which they see? It is "day-like"—i.e., the light of Brahman is all-pervading like the day. The meaning of the sentence is that those that know Brahman having their eyes set aside, with their hearts purified by means of the restrictions of the Ascetic life see that light all round. "Parah means Param, by change of gender since it qualifies "Juotih" which is neuter. "That which shines in the Effulgent "-that is, that which exists in the Effulgent Supreme Brahman. And it is only when brightened by this light, that the Sun shines, the Moon appears bright, the lightning lightens, and the planets and stars shine out. And again, another seer of the Mantra said this: 'Perceiving the aforesaid light, above the darkness of Ignorance, -- or the dispeller of Ignorance,—the higher light in the Sun,—perceiving this, we reached &c.' Such is the connection of the sentence. That light resides in our heart; and residing in the Sun this light is one only :-- that which is higher even than the other high lights. Perceiving this light, we reached. What did we reach? We reached "the bright source of energy,"-i.e., the Sun, so called, because it is the Sun that energises the liquids, rays and Prânus of the Universe. This highest light did we reach.—the light higher than all other lights did we reach! It is this light that is eulogised by these two Rik verses. and referred to by the foregoing three Yajus verses. The repetition is with a view to show the end of the assumption (of Man) as Sacrifice.

Thus ends the Seventeenth Khanda of Adhyaya III.

ADHYA'YA III.

-0---

KHANDA XVIII

---0---

मनो ब्रह्मेत्युपासीतेत्यध्यात्ममथाधिदैवतमाकाशो ब्रह्मेत्युभय-मादिष्टं भवत्यध्यात्मं चाधिदैवतं च ॥ १॥

One should meditate upon the mind as Brahman,—this with regard to the body. Now with regard to the Gods: A'kûsa is Brahman. Thus becomes taught both that which refers to the body, and that which refers to the Gods. (1).

Com.—The Lord has been explained above, as consisting of the mind; and also that "A'kâsa is the Self," this being based upon a partial attribute of Brahman. Now, the Text begins to lay down the propriety of the meditating upon Mind and A'kâsa, as the complete Brahman: "Mind as Brahman &c." Manas" is that by which one thinks, i.e., the internal organ; and that is Brahman,—thus should one meditate. This philosophy of the Self is with regard to the body. Next, we are going to explain it with reference to the Gods: One ought to meditate upon the A'kâsa as Brahman. Thus, becomes taught the philosophy of Brahman, both with regard to the body, and with regard to the gods. Inasmuch as both $A'k\hat{a}sa$ and Mind are subtle in character, and Brahman is approachable by means of the Mind, it is only proper to meditate upon the mind as Brahman. The same with $A'k\hat{a}sa$, inasmuch as this also is subtle, all pervading, and free from limitations.

तदेतचतुष्पाद्वस्य वाक्पादः प्राणः पादचक्षः पादः श्रोत्रं पाद इत्यध्यात्ममथाधिदैवतमिः पादो वायुः पाद आदित्यः पादौ दिशः पाद इत्युभयमेवाऽऽदिष्टं भवत्यध्यात्मं चैवाधिदैवतं च ॥२॥

That Brahman has four feet. Speech is one foot, odour is one foot, the Eye is one foot, the Ear is one foot; this with reference to the body. Now with reference to the Gods: fire is one foot, air is one foot, the Sum is one foot, the quarters are one foot. Thus, become taught both that with reference to the body, and that with reference to the gods. (2).

Com.—This Brahman, "Mind" by name, has four feet. How is the Mind-Brahman four-footed? Speech, Odour, Eye and Ear are the feet. This with reference to the body. Now that with reference to the Gods, as regards Brahman named "A'kâsa"; Fire. Air, Sun and the Quarters are the four feet. Thus comes to be taught both the four-footed Brahman,—that with reference to the body, and that with reference to the gods.

वागेव ब्रह्मणश्चतुर्थः पादः सोऽग्निना ज्योतिषा भाति च तपति च भाति च तपति च कीर्त्या यशसा ब्रह्मवर्चसेन य एवं वेद ॥३॥

Speech is the fourth foot of Brahman. It shines and warms with the light of Fire. One who knows this shines and warms up with renown, fame and Brahmic glory.

(3)

Com.—Speech is the fourth foot of Mind-Brahman, in comparison to the other three feet. Because it is by means of the foot of Speech that the Mind approaches the denotable objects, cow &c. Therefore Speech is like a foot of Mind. In tha same manner, Odour is a foot. Because it is through Odour that the Mind approaches objects of smell. Similarly, the Eye is a foot; the Ear is one foot &c. This constituting the four-footed character of the Mind-Brahman, with regard to the body. Now with regard to the gods-Fire, Air, Sun and the Quarters are the feet of the A'kâsa-Brahman, attached to it, like the feet of the cow to its belly. Hence the fire &c., are called the feet of A'kasa. Thus comes to be taught the four-footed, both with regard to the body and to the gods. Among these. Speech is the fourth foot of the Mind-Brahman. and this shines and warms, with the divine light of Fire. Or again, Speech, when inflamed by the food of fire, in the shape of oils, butter, &c., comes to shine and warm;—that is, comes to be encouraged to know. The result accruing to the knower of this is that one who knows what has been said before, comes to shine and warm with fame, renown and Brahmic glory.

प्राण एव ब्रह्मणश्चतुर्थः पादः स वायुना ज्योतिषा भाति च तपति च भाति च तपति च कीर्त्या यशसा ब्रह्मवर्चसेन य एवं वेद ॥ ४ ॥

Breath (Odour) is the fourth foot of Brahman. It shines and warms with the light of Air. One who knows this shines and warms with renown, fame and Brahmic glory. (4).

चक्षुरेव ब्रह्मणश्चतुर्थः पादः स आदित्येन ज्योतिषा भाति च तपति च भाति च तपति च कीर्ला यशसा ब्रह्मवर्चसेन य एवं वेद ॥ ९ ॥

The Eye is the fourth-foot of Brahman. It shines and warms with the light of the Sun. One who knows this shines and warms with renown, fame and Brahmic glory. (5)

श्रोत्रमेव ब्रह्मणश्चतुर्थः पादः स दिग्भिज्योतिषा भाति च त-पति च भाति च तपति च कीर्त्या यशसा ब्रह्मवर्चसेन य एवं वेद य एवं वेद ॥ ६॥ The Ear is the fourth-foot of Brahman. It shines with and warms with the light of the Quarters. One who knows this shines and warms with fame, renown and Brahmic glory. (6).

Com.—In the same manner, Odour is the fourth foot of Brahman. It shines and warms, for the purposes of smell, with Air. In the same manner the Eye shines and warms with the Sun, for the perception of colour, and the Eye with the Quarters, for the perception of sound. And the result accruing to one who knows this, is the accomplishment of Brahman everywhere. The repetition is meant to signify the end of the philosophy.

Thus ends the Eighteenth Khanda of Adhyâya 111.

ADHYA'YA III.

KHANDA XIX.

--0-

आदित्यो ब्रह्मेत्यादेशस्तस्योपन्याख्यानमसदेवेदमप्र आसीत्। तत्सदासीत्तत्समभवत्तदाण्डं निरवर्तत तत्संवत्सरस्य मात्रामशयत तिन्नरभिद्यत ते आण्डकपाळे रजतं च सुवर्णे चाभवताम् ॥१॥

The Sun is Brahman—such is the teaching; and its explanation is this: In the beginning this was, non-existent. It became existent. It grew. It turned into an egg. It lay for the period of a year. It burst open. Then came the two halves of the egg, one of silver, the other of gold. (1).

Com.-The Sun has been spoken of as a foot of Brahman and now begins the section wherein it is shown that one should think of it as the full Bruhman. That the Sun is Brahman is the teaching: and its explanation is now given. In the beginning, the whole universe, prior to its appearance, was non-existent, -i.e., a state when its Name and Form had not been manifested; and "not existent" not signifying an absolute non-entity. Because the theory of the Universe being produced out of non-entity is negatived by direct assertions like "How could entity be produced out of non-entity?" "It may be that the fact of the Universe being a non-entity may be another alternative theory." No; because such alternative processes are only possible with regard to Actions, and never with regard to the definite character of a thing. "Is this, then, always non-existent." No; we have already explained this to mean that, not having its Name and Form differentiated, it was as if non-existent. "But the eval in the Text has a definitive force; (and so it would mean that the world was an absolute non-entity)." True; but this does not totally deny the possibility of existence. The fact is that the word "existent" is found to be used only with regard to that which has its Name and Form differentiated; and this differentiation, or manifestation, of the Name and Form of the Universe almost always proceeds from the Sun; for, in its absence all being pitch dark, nothing could be recognised; hence the sentence may be taken as eulogising the Sun. and meaning that even though an entity, even prior to its creation, yet it appears to be non-existent:—this eulogy of the Sun being meant to show that it is capable of being thought of as Brahman. The use of the word "existent" in the world is due to the Sun; just as, in the absence of the excellent king Purnavarmâ. his kingdom, is as if it were non-existent. What is meant to be understood here is neither the existence nor the non-existence of the Universe, but only the teaching that the Sun is Brahman. Specially so, as in the end, the whole section is summed up in the sentence "one should worship the Sun as Brahman." "It became existent "-That which, prior to its appearance, was called 'non-existent,'-being dormant and inert, as if 'non-existent'-because turned towards an existent effect, having its activity aroused a little; and thus became 'existent' i.e., mobile. "It grew": by means of a slight manifestation of Name and Form,—just like the sprouting seed. It became further materialised; and from this materialised water, came out the egg. The long a in 'A'nda' is a peculiar Vedic form. This egg lay—i.e., continued in the same form—for the period of time known as a "year." After the expiry of this year, it burst open, like the eggs of birds. And of this broken egg, there appeared two halves, one of silver, and another of gold.

तद्यद्रजतर् सेयं पृथिवी यत्सुवर्णर् सा द्यौर्यजारायु ते पर्वता यदुल्बर् समेघो नीहारो या धमनयस्ता नद्यो यद्वास्तेयमुदकर स समद्रः ॥ २ ॥

The silver one was this earth; the golden one, the sky; the thick membrane was the mountains; the thin membrane was the mist with the clouds; the veins were the rivers, and the fluid in the stomach was the Sea. (2).

Com.—Among the two halves, the one that was of silver became the earth, meaning the lower half of the egg. The golden half was the sky; the higher regions, the upper half of the egg. The thick membrane, covering the embryo, that appeared at the breaking of the egg into two, became the mountains. The thin membrane that covered the embryo, became the mist together with the clouds. Those that were the veins of the embryo when born, became the rivers. The fluid that was in its stomach became the Sea.

अथ यत्तदजायत सोऽसावादित्यस्तं जायमानं घोषा उल्लबोऽ नृदतिष्ठन्त्सर्वाणि च भूतानि सर्वे च कामास्तस्मात्तस्योदयं प्रति प्रत्यायनं प्रति घोषा उल्लबोऽन्तिष्ठन्ति सर्वाणि च भूतानि सर्वे

च कामाः ॥ ३॥

And what was born from it was the Sun. When he was born, shouts of hurral arose, as also all beings, and all objects of desire. Therefore wherever the sun rises and sets, shouts of hurral arise, as also all beings, and all objects of desire. (3).

Com.—Now that which was born out of that embryo, was the Sun; and when he was born, loud shouts of hurrah arose; just as they arise at the birth of the first son of a King; so also did arise all beings, mobile and immobile, as also all objects desired by these beings,—such as wife, clothing, food and the like. And because the production of the beings and the objects of their desire depends upon the birth of the Sun, therefore even now-a-days, whenever the sun rises and sets,—or the sentence may only mean, whenever the Sun, returns—on account of this alone, shouts of hurrah arise, and also all beings and the objects of their desire. These phenomena are well-known, as happening at the rise of the Sun.

स य एतमेवं विद्वानादित्यं ब्रह्मेत्युपास्तेऽभ्याशो ह यदेन ६ साधवो घोषा आ च गच्छेयुरुप च निम्नेडेरानिम्नेडेरन् ॥ ४ ॥

If any one, knowing this, meditates upon the Sun as Brahman, pleasant shouts will soon approach him, and will continue,—Yea will continue. (4)

Com.—If any one knows the Sun as endowed with the excellent properties described above, and meditates upon It as Brahman, then he reaches Its state—i.e., becomes identified with it. And there is also some visible result. Joyous shouts will soon approach him. Joyousness of the shout lies in the fact of the experiences being free from all taint of evil. "IVill approach him, and will continue": i.e., they will not only approach, but also continue to give him pleasure. The repetition is meant to signify the end of the Adhyâya.

Thus ends the Nineteenth Khanda of Adhyâya III.

Thus ends the Third Adhyaya.

The Chha'ndogya Upanishad

ADHYA'YA IV.

KHANDA I

-0-

जानश्रुतिर्ह पौत्रायणः श्रद्धादेयो बहुदायी बहुपाक्य आस स ह सर्वत आवसथान्मापयांचक्रे सर्वत एव मेऽत्स्यन्तीति ॥१॥

There lived a descendant of Janasruti, his great grandson, who was a pious giver, generous, and having much cooked food. He built resting-places all round, thinking that 'everywhere they may eat of mine.' (1).

Com.—Before this, has been explained the imposition of Air and Odour, of the character of the feet of Brahman. Now the Text begins a new section wherein it is shown that they are to be meditated upon as Brahman itself. The introduction of the story is with a view to make the subject easily comprehensible, and also for showing the method of imparting the knowledge referred to. By means of the story it will be shown that pious generosity and calmness &c. are the means to the acquiring of the knowledge. "Jánasruti" a descendant of Jânasruti. "Ha" signifies the fact being based on tradition. "Pautrâyana"—grandson of the son. He was a "pious giver"—i.e., he bestowed gifts upon Brâhmanas with due respect. "Generous"—one who is disposed to give much. "Having much cooked food"—i.e., in whose house plenty of food was cooked every day; that is to say, he used to have much food cooked in his house, for the hungry. Such a great-grandson of Jânasruti lived at a certain place, at a particular time. He got resting houses built everywhere, on all sides, in all villages and towns. He did this with the motive that 'in these resting places people would live and eat of the food given by me.'

अथ ह हर्सा निशायामितपेतुस्तद्वैवस् हर्सो हर्समम्यु-वाद हो होऽिय मछाक्ष मछाक्ष जानश्रुतेः पोत्रायणस्य समं दिवा ज्योतिराततं तन्मा प्रसाङ्क्षीस्तत्त्वा मा प्रधाक्षीरिति ॥ २ ॥

Once at night some flamingoes flew along. One flamingo said to the other flamingo: 'Hey, O short-sighted friend, the bright glory of Jânusruti's grandson has spread like Heaven. Do not touch it, lest it should burn you.' (2).

Com.—Once upon a time during the summer, when the king was sitting on the top of his palace, some flamingoes flew along at night. Certain sages or gods, having been pleased with the generosity of the king, had assumed the shapes of flamingoes and flew along in his view (with the purpose of seeing him and showing themselves to him). Among these flamingoes, the one that was flying behind addressed the other who was flying away in front calling him as "Hey O Bhallaksha!",—the repetition being meant to show respect for the object to be seen, just as one says "Look, look." The name 'Bhallaksha' signifies short-sightedness. Or, he may have been frequently pained by the other often taunting him with a superior knowledge of Brahman that the latter possessed; and hence with anger, he addresses him as "Bhallaksha" (short-sighted). Equal to the Heavenly Regions, has spread the glorious light of Janasruti's great-grandson due to his great generosity; -- that is to say, his glory has touched the Heavens. Or, "Diva" may be taken as meaning "Day." Do not come in contact with that light, lest a contact with that light should burn you. The verb "Pradhâkshîh" is to be taken as being in the Third Person.

तमु ह परः प्रत्युवाच कम्बर एनमेतत्सन्त ५ सयुग्वानमिव रै-कमात्थेति यो नु कथ ५ सयुग्वारेक इति ॥ ३ ॥ The other replied: 'How can you speak of him. being what he is, as if he were Raikva with the cart?' Of what sort is this Rakiva with the cart? (3).

Com.—When he had said this, the one going in front replied; "Oh this king is a mean fellow, being what he is"—this being added with a tone of reproach—"and yet, you talk of him so high, as if he were Raikva, with the cart"; that is to say, you talk of this man, as you would of Raikva. The meaning is that "when this man is not at all like Raikva, it is not proper to speak of him, as if he were Raikva." The other said: "what sort of man is this Raikva with the cart. of whom you are talking, O short-sighted one?" The other said, "Listen, what sort of man that Raikva is."

यथा ऋतायविजितायाधरेयाः संयन्त्येवमेन ६ सर्वे तदाभिसमैति यकिंच प्रजाः साधु कुर्वन्ति यस्तद्वेद यस्म वेद स मयैतदुक्त इति

11 8 11

Just as all the lower castes (of the dice) belong to one who has won with the Krita-caste, so does belong to him whatever good the men do. He also who knows what he knows, he is thus spoken of by me. (4).

Com.—Just as, in the ordinary world, at a game of dice, one who wins the caste, numbered 'four' known as "Krita,"—to such a one belong all the lower castes—bearing the numbers one, two, and three, and named "Treta" "Dvapara" and "Kali"; that is to say, these latter are included in the former, on account of the lower numbers already existing in the Krita-caste bearing the number four; so exactly, in the same manner, to Raikea resembling the Krita-caste, belong all the rest resembling the castes Treta and the rest. What is the "all" that belongs to him? It is all the good that men do. i.e., all their virtuous deeds become the deeds of Raikva. That is to say, in the result accruing to him are included the results of all the virtuous deeds of other living beings. Same is the case with others also, who know what he knows. If one knows what Raikra knows, then to such a one also, as to Raîkva, belong the results of all the virtuous deeds of living beings. That is to say, one, who is thus spoken of me, as possessed of the knowledge, comes to resemble the Kritacaste, just like Raikva.

तदु ह जानश्रुतिः पोत्रायण उपशुश्राव स ह संजिहान एव क्षत्तारमुवाचाङ्गारे ह सयुग्वानिमव रैकमात्थेति यो नु कथ ५ सयु-ग्वा रैक इति ॥ ९ ॥

Jânasruti's great-grandson overheard this; and as soon as he woke up, he spoke to the, door-keeper: 'O friend go and speak to Raikva with the car.' 'Well, what sort of man is this Raikva with the car.' (5).

यथा कृतायविजितायाधरेयाः संयन्त्येवमेन १ सर्वे तदिभसमैति यार्किच प्रजाः साधु कुर्वन्ति यस्तद्वेद यत्स वेद स मयैतदुक्त इति

11 8 11

Just as all the lower castes belong to one who has won with the Krita-caste, so does belong to him whatever good the men do. He also who knows what he knows, he is thus spoken of by me. (6)

Com.—The king, Janasruti's great-grandson, lying upon the top of his palace overheard the above conversation of the flamingoes, deprecating him, and praise another learned person Raikva. And frequently cogitating over that conversation of the flamingoes, he passed the remaining portion of the night. Then, having been roused from his slumber by the eulogistic chants of the bards. spoke to the door-keeper, as soon as he awoke. 'O friend, did you speak of me as of Raikva with the cart?' The meaning being that it is he who is worthy of praise, and not I. Or, the meaning may be-"Go and speak to Raikra with the cart, that I am desirous of seeing him. 'Eva' may be taken as having a restrictive force, or as having no signification The gate-keeper desirous of fetching Raikra, and knowing the king's mind, replied: 'What sort of man is this Raikva with the cart?' He asked this with a view to know his distinguishing characteristics, before he went to fetch him, as ordered by the king. The king repeated what Bhallâksha had said. (5,6).

स ह क्षत्ताऽन्विष्य नाविदामिति प्रत्येयाय त ५ होवाच यत्नारे ब्राह्मणस्यान्वेषणा तदेनमळेति ॥ ७ ॥

The gate-keeper having looked for him, came back, (saying) 'I found him not'. He said: 'Oh, where a Brâhmana should be searched, there go for him.' (7).

Com.—Keeping the instructions in his mind, the gate-keeper went to villages and towns, and having looked for Raikva, came back, saying 'I did not find him.' The king then said to the gate-keeper: 'Where the knowers of Brahman should be searched—in solitary places, in the forest or on the banks of rivers—, there go, and look for this Raikva.'

सोऽधस्ताच्छकटस्य पामानं कषमाणमुपोपविवेशतर् हाम्युवाद त्वं नुभगवः सयुग्वा रैक इत्यहर् हारा ३ इति ह प्रतिजज्ञे स ह क्षत्ताऽविदमिति प्रत्येयायं ॥८॥

He went near him, while he was underneath a cart, scratching his itch. He addressed him: 'Sir, are you Raikva with the cart?' He said 'Well, yes, I am.' The gate-keeper came back (saying) 'I have found him.' (8).

Com.—Having been thus ordered, the gate-keeper, looking for him in solitary places, found him lying underneath a cart, scratching his itch, and thinking him to be Raikva with the cart, went and respectfully sat near him; and addressed Raikva thus: 'Sir, are you Raikva with the cart?' Being thus asked, he replied in an off-hand manner; 'Yes, I am.' Having thus known him, the gate-keeper came back, saying 'I have found him.'

Here ends the First Khanda of Adhyaya II'.

ADHYA'YA IV.

KHANDA II.

---0---

तदु ह जानश्रुतिः पौतायणः पट् शतानि गवां निष्कमश्वत-रीरथं तदादाय प्रतिचक्रमे तर् हाम्युवाद ॥ १॥

Then Janasruti's great-grandson took with him six hundred cows, a necklace and a carriage with mules, and went over to him, and said. (1).

Com.—The king, understanding Raikra to be anxious to settle as a house-holder, and as such desiring wealth, took with him some riches, in the shape of six hundred cows, a necklace and a carriage with mules attached:

and went to Raikva. And having gone there, spoke to him.

रैकेमानि षट् शतानि गवामयं निष्कोऽयमश्वतरीरथो नु म एतां भगवो देवता ५ शाधि यां देवतामुपास्स इति ॥ २ ॥

Raikva, here are six hundred cows, a necklace, and a carriage with mules. Now, sir, teach me that Deity which you worship. (2).

Com.—O Raikra, I have brought for you these six hundred cows, this necklace, and this carriage with mules. Accept these riches, Sir, and teach me that Deity which you yourself worship,—i.e., instruct me in the science of that Deity.

तमु ह परः प्रत्युवाचाह हारेत्वा शूद्र तवेव सह गोभिरिस्विति तदु ह पुनरेव जानश्रुतिः पोत्रायणः सहस्रं गवां निष्कमश्वतरीरथं दुहितरं तदादाय प्रतिचक्रमे ॥ ३॥

The other replied to him: 'Fie, Fie! this necklace and carriage with the cows be thine, O Sûdra.' Then Jânasruti's great-grandson took with him a thousand cows, a necklace, a carriage with mules, and his daughter, and went over to him. (3).

Com.—Raikva replied to the King who had addressed him as above. The indeclinable 'Aha' is elsewhere used to signify resentment; but here it means nothing; because of the separate use of the word "Eva." This carriage with the necklace and the cows may be thine --let them be with yourself. I do not require these, when they are enough for my purpose. "O Sûdra"the person addressed being a king, because he had a gate-keeper, as said above,—and a Sûdra not being entitled to approach a Brâhmana for the purpose of receiving instructions,—how is it that Raikva spoke what was not true, in addressing the king as "Sûdra"? The old Teachers have explained this point thus: By addressing him as "Sûdra," the sage Raikva shows that he already knows what is passing in the king's mind: the word, "Sûdra" meaning 'one who is melting (dravati) with sorrows at hearing the greatness of Railra, as spoken of by the flamingoes'. Or, it may be that the king is addressed as "Sudra" because he comes for instruction, with an offering of riches, like a Sûdra, and not with proper obeisance and attendance, as belits the higher castes; and it does not mean that the king is a Súdra by caste. Others however explain that Raikva addressed him thus, because he was enraged at his offering him so little; because it is also said that riches are to be accepted when plenty of it is offered. The king, knowing the Sage's wishes took with him a thousand cows &c, and over and above all this, he also took his own daughter as a proper wife for the Sage, and then went over to him.

त १ हम्युवाद रैकेद १ सहस्रं गवामयं निष्कोऽयमश्वतरीरथ इयं जायाऽयं प्रामो यस्मिनास्सेऽन्वेव मा भगवः शाधीति ॥ ४॥

He said to him: 'Raikva, here are a thousand cows, this necklace, this carriage with mules, this wife, and this village in which you dwell. Now Sir teach me.' (4).

तस्या ह मुखमुपोद्गृह्णनुत्राचाऽऽजहारेमाःशूद्रानेनैव मुखेनाऽऽ-लापयिष्यया इति ते हैते रेक्कपणी नाम महावृषेषु यत्रास्मा उवास तस्मे होवाच ॥ ९ ॥

Holding her mouth, he said: 'You have brought these, O Sûdra; by this mouth alone do you make me speak.' These are the villages named Raikvaparnâ, in the country of the Mahâvrishas, where he lived. He then said to him. (5).

Com.—"O Raikva, here are a thousand cows, this necklace, this carriage with mules, and this my daughter as a wife for you, I have brought for you; and this village in which you dwell, this I offer to you. Accept all this, and instruct me, O Sir." Being thus addressed Raikva held the mouth of the king's daughter—the mouth being the door for the imparting of knowledge. There is a well-known declaration of knowledge to this effect: "A life of studentship, giving of wealth, Intelligence, Knowledge of Veda, Affection or Knowledge itself—these six are my havens." Knowing this, Raikva, holding up her mouth, said: "You have really broughtall these cows, and these riches,—and thou hast done well" (this much is understood). "OSudra" is only an imitation of what he had said before, but with no other intent. "It is by this mouth alone, the haven of Knowledge, that you make me speak now." These are the villages known as "Raikvaparnā" in the country of the Mahavrishas,—in which villages Raikva dwelt;—these very villages did the king give to Raikva. And when the king had given him all this wealth, Raikva spoke to him about the Knowledge (of the Deity he wanted to be instructed about).

Thus ends the Second Khanda of Adhyâya IV.

ADHYA'YA IV.

KHANDA III.

वायुर्वाव संवर्गो यदा वा अग्निरुद्वायित वायुमेवाप्येति यदा सू -र्योऽस्तमेति वायुमेवाप्येति यदा चन्द्रोऽस्तमेति वायुमेवाप्येति ॥१॥ Air indeed is the absorbent. For when Fire goes out. it goes into Air; when the Sun sets, it goes into Air: and when the Moon sets, it goes into Air.

Com.—" Air indeed is the absorbent", "Vava" has "Absorbent" is that which a definitive force. absorbs, takes in, or swallows up; -i.e., that which absorbs into itself the deities of Fire &c., mentioned below. The quality of Absorption is to be meditated upon, like the Air: because it is exemplified as being included in the Krita-caste. But how does the Air come to have the character of an absorbent? It is explained: -When Fire goes out, i.e., becomes extinguished. then it goes into Air; that is to say, becomes identified with Air. Similarly, when the Sun sets, it goes into Air. And when the Moon sets, it goes into Air. "But, how is it that the Sun and Moon are said to be absorbed into Air, while, as a matter of fact, they continue in their own shapes?" This does touch the position. The above assertion is based upon the fact of their setting being due to Air. It is by Air that the Sun is made to set; inasmuch as motion proceeds from Air. Or the explanation may be that at Universal Dissolution, the Sun and the Moon lose their respective forms, and become resolved into simple Light; and, as such, become absorbed into Air.

यदाऽऽप उच्छुष्यन्ति वायुमेवापियन्ति वायुर्हेवितान्सर्वान्सं-वृङ्क्त इत्यधिदेवतम् ॥ २ ॥

When water dries up, it goes into Air. For, Air indeed absorbs them all. This with regard to the gods. (2).

Com.—When water dries up, it goes into Air. Because it is Air that absorbs all the aforesaid powerful deities. Hence, Air, being the great Absorbent, is to be meditated upon as such. Thus has been explained the philosophy of the Absorbent with regard to the Gods.

अथाध्यात्मं प्राणो वाव संवर्गः स यदा स्विपिति प्राणमेव वा-गप्येति प्राणं चक्षुः प्राण५ श्रोतं प्राणं मनः प्राणो ह्येवैतान्सर्वान्सं-वृङक्त इति ॥३॥

Now with reference to the body, Breath indeed is the Absorbent. When one sleeps, Speech goes into Breath; Sight goes into Breath, Hearing goes into Breath; Mind goes into Breath. For Breath indeed absorbs all this. (3).

Com.—Next follows the philosophy of the Absorbent with regard to the body: The Breath in the mouth is the Absorbent. When the man sleeps, Speech goes into Breath,—as Fire goes into Air—; and into Breath go also seeing, hearing and mind. Because Breath indeed absorbs all these, Speech and the rest.

तो वा एती द्वी संवर्गी वायुरेव देवेषु प्राणः प्राणेषु ॥ ४ ॥

These two indeed are the two Absorbents: Air among the Gods, and Breath among the senses. (4).

Com.— These two indeed are the two Absorbents—endowed with absorbing properties. Air is the Absorbent among the Gods, and the Breath in the mouth is the Absorbent among the senses, Speech and the rest.

अथ ह शौनकं च कापेयमाभिप्रतारिणं च काक्षसेनि पारिवि-ष्यमाणो ब्रह्मचारी बिभिक्षे तस्मा उ ह न ददतुः ॥ ५ ॥

Once while Saunaka Kâpeya and Abhipratâri Kâk-shasêni were being waited upon at their meals, a religious student begged of them. They did not give him anything. (5).

Com.—With a view to eulogise the aforesaid Absorbents, a story is added. Once upon a time, the son of Sunaka. Of the family of Kapi, and one Abhipratâri, the son of Kâkshasêna were sitting at their meals, being waited upon by the cooks; and a certain arrogant religious student, knowing Brahman, begged of them. They understood the student to be proud of his knowledge of Brahman, and with a view to question him, they did not give him anything; just to see what he would say to them.

स होवाच महात्मनश्चतुरो देव एकः कः स जगार भुवनस्य गोपास्तं कापेय नाभिपश्यन्ति मर्खा अभिप्रतारिन्बहुधा वसन्तं य-स्मै वा एतदन्नं तस्मा एतन्न दत्तमिति ॥ ६ ॥ He said: 'The one God, Prajāpati—swallowed up the four great ones; he, the guardian of the Universe. Him () Kapēya, mortals do not see; O Abhipratārin, though He dwells in many ways. He for whom this food is, to Him it has not been given.' (6).

Com.—The religious student said: "The four great ones"— are in the Second Person, Plural. "The one God"—i.e., Air (swallowing) Fire &c., and Breath, Speech &c. "Kah" the Prajāpati—that "swallowed up". Some people explain as "who is it that swallowed &c.". "The Universe"—"Bhuvana" is that wherein creatures are born; that is to say, the Earth &c., comprising the whole Universe; of this Universe, "the guardian"—i.e., the protector. Him, the "Kah" (i.e., Prajāpati), know not the mortals, devoid of wisdom, O Kāpēya, and O Abhipratārin,—though He dwells in many ways—such as with reference to the Body and to the Gods &c. He, for whom, every day, food is prepared and offered,—to Him, Prajāpati, this food has not been given.

तदु ह शोनकः कापेयः प्रतिमन्त्रानः प्रत्येयायाऽऽत्मा देवानां जनिता प्रजाना हिरण्यद ५ ष्ट्रा बभसोऽनसूरिर्महान्तमस्य महि-मानमाहुरनद्यमाना यदनन्नमत्तीति वे वयं ब्रह्मचारिनेदमुपास्महे दत्तास्मे भिक्षामिति ॥ ७॥ Then Saunaka Kâpêya, pondering over it, went over to the religious student, (and said): 'It is the Self, the creator of the Gods, and of all beings, with undecaying teeth, the Eater, not without intelligence. They describe His magnificence to be very great indeed, because without being eaten, He eats even what is not food. We, O student, meditate upon this (Brahman).' (Then he said to his servants) 'give him food.'

Com.-Pondering over what the student had said. Saunaka went near him, and said: 'We do see Him. whom, you say, no mortals see.' How? It is the Self of all, mobile and immobile beings; and again It is that which absorbs into Itself the gods, Fire &c., and then again brings them forth-being, in the shape of Air, the creator of Fire, &c., with reference to the gods, and with reference to the body, the creator of the beings, Speech and the rest. Or, the meaning may be that It is the Self of the gods, Fire, Speech, &c., and the creator of all beings mobile and immobile. "With undecaying teeth"-i.e., whose teeth are not damaged. "The eater" having the character of being such. " Not unintelligent"—i.e., Intelligent. And the knowers of Brahman describe the magnificence, of this Prajapati to be very great, i.e., illimitable; inasmuch as without being eaten Himself, He eats what is not (common) food, such as Fire, Speech, &c. 'Vâ' has no meaning here: "We, O student, it is such a Brahman, as described above, that we meditate upon.' The construction is—"We meditate &c.,"—"while others say that they do not meditate upon this Brahman, but on the supreme one." Having said this, he ordered his servants to give him food.

तस्मा उ ह ददुस्ते वा एते पञ्चान्ये पञ्चान्ये दश सन्तस्तत्कृतं तस्मात्सर्वासु दिक्ष्वन्नमेव दश कृत ५ सेषा विराडनादी तयेद ५ सर्वे दष्ट ५ सर्वमस्येदं दष्टं भवत्यनादी भवति य एवं वेद य एवं वेद

11 < 11

They gave it to him. Now, these five and the other five, making ten, are the Krita (caste). Therefore, in all quarters, those ten are the food, and the Krita. This is Virit, the eater of food. By means of this, all becomes seen. One, who knows this, sees all this, and becomes an eater of food,—Yea one who knows this. (8).

Com.—They gave him the food. The "five" are those that are absorbed, Fire &c., together with that which absorbs them—Air; the "other five" are Speech &c., together with Breath. These become ten in number, and thus constitute the Krita caste. One caste has the number four, and hence they (the absorbed) are four; another caste is numbered three, and they are also three (leaving off one); the third is numbered two, and they are also two (leaving off two in each); and the last is counted one; and the Absorbent is one (in each case); and this latter is different from the rest. Thus these members (4, 3, 2, 1) making up ten, constitute the Krita caste. Since this is so, therefore, in all the ten quarters, Fire &c., together with Speech &c., are the food,-because of the number ten being common to both: says the Sruti: "The Virât consisting of ten syllables is food." Therefore the Fire &c., are the food.—because of their number being ten; and for the same reason they are the Krita; because all the castes are included in the Krita caste, as we have already explained. "This is Virât "-containing ten syllables, is food and also "the eater of food," because of its being the Krita. In the Krita the number ten is included; hence the Virat is an eater of fcod. One who knows this becomes identified with the ten deities, comes to be Virât through the number ten, and thereby becomes food,—and by the member of the Krita caste, he becomes the eater of food. By this eater of food, "all this" world, located in the ten quarters, "becomes seen"; that is to say, by means of the member of the Krita caste, all things come to be realised. And one who knows all this becomes the member of the Krita caste, and as such comes to realize (and obtain) all things related to the ten quarters. And further one who realises the above becomes an eater of food. The repetition is meant to signify the end of the treatment of the particular method of meditation.

. Thus ends the Third Khanda of Adhyaya IV.

ADHYA'YA IV.

......

KHANDA IV.

सत्यकामो ह जाबाछो जबाछा मातरमामन्त्रयांचक्रे ब्रह्मचर्ये भवति विवत्स्यामि किंगोत्रो न्वहमस्मीति ॥ १॥

Satyakâma Jâhâla addressed his mother: 'Mother, I wish to lead the life of a religious student; of what family am I?' (1).

Com.—Now begins the laying down of the propriety of having the idea of Brahman with regard to Speech, Fire &c., eulogised above as food & food-eater, as constituting the Universe,—this latter being divided into sixteen parts; and a story is related with a view to show that Faith and Penance are subsidiaries to the meditation of Brahman. Satyakâma, by name, the son of Jahâlâ, Jâbâlâ, addressed Jahâla his mother, and said. 'O mother I wish to lead the life of a student at the Teacher's place, for the purpose of studying the Veda. Of what family am I? To what family of Rishis do I belong?'

सा हैनमुवाच नाहमेतद्वेद तात यद्गोतस्वमिस बह्वहं चरन्ती परिचारिणी योवने त्वामलभे साडहमेतन्न वेद यद्गोत्रस्वमिस ज-बाला तु नामाहमिस सत्यकामो नाम त्वमिस सत्यकाम एव जा-बालो बुवीथा इति ॥ २ ॥

She said to him: 'I do not know my child, of what family thou art. In my youth, when I had to move about much, as a servant, I conceived thee. So I do not know of what family thou art. But I am Jabâlâ by name, and thou art Satyakâma by name; so mention thyself as Satyakâma Jâbâlâ.' (2).

Com.—Having been thus questioned, Jabâlâ replied to her son: "I do not know your family, O child." Being asked as to why she did not know it, she said: "In my husband's house, I had to move about much, in attending upon guests' &c.; and being constantly moving about, I had no time to ask about and know the name of your family." "In my youth"—i.e., that was the time when I conceived thee; and it was then that thy father died. Therefore, having been left without a protector, I do not know to which family thou belongest. I am Jabâlâ by name, and thou art Satyakâma by name; so say to thy Teacher that thou art Satyakâma Jâbâlâ; That is to say, "if the Teacher happens to ask thee."

स ह हारिद्रुमतं गेौतममेस्योवाच ब्रह्मचर्यं भगवति वत्स्याम्यु-पेयां भगवन्तमिति ॥ ३ ॥

त होवाच किंगोत्रो नु सोम्यासीति स होवाच नाहमेतद्वेद भो यद्गेत्रोऽहमस्म्यपृच्छं मातर सा मा प्रत्यव्रवीद्वहृहं चरन्ती प-रिचारिणी योवने त्वामलभे साऽहमेतन्त्र वेद यद्गोत्रस्त्वमसि जबाला तु नामाऽहमस्मि सत्यकामो नाम त्वमसीति सोऽह सस्यकामोजा-बालोऽस्मि भो इति ॥ ४॥

Having gone to Gantama, the son of Haridrumat, he said: 'I wish to become a Brahmachâri with you Sir; may I approach you.' (3).

He said to him: 'Of what family art thou, my friend?' He replied: "Sir, I do not know of what family I am. I asked my mother, and she said—'In my youth, when I had to move about much, as a servant, I conceived thee; so I do not know of what family thou art; but I am Jabâlâ by name, and thou art Satyalâma by name.' Therefore I am Satyalâma Jâbâlâ, Sir." (4).

Com.—Satyakama went over to Gautama, the son of Haridrumat, and said to him: "Revered Sir, I wish to live with you as a religious student; may I approach you, as your disciple?" Gautama said: 'Of what family art thou, my friend?' as it is only one whose family has been ascertained that can be accepted as a disciple. Having been thus asked, Satyakâma replied: "I do not know of what family I am. I had asked my mother, and she told me—'I had to move about &c., &c.'—(as before). I precisely remember what she said. I am Satyakâma Jâbâlâ, Sir.'

तर् होवाच नैतद्भाह्मणो विवक्तुमर्हति समिधर् सोम्याऽऽहरो-प त्वा नेष्ये न सत्यादगा इति तमुपनीय ऋशानामबळानां चतुः-शता गा निराऋत्योवाचेमाः सोम्यानुसंव्रजेति ता अभिप्रस्थापय-नुवाच नासहस्रोणाऽऽर्वेतयेति स ह वर्षगणं प्रोवास ता यदा सह-स्रं संपेटः ॥ ९ ॥

He said to him: 'None but a Brâhmana could thus speak out. Fetch the fuel; O friend, I shall initiate thee. Thou has not flinched from the truth.' Having initiated him, he chose four hundred lean and weak cows, and said to him: 'Go with these.' And while taking them away, he said: 'I may not return without a thousand (cows).' He dwelt away a number of years, when the cows became a thousand. (5).

Com.—Gautama said to him: "Such a straightforward assertion none but a Brâhmana could make; because it is Brâhmanas and not others, that are naturally straightforward. Since thou has not flinched from truth, the characteristic of your caste; hence, in-asmuch as thou art a Bráhmana, I shall initiate thee. Therefore go and fetch some fuel for the Homa of the preliminary rites for thy purification (preparatory to the initiation." And having said this, he initiated him, he chose four hundred of the leanest and weakliest cows out of his herd, and said to him: "My friend, go with these." Having been thus ordered Satyakâma drove them away; and while doing this he said: "I may not return without fully one thousand cows.' Having said this he took the cows to a forest where there was plenty of grass and water, and no opposition; and there he dwelt long, for a certain number of years. Having been properly tended, the cows became a full thousand.

Thus ends the Fourth Khanda of Adhyâya IV.

ADHYA'YA IV.

KHANDA V.

-0-

अथ हैनमृषभोऽभ्युवाद सत्यकाम ३ इति भगव इति ह प्रतिशुश्राव प्राप्ताः सोम्य सहस्त्र ५ समः प्रापय न आचार्यकुलम् Then the bull said to him: 'Satyakama!' He replied, 'Sir!' 'We have reached a thousand, O friend, carry us to the Teacher's house.' (1)

Com.—Him, thus equipped with Faith and Penance, the Deity of the Air, connected with the Quarters having become satisfied, entered into the bull; and with a view to help him, the bull called him by his name 'Satyakâma'; and he replied 'Sir!.' The bull said: "O friend we have reached a full thousand as promised by you; so carry us to the house of the Teacher."

ब्रह्मणश्च ते पादं ब्रवाणीति ब्रवीतु में भगवानिति तस्मै हो-वाच प्राची दिक्कला प्रतीची दिक्कला दक्षिणा दिक्कलोदीची दि-क्कलेष वे सोम्य चतुष्कलः पादो ब्रह्मणः प्रकाशवान्नाम ॥ २ ॥

1 will declare to you the foot of Brahman. Tell it to me. The East is one quarter, the West is one quarter, the South is one quarter and the North is one quarter. This, O friend, is Brahman's four-quartered foot, named Luminous. (2).

Com.—"And further, I will declare to you the foot of Brahman". Being thus addressed, Satyakâma replied: "Tell it to me, Sir." Then the Bull said to Satyakâma: 'The East is one quarter, the fourth part of the foot of Brahman; so are each the West, South and North.

This, O friend is the foot of Brahman, with four parts, whose name is 'Luminous'. In the same manner, the other three feet of Brahman are also four-quartered.

स य एतमेवं विद्वा श्वतुष्कलं पादं ब्रह्मणः प्रकाशवानित्यु-पास्ते प्रकाशवानिस श्लोके भवति प्रकाशवतो ह लोकाञ्जयति य एतमेवं विद्वा श्वतुष्कलं पादं ब्रह्मणः प्रकाशवानित्युपास्ते ॥ ३॥

He who knowing this meditates upon this fourquartered foot of Brahman as named Luminous, becomes luminous in this world; and he wins luminous worlds, one who knowing this meditates upon the fourquartered foot of Brahman as named Luminous. (3).

Com.—If one knowing the aforesaid four-quartered foot of Brahman, meditates upon it as endowed with splendour, he becomes luminous—i.e., renowned—in this world; this is the visible result. The invisible result is that, he wins splendid worlds, connected with the gods, after his death,—one who knowing this four-quartered foot of Brahman meditates upon it as the Luminous.

Thus ends the Fifth Khanda of Adhyâya IV.

ADHYA'YA IV.

KHANDA VI.

---0---

अग्निष्टे पादं वक्तेति स ह श्वोभूते गा अभिप्रस्थापयांचकार ता यत्राभिसायं बभूवुस्तलाग्निमुपसमाधाय गा उपरुष्य समिधमा-धाय पश्चादग्नेःप्राङ्गपोपविवेश ॥ १॥

Fire will declare to you the (other) foot of Brahman? On the morrow, he drove the cows homeward. And when they came together towards evening, he having lighted the fire, penned the cows, laid the fuel, sat down behind the Fire, facing the East. (1).

Com.—"Fire will declare to you another foot"—having said this, the Bull kept quiet. And on the morrow, Satyakāmu, having finished his daily duties, drove the cows towards the Teacher's house. And when the cows, moving slowly towards the Teacher's house, came together towards evening,—then, he, having lighted the fire, penned the cows, and laid fuel on the fire, sat down behind the fire facing the East and bearing in mind the assertion of the Bull.

तमग्निरभ्युवाद सत्यकाम २ इति भगव इति ह प्रतिशुश्रा-

'The Fire said to him: 'Satyakâma!' He replied, 'Sir!' (2).

Com.—The Fire called him by his name; and he replied 'Sir!'

ब्रह्मणः सोम्य ते पादं ब्रवाणीति ब्रवीतु मे भगवानिति तस्मै होवाच पृथिवी कलाऽन्तिरक्षं कला चौः कला समुद्रः कर्लेप वै सोम्य चतुष्कलः पादो ब्रह्मणोऽनन्तवान्नाम ॥ ३ ॥

I shall declare to you, friend, the foot of Brahman. 'Tell it to me Sir'. He said to him: "The Earth is one quarter, the Sky is one quarter, the Heaven is one quarter, the Ocean is one quarter. This. my friend, is the four-quartered foot of Brahman, named the endless."

(3).

Com.—"I will declare to you the foot of Brahman."
"Tell it to me, Sir." He said to him: "The Earth is one quarter, the Sky is one quarter, the Heaven is one quarter, the Ocean is one quarter,"—thus did Fire declare the philosophy of the Self. "This, my friend, is the four-quartered foot of Brahman, named the Endless."

स य एतमेत्रं विद्वा ५ श्वतुष्कलं पादं ब्राह्मणोऽनन्तत्रानित्युपास्तेऽ-

नन्तवानिस्मिँहोके भवत्यनन्तवतो ह लोकाञ्जयित य एतमेवं वि-द्वार् श्रतुष्कलं पादं ब्रह्मणोऽनन्तवानित्युपास्ते ॥ ४॥

One who knowing this meditates upon the fourquartered foot of Brahman, as the Endless, becomes endless in this world: and he wins endless worlds,—one who knowing this, meditates upon this four-quartered foot of Brahman as the Endless. (4).

Com.—One who meditates upon the aforesaid four-quartered foot of Brahman, as endowed with the property of enllessness, himself comes to be endowed with that property; and after death, he wins endless worlds,—one who &c., &c., as before.

Thus ends the sixth Khanda of Adhyaya IV.

ADHYA'YA IV.

KHANDA VII.

हर् सस्ते पादं वक्तेति स ह श्वोभूते गा अभिप्रस्थापयां-चकार ता यत्राभि सायं बभूवुस्तत्राग्निमुपसमाधाय गा उपरुष्य समिधमाधाय पश्चादग्नेः प्राङुपोपाविवेश ॥ १॥

'The Hamsa will declare to you the (other) foot.' On the morrow, he drove the cows home-ward. And when they came together towards evening, he, having lighted the fire, penned the cows, laid the fuel, sat down behind the fire, facing the East. (1).

त ५ ह ५ स उपनिपत्याभ्युवाद सत्यकाम ३ इति भगव इति ह प्रतिशुश्राव ॥ २ ॥

Then a Hamsa flew to him and said—' Satyakāma!' He replied: 'Yes, Sir.' (2).

Com.—Agni told him that the Hamsa would declare to him the other foot of Brahman, and departed.

"Hamsa" means The Sun; because of the similarities of whiteness and the capability of flying. "On the morrow &c., &c." as before.

ब्राह्मणः सोम्य ते पादं ब्रवाणीति ब्रवीतु मे भगवानिति तस्मै होवाचाग्निः कला सूर्यः कला चन्द्रः कला विद्युत्कलेष वे सोम्य चतुष्कलः पादो ब्रह्मणो ज्योतिष्मान्नाम ॥ ३ ॥

स य एतमेवं विद्वा ५ श्रतुष्कलं पादं ब्रह्मणो ज्योतिष्मानित्यु-पास्ते च्योतिष्मानिस्मिँह्योके भवति ज्योतिष्मतो ह लोकाञ्जयति य एतमेवं विद्वा ५ श्रतुष्कलं पादं ब्रह्मणो ज्योतिष्मानित्युपास्ते ॥४॥

'I shall declare to you, friend, the foot of Brahman.'
'Tell it to me, Sir.' He said to him: 'Fire is one quarter, the Sun is a quarter, the Moon is a quarter, the lightning is a quarter. This, my friend, is the four-quartered foot of Brahman, named the Effulgent'. (3).

One, who, knowing this, meditates upon the four-quartered foot of Brahman, as the Effulgent, becomes effulgent in this world; and he wins effulgent worlds,—one who knowing this, meditates upon the four-quartered foot of Brahman, as the Effulgent. (4).

Com.—" Agni is one quarter, &c."—is a declaration of the philosophy of lights; and this implies the fact of the Hamsa being the Sun. The result accruing to the knower is this: He becomes bright in this world; and after death, wins the bright effulgent worlds of the Sun and the Moon, &c. The rest as before.

Thus ends the Seventh Khanda of Adhyâya IV.

ADHYA'YA IV.

KHANDA VIII.

महुष्टे पादं वक्तेति स ह श्वोभूते गा अभिप्रस्थापयांचकार ता यत्राभि सायं बभूवृस्तत्राग्निमुपसमाधाय गा उपरुष्य समिधमाधाय पश्चादग्नेः प्राङुपोपविवेश ॥ १॥

'The water-bird will declare to you the (other) foot of Brahman.' On the morrow, he drove the cows homeward; and when they came together towards evening.

he, having lighted the fire, penned the cows, laid the fuel, sat down behind the fire, facing the East. (1)

Com.—Having said "the water-bird will declare to you the other foot" the Hamsa kept quiet. The "water-bird," being intimately related to water, is here meant to signify "Prâna". "On the morrow, &c.", as before.

तं मद्गुरुपनिपत्याभ्युवाद सत्यकाम ३ इति भगव इति ह प्रतिशुश्राव ॥ २ ॥

ब्रह्मणः सोम्य ते पादं ब्रवाणीति ब्रवीतु मे भगवानिति तस्मै होवाच प्राणः कळा चक्षुः कळा श्रोत्रं कळा मनः कळेष वे सो-म्य चतुष्कळः पादो ब्रह्मण आयतनवान्नाम ॥ ३ ॥

Then a water-bird flew to him and said: 'Satyakâma!'. He replied, 'Sir!' (2).

'I will declare to you friend, the foot of Brahman'. He said 'tell it to me, sir'. He said to him 'Prâna is one quarter, the Eye is one quarter, the Ear is one quarter, the Mind is one quarter. This, my friend, is the four-quartered foot of Brahman, named the A'yatanavat.' (3).

Com.—The water-bird, Prâna, explained to him its own philosophy: "The Prâna is one foot, &c., &c." 'A'yatana' means mind, which is the substratum of the experiences of all other organs; and that foot wherein the mind appears, is the one named "A'yatanavat."

स य एतमेवं विद्वा ५ श्चतुष्कलं पादं ब्रह्मण आयतनवानित्यु-पास्त आयतनवानिसमँह्योके भवत्यायतनवतो ह लोकाञ्जयति य एतमेवं विद्वा ५ श्चतुष्कलं पादं ब्रह्मण आयतनवानित्युपास्ते ॥४॥

One who, knowing this, meditates upon the four-quartered foot of Brahman, as A'yutanavat, becomes possessed of a home in this world; and he wins worlds with homes,—one who knowing this meditates upon the four-quartered foot of Brahman, as 'A'yatanavat'. (4).

Com.—One who meditates upon the aforesaid path as such, obtains home—i.e., support—in this world; and on his death, he wins worlds with homes—i.e., with plenty of room. "One who &c.", as before.

Thus ends the Eighth Khanda of Adyaya IV.

ADHYA'YA IV.

KHANDA IX.

--0---

प्राप हाऽऽचार्यकुलं तमाचार्योऽभ्युवाद सत्यकाम ३ इति भ-गव इति ह प्रतिशुश्राव ॥ १॥ He reached the Teacher's house. The Teacher said: 'Satyakâma!' He said: 'yes, Sir!' (1).

Com.—Thus knowing Brahman, he got at the house of his Teacher. The Teacher said to him: 'Satyakâma!' He replied: 'Yes, Sir.'

ब्रह्मविदिव वे सोम्य भासि को नु त्वाऽनुशशासेत्यन्ये मनुष्ये-भ्य इति ह प्रतिज्ञक्षे भगवा ५ स्वेव मे कामे ब्र्यात् ॥ २ ॥

'Friend, thou shinest like one knowing Brahman. Who has taught thee?' He replied: 'People other than men. But, I wish Sir, that you should teach me.' (2).

Com.—"O Friend, thou shinest like one knowing Brahman:"—One who knows Brahman is altogether delighted in his senses, wears a smiling face, is free from all anxiety and happy. Noticing all this, the Teacher says "Thou shinest like the one knowing Brahman;" and questions him as to who taught him (Brahman). And Satyakâma replied: "People other than men";—that is to say, it was some divinity that taught me; the sense being—"who else, wearing a human form, could teach me, who am your disciple?" It is with a view to this that he said "People other than men". "But, I wish"—according to my desire—"Sir, that you should teach me; what of the teachings imparted by others; I do not think much of them".

श्रुत ६ होत्र में भगवदृशेम्य आचार्याद्वेत तिद्या तिदिता सा-धिष्ठं प्रापतीति तस्में हैतदेवोत्राचात्र ह न किंचन वीयायेति वी-यायेति ॥ ३ ॥

For I have heard from persons like you, that it is only such knowledge as is learnt from the Teacher, that is the best. Then he taught him the very same thing, and nothing was left out,—yea nothing was left out.

(3).

Com.—I have heard, in connection with this point, from Rishis like you, that it is only such knowledge as is obtained from one's own Teacher, that is the best of all,—that reaches the highest grade; hence you, sir, should teach me. Being thus addressed, the Teacher taught him the same philosophy that had been explained by the gods; and of the sixteen-quartered philosophy, nothing was left out. The repetition is meant to denote the end of the treatment of the philosophy.

...

Thus ends the Ninth Khanda of Adhyaya IV.

ADHYA'YA IV.

-0---

KHANDA X.

--0--

उपकोसलो ह वै कामलायनः सत्यकामे जाबाले ब्रह्मचर्यमु-वास तस्य ह द्वादशवर्षाण्यक्रीन्परिचचार स ह स्मान्यानन्तेवासि-नः समावर्तय स्तर् ह स्मैव न समावर्तयति ॥ १॥

Upakosala, the son of Kamala, dwelt as a religious student, with Satyakâma Jâhâla. He tended his fires for twelve years. But though the teacher allowed the other pupils to return home after finishing their studies yet he did not allow Upakosala to depart. (1).

Com.—With a view to explain the science of Brahman in another way, the text begins a treatment of the condition of one knowing It, and also that of the science of Fire. And the story is meant, as before, to point out the fact of faith and Penance leading to the accomplishment of the science of Brahman. Upakosalu, by name, the son of Kamala, dwelt as a religious student, with Satyakâma Jâbâla. "Ila"—So it is said. He tended the teacher's fires for twelve years. And yet though the teacher allowed the other pupils to return to their homes, after having taught them the veda, he did not allow Upakosala to return. (1).

तं जायोवाच तप्तो ब्रह्मचारी कुशलमग्नीन्परिचचारीन्मा त्वाऽ-ग्नयः परिप्रवोचन्प्रबृह्मस्मा इति तस्मे हाप्रोच्येव प्रवासांचके ॥२॥

His wife said to him: 'This student has performed his penance, and has tended your fires very well.

Lest the Fires should blame you, teach him,' But he went away, without having taught him. (2).

Com.—The Teacher's wife said to him: 'This student has performed his penances, and has tended your fires very well, in quite a proper manner; and yet you do not allow him to depart—he who is devoted to the fires. Hence the fires may blame you for not allowing one who is devoted to them to return home; so you must explain the science to Upakosala.' But though thus advised by his wife, the Teacher went away on a journey, without having taught him.

स ह व्याधिनाऽनिशतुं दध्ने तमाचार्यजायोवाच ब्रह्मचारिन-शान किं नु नाश्नासीति स होवाच बहव इमेऽस्मिन्पुरुषे कामा नानात्यया व्याधिभिः प्रतिपूर्णोऽस्मि नाशिष्यामीति ॥ ३॥

Through sorrow he resolved not to eat. Then the Teacher's wife said to him: 'student, do eat. Why do you not eat?' He said: 'There are, in this man, many desires, proceeding in various directions. I am full of sorrows, and will not eat.' (3).

Com.—On account of sorrow—, lit., mental sufferings—Upakosala resolved not to eat. And while he was sitting quietly in the sacrificial room, the wife of his teacher said to him: 'O student, do eat. Wherefore do you not eat?' He said: 'In this ordinary man. there are many desires flowing in various directions; that is sorrows with regard to desirable things not obtained. And I am full of such sorrows; hence I will not eat.'

अथ हाग्नयः समूदिरे तप्तो ब्रह्मचारी कुशलं नः पर्यचारीद्ध-न्तास्मे प्रब्रवामेति तस्मे होचुः ॥ ४ ॥

Then the Fires said among themselves: 'This student has performed his penances, and has tended us very well. Well, let us teach him.' And they said to him:

(4).

Com.—The student having resumed his silence, the three fires, finding themselves, untended, and being moved to pity, said among themselves: 'Well, we shall explain the science of Brahman to this student, who is devoted to us, and is in trouble, and who has performed his penances and is permeated with excellent faith.' Having thus determined, they said to him what follows.

प्राणो ब्रह्म कं ब्रह्म खं ब्रह्मित स होवाच विजानाम्यहं यरप्रा-णो ब्रह्म कं च तु खं च न विजानामीति ते होचुर्यद्वाव कं त-देव खं यदेव खं तदेव कमिति प्राणं च हास्मै तदाकाशं चोचुः

11 9 11

'Breath is Brahman; Ka is Brahman; Kha is Brahman.' He said: 'I understand that Breath is Brahman. But I do not understand Ka & Kha.' They said: 'What is Ka is Kha, and what is Kha is Ka.' Then they taught him the Breath and its A'kāsa. (5).

Com.—'Breath is Brahman; Ka is Brahman, Kha is Brahman.' The student said: 'I understand when you say that Breath is Brahman, because the words are known to me; I understand the word "Prâna" as signitiying that particular air, the presence of which renders life possible, which life ceases to exist on its departure. Hence, knowing the meaning of the word 'Prâna,' I understand that 'Prâna' is Brahman. But I do not understand Ka & Kha'. It may be questioned that the words 'Ka' & 'Kha' also are well-known as signifying pleasure and A'kāsa respectively,—and as such, whence the student's ignorance? True; but what the student is at a loss to understand is, how can the character of Brahman be attributed to Pleasure, signified by the word Ka, which is perishable, or to A'kasa, as signified by the word 'Kha,' which is nonintelligent. What the student means is under such circumstances, how am I to rely upon your assertion as authoritative? It is with this view that the student said "I do not understand." When the student had said this, the Fires said to him: 'That which we meant by Ka, is also what is referred to by Kha.' The meaning being that the Ka (Pleasure) as qualified by Kha (A'kâsa) would be free from all taint of such pleasure as is born of the connection of objects with the senseorgans; just as the lotus qualified by blue, becomes precluded from the red &c. And further what we referred to as the Kha, (A'kâsa),—know that to be Ka, (Pleasure):—in this case the Kha qualified by Ka (Pleasure) becomes precluded from the material A'kasa, which is non-intelligent; just like the lotus and the blue. The sense being that what we meant to represent as Brahman was the pleasure (Bliss) as residing in the A'kâsa, and thus transcending all worldly pleasure, and secondly the A'kasa, as the substratum of Bliss, and as such transcending the material A'kasa. "Well, if what is meant is the specification of A'kâsa by pleasure, any one of the two may be the qualifying adjunct, and the order of specification may be reversed—'what is Kha is Ka'." True; but we have already explained that what is meant here is the preclusion of both Pleasure and A'kâsa as here spoken of, from the worldly pleasure and A'kûsu. "We grant all this; but the preclusion of both would naturally follow merely from the specification of A'kâsa by pleasure." True; such would be the case; but in that case what would be meant as the object of meditation, would be the A'kasa alone, as qualified by pleasure, and not the pleasure, as qualifying the A'kâsa; inasmuch as all the purpose of the qualification is spent up in the specification of the object qualified. Consequently Pleasure is also separately mentioned as qualified by A'kasa,—simply with a view to point to the fact of this too being an object of meditation. "But how is this ascertained?" Inasmuch as the word Ka is also related to Brahman. Ka is Brahman. If it were simply meant to point out the fact of A'kasa qualified by Pleasure being the object of meditation,-then, first of all, the Fires would have declared that " Ka-Kha is Bruhman". But as a matter of fact, they did not declare thus: but that "Ka is Brahman: Kha is Brahman." Thus then, with a view to remove the confusion in the mind of the student, it is only proper to declare " what is Ka is Kha &c.,"—meaning thereby that between the words 'Ka' & 'Kha' there is a mutual relation of the qualification and the qualified. And it is this fact as pointed out by the Fires, that the Text makes clear for ourselves in the next sentence: "They taught the student, Breath and its $A'k\hat{a}s\hat{a}$ "—i.e., the $A'k\hat{a}sa$ as the substratum of the Breath, namely, the $A'k\hat{a}sa$ in the heart; and they also taught the $A'k\hat{a}sa$ as qualified by Pleasure, and also the Breath, as located in that $A'k\hat{a}sa$; the Fires taught both of these, as considered together, to be Brahman; inasmuch as both are connected with Brahman.

——o——
Thus ends the Tenth Khanda of Adhyaya IV.

ADHYA'YA IV.

KHANDA XI.

KHANDA XI.

अथ हैनं गार्हपत्योऽनु राशास पृथिन्यग्निरन्नमादित्य इति य एष आदित्ये पुरुषो दश्यते सोऽहमस्मि स एवाहमस्मीति ॥ १ ॥

Then the Gârhapatya Fire taught him 'The Earth, Fire, Food and the Sun. The person that is seen in the Sun, that I am,—that I am, indeed.' (1).

Com.—The Fires together instructed the student in the science of Brahman. "Then"—after the above conversation—each of the Fires began to explain to him his own particular philosophy; and first of all, the "Gârhapatya" Fire taught him. "The Earth, Fire, Food and the Sun"—these are my four bodies (forms). And the person that is seen in the Sun.—that am I, the Gārhapatya Fire,—i.e., it is the Gārhapatya Fire that is seen as the person in the Sun. The same fact is repeated over again: "that I am indeed." The relation of the Gārhapatya with the Sun is not one of being the object of enjoyment, which is the relation subsisting with the Earth and Food. Because the characters of eating, cooking and illuminating are ever unspecified. Consequently, these two—Gārhapatya and the Sun—are absolutely identical; whereas the Earth and Food are related to these as objects enjoyed (eaten).

स य एतमेत्रं विद्वानुपास्तेऽपहते पापऋत्यां छोकी भवति स-र्वमायुरेति ज्योग्जीवति नास्यावरपुरुषाः क्षीयन्त उप वयं तं भु-ज्ञामोऽस्मि ५ श्व छोकेऽमुष्मि ५ श्व य एतमेवं विद्वानुपास्ते ॥ २ ॥

One who, knowing this, meditates upon it, destroys sin, obtains the world, reaches full life, and lives brightly. His line of descendants perishes not, and we protect him in this world, and also in the other,—whosoever knowing this meditates upon it. (2).

Com.—Whoever knowing Gårhapatya Fire as explained above and meditates upon it, as divided fourfold in the character of the Eater of food,—he destroys all sinful actions, obtains the world, lives to his full age; and lives a bright—conspicuous—life, and not as one neglected. and of such a knowing one, the line of descendants does not perish; i.e., it ever continues. And further, we protect him in this world, during life, and also in the other world, after death. Such are the results accruing to one who, knowing this, meditates upon the Fire as explained above.

Thus ends the Eleventh Khunda of Adhyaya IV.

ADHYA'YA IV.

KHANDA XII.

अथ हैनमन्वाह।र्यपचनोऽनुराशासाऽऽपो दिशो नक्षत्राणि चन्द्रमा इति य एष चन्द्रमसि पुरुषो दृश्यते सोऽहमस्मि स एवाह-मस्मीति ॥ १॥

Then the Anichâryapachana taught him: 'Water, the Quarters, the Stars, and the Moon. The person that is seen in the Moon, that I am,—I am that, indeed.'

Com.—Then the "Anvâhâryapachana"—the Southern Fire—taught him: "Water, the Quarters, the Stars and the Moon',—these are my four forms; that is to say, I—Anvâhâryapachana Fire—divide myself into these four forms, and continue to exist as such. And the "person that is seen in the Moon, that am l,-I am indeed."—as before. The identity of the Anvâhâruavachana Fire and the Moon, is based upon the fact of both being related to Food, and being illuminative, and also on the fact of both being related to the Southern quarter. The relation of water and the stars is, as before, based upon the fact of their being objects of food; as it is well-known that the stars are objects enjoyed by the Moon; and water, being the producer of food, is the food of the Southern Fire. just as the Earth is of the Gârhapatya Fire. The rest as before.

स य एतमेवं विद्वानुपास्तेऽपहते पापऋत्यां छोकी भवति स-र्वमायुरेति ज्योग्जीवति नास्यावरपुरुषाः क्षीयन्त उप वयं तं भु-क्षामोऽस्मि ५ श्व छोकेऽमुष्मि ५ श्व य एतमेवं विद्वानुपास्ते ॥ २ ॥

One, who knowing this, meditates upon it, destroys sin, obtains the world, reaches full age, lives brightly. His line of descendants perishes not, and we protect him in this world, and also in the other,—whosoever, knowing this meditates upon it. (2).

Thus ends the Twelfth Khanda of Adhyâya IV.

ADHYA'YA IV.

--0---

KHANDA XIII.

--0---

अथ हैनमाहवनीयोऽनुराशास प्राण आकाशो द्योविद्युदिति य एव विद्युति पुरुषो दृश्यते सोऽहमस्मि स एवाहमस्मीति ॥ १ ॥

स य एतमेवं विद्वानुपास्तेऽपहते पापऋत्यां छोकी भवति स-र्वमायुरेति ज्योग्जीवति नास्यावरपुरुषाः क्षीयन्त उप वयं तं भु-ज्ञामोस्मि५ श्र छोकेऽमुष्मि५ श्र य एतमेवं विद्वानुपास्ते ॥ २ ॥

Then the A'haraniya taught him: Breath. A'hâsa the Heaven and Lightning. The person that is seen in the lightning, that I am,—I am that, indeed.' (1).

One, who knowing this meditates upon it, destroys sin, obtains the world, reaches full age, and lives brightly. His line of descendants perishes not, and we protect him in this world, as also in the other,—whosoever knowing this, meditates upon it. (2).

t'om.—Then the A'havanîya taught him: 'Breath, A'hâsa, the Heaven and Lightning'—these are my four forms. The person that is seen in the lightning, I am that, &c., &c.,—as before. The Heaven and A'hâsa are the receptacles of lightning and the A'havaniya, and as such, are related to these, as objects of their enjoyment. The rest is similar to what has gone before.

Thus ends the Thirteenth Khanda of Adhyaga IV.

ADHYA'YA IV.

KHANDA XIV

KHANDA XIV.

ते होचुरुपकोसछेषा सोम्य तेऽस्मद्विद्याऽऽत्मविद्या चाऽऽचार्य-स्तु ते गतिं वक्तेत्याजगाम हास्याऽऽचार्यस्तमाचार्योऽभ्युवादोपकोस-

छ ३ इति ॥ १ ॥

They said: 'Upakosala, this friend is our science, and the science of the Self; the Teacher will declare to you, the way.' The Teacher came. The teacher said to him: 'Upakosala!'

Com.—The three Fires together said to him: 'Upu-kosala, this, friend, is the science of the Fires and the science of the self,—explained to you; this science being that Breath is Brahman, Ka is Brahman, Kha is Brahman.' Your Teacher will declare to you, the way—to the attainment of the results accruing from such knowledge.' Having said this.

the Fires ceased. In time, the Teacher came, and said to his pupil: 'Well, Upakosala!'

भगव इति ह प्रतिशुश्राव ब्रह्मविद इव सोम्य ते मुखं भाति को नु त्वाऽनुशशासेति को नु माऽनुशिष्याद्भो इतीहापेव निहनुत इमे नूनमीदशा अन्यादशा इतीहाग्रीनम्यूदे किं नु सोम्य किछ तेऽ वोचन्निति ॥ २ ॥

इदिमिति ह प्रतिजञ्जे छोकान्वाव किल सोम्य तेऽवोचन्नहं तु ते तद्वक्ष्यामि यथा पुष्करपलाश आपो न क्षिण्यन्त एवमेवंवि-दि पापं कर्म न क्षिण्यत इति ब्रवीतु मे भगवानिति तस्मै होवाच ॥ ३॥

He answered: 'Sir!'. 'My friend, thy face shines like that of one knowing Brahman; who has taught thee?'. 'Who should teach me sir?' He conceals the fact, as it were; and saying 'these, unlike those' he pointed to the fires. 'What my friend have these told thee?'

He replied: 'This.' 'My friend, they have explained the worlds alone; while I will tell you something; and as water does not cling to the lotus leaf, so no evil clings to one who knows it'. He said. 'Tell it to me, sir.' He explained it to him. (3).

Com.—He replied: 'Yes, sir.' "Your face shines—appears pleasant—as that of one knowing Brahman; who has taught thee?" Being thus asked he replied: "Who should teach me, sir, while you were away?" 'He conceals the fact as it were '-the "iva" (as it were) being taken after 'nihnuta' (conceals). The meaning being that he does not actually conceal the fact, nor does he plainly give out what the fires had told him. "These Fires, being tended by me, explained it to me: and hence, on seeing you, these are quivering as it were, now, though they were quite unlike this, before"with this in view, he pointed to the Fires, hinting, as it were, at what he meant, "What did these Fires tell thee, friend?." He replied "this, did the fires tell me"-giving out certain portions of what they had said, and not telling all that he had been told. Hence, the Teacher said: "My friend, they have only explained the worlds, earth &c. and not the Brahman in Its entirety. I will explain to thee that Brahman which thou wishest to hear of. And listen to the greatness of the knowledge of the Brahman that I am going to explain; just as water does not cling to the lotus leaf, so one who knows the Brahman as I am going to explain. is never affected by evil." The Teacher having said this, Upakosala said. "Tell it to me, sir." Then the Teacher explained It to him.

Thus ends the Fourteenth Khanda of Adhyaya IV.

ADHYA'YA IV.

KHANDA XV.

य एषोऽक्षिणि पुरुषो दश्यत एष आत्मेति होवाचैतदमृतम-भयमेतद्वह्मेति तद्यद्यप्यस्मिन्सिपवीदकं वा सिञ्चति वर्त्मनी एव गच्छति ॥ १ ॥

'The person that is seen in the Eye, that is the Self. This is the Immortal, the Fearless,—this is Brahman. If one drops butter or water into this (Eye), it flows away by the sides.'

Com.—"The person that is seen in the Eye" as the "seer of Sight" by those persons who have set aside their physical vision, are fully equipped with such means as celibacy and the rest, and are calm and discriminating. Says the Sruti—"the Eye of the Eye." Objection: "The assertion of the Fires becomes false; for, they said that the Teacher would 'explain the way' alone; and as such, it follows that the Fires did not know what was going to happen." This does not affect the case; inasmuch as the present passage is only an explanation of the seer—the self described by the Fires, the eye in which the person is said to be seen being, that of the A'kasa endowed with bliss (which has been explained to be Brahman). "That is the self"—of living beings; he explained this self as just the same as that we had explained above. "This is the immortal"—undying, imperishable, and hence "Fearless"; it being only for whom there is a chance of death, that any fear is possible; and hence in the absence of such chance. it is fearless, and hence also "Brahman" the "Great," i.e., the 'Endless.' And the greatness of this Brahmanthe Ocular Person—is such that if in the place of this Person-i.e., in the Eve-either butter or water be dropped, it flows away by the sides, -it falls along the lashes, and does not affect the Eye,-just as the lotus leaf is not affected by water. When such is the greatness of the residence, what would be the inexplicable untaintability of the Person residing therein!!

एत ५ संयद्वाम इत्याचक्षत एत ५ हि सर्वाणि वामान्यभिसंय-न्ति सर्वाण्येनं वामान्यभिसंययन्ति य एवं वेद ॥ २ ॥

This they call 'Samyadvāma,' because all blessings go to him. All blessings go to him, who knows this.(2)

Com.—This—the aforesaid Person—they call 'Samyadvāma'; why? Because all Vāmas—desirable things, blessings—go over to him. So do all blessings go to one who knows this.

एष उ एव वामनीरेष हि सर्वाणि वामानि नयति सर्वाणि वा-मानि नयति य एवं वेद ॥ ३ ॥

He is also $V\hat{a}man\hat{i}$; because he carries all the blessings. One who knows this carries all blessings. (3).

Com.—"He is also Vâmunî;" because he carries—to the living beings—" the blessings", the results of good deeds; such carrying being done through his character of the Self. The result accruing to one who knows this is that he carries all blessings.

एष उ एव भामनीरेष हि सर्वेषु छोकेषु भाति सर्वेषु छोकेषु भाती य एवं वेद ॥ ४ ॥

He is also Bhāmanī; because he shines in all the worlds. One who knows this shines in all the worlds. (4).

Com.—He is also 'Bhûmanî,' because, in all the worlds, he shines in the shape of the Sun, the Moon and Fire. And 'it is by his light that all else shines'—such is the sruti; and as such, carrying the lights, he is called Bhûmanî. One who knows this, he also shines in all the worlds.

अथ यदु चैवास्मिञ्छन्यं कुर्वन्ति यदि च नार्चिषमेवाभिसंभ-वन्त्यचिषोऽहरह आपूर्यमाणपक्षमापूर्यमाणपक्षाद्यान्षडुदङ्किति मा-सा ५ स्तान्मासेम्यः संवत्सर ५ संवत्सरादादित्यमादित्याचन्द्रमसं

चन्द्रमसो विद्युतं तत्पुरुषोऽमानवः स एनान्त्रह्म गमयस्येष देवप-थो ब्रह्मपथ एतेन प्रतिपद्यमाना इमं मानवमावर्ते नाऽऽवर्तन्ते नाऽऽ

वर्तन्ते ॥ ५ ॥

Now, for such a one, whether they perform his obsequies or not, he goes to light, from light to day, from day to the bright half of the month, from the bright half of the month to the six months during which the Sun rises northward, from the months to the year, from the year to the Sun, from the Sun to the Moon, from the Moon to the lightning. There is a person, not human. He carries them to Brahman. This is the divine path, the path to Brahman. Those proceeding by this path do not return to the whirl of humanity.—

Yea, they do not return. (5).

Com.—The way of one knowing Brahman is now explained: when one who knows this is dead, whether the priests properly perform his obsequies or not, in all cases, such a knower, is not precluded, by the unperformed rites, from reaching Brahman; nor do the performed rites in any way help him to any higher regions. As declared elsewhere: "He does not rise by actions, nor does he become lower." This neglect of the obsequies is meant to praise up the Science: and it is not meant that for one knowing this, no obsequies are to be performed. Because, elsewhere it is proved that if the obsequies are not duly performed, there is a certain obstacle in the way of the fruition of his actions. The mention of the performance or non-performance of the obsequies here is simply meant to show that for such a knower, there are no obstacles in the way of his reaching his goal. Those who mediupon the Blissful A'kâsa in the Eve. 'Samyadvâma,' 'Vâmanî' and 'Bhûmanì,' also upon the science of the Fires, together with Prana,—for such persons, there may or may not be other actions; in all cases, they reach the Light,—i.e., the Divinity, presiding over Light. From the Light-Divinity, they go to Day; from day to the bright half of the month,—the Divinity presiding over the bright half; from the bright half of the month to the six months during which the sun rises northward,—i.e., to the Divinity presiding over the northern declension; from these six months to the deity of the year; from the year to the Sun; from the Sun to the Moon; from the Moon to the Lightning. And when they have reached this, a certain Person, not human, comes from the Brahmic region, and carries them over to that Brahman which resides in the regions of Satya; (it is such limited Brahman that is referred to here) because of the mention of the goer, the comer, and that to be reached,- specifications that are impossible with regard to the Brahman of pure Being. For, with regard to the reaching of such Brahman the only allowable mode of describing would be 'being Brahman one reaches Brahman; and it will also be explained, later on, that pure Being is reached only by the removal of all diversity. And no unseen road helps in going, -as says the Sruti: 'He not knowing it enjoys it not.' "This is the divine path"—the path presided over by the Deities of Light &c.—"the path to Brahman"—the path that leads to "Those proceeding by this path do not Brahman. return to the whirl of humanity"-i.e., to that creation of Manu, where there is a continuous whirl of persons in the never-ending Cycle of birth and death, resembling a pulley. The repetition of "they do not return" is meant to point to the close of the treatment of the Science leading to a definite result.

Thus ends the Fifteenth Khanda of Adhyaya IV.

ADHYA'YA IV.

KHANDA XVI.

एष ह वे यज्ञो योऽयं पवत एष ह यिनदि सर्वे पुनातिः यदेष यिनदि सर्वे पुनाति तस्मादेष एव यज्ञस्तस्य मनश्च वाक्च वर्तनी ॥ १॥

Verily that which blows is the sacrifice; for, he, moving along, purifies all things. And because moving along, he purifies all things, he is the Sacrifice. Thereof, Mind and Speech are the ways. (1).

Com.—The present section is begun, (1) on account of its being connected with the chapter of meditation; (2) on account of its falling within the same A'ranyaka, and (3) on account of the fact that when any discrepancy has occurred in a sacrifice, the Vyâhritis are to be used in expiation thereof and for the priest who knows this there is silence. "Verily that &c.," This—the Air—that blows is the sacrifice. "Ha," and "Va" are indeclinables indicating the well-known character of the truth. In the scriptures, the sacrifice is recognised to be presided over by Air: "Srâhâ vâtedhâh," "This—the sacrifice, that which blows," and various other sruti-texts. The Air alone, having the character of motion, is intimately related to actions—as says the sruti: "The Air is the originator of the sacrifice, the Air is its base." He, moving along, purifies all this world; as there is no purification for that which does not move. It is a fact commonly perceived that it is only of one that is moving along, and not of one remaining inert, that deficiencies are removed. And inasmuch as, moving alone, he purifies all this world, he is the sacrifice, that which purifies. And of this sacrifice, "Speech"-as engaged in the pronouncing of mantras-and "Mind"-as engaged in the right perception of objects—are the two "ways,"—i.e., it is by means of these two that the sacrifice is duly performed; as says another text: 'At a sacrifice, the order precedence belongs to the Mind and to Speech, endowed with the motion of Prâna and Apâna." Hence, inasmuch as the sacrifice exists through Speech and Mind. these two are its ways.

तयोरन्यतरां मनसा स५ स्करोति ब्रह्मा वाचा होताऽध्वर्युरुद्गा-ताऽन्यतरा५ स यत्रोपाऋते प्रातरनुवाके पुरा परिधानीयाया ब्रह्मा व्यववदति ॥ २॥

अन्यतरामेव वर्तनी ५ स५ स्करोति हीयते ऽन्यतरा स यथै-

कपाद्वजनस्थो वैकेन चक्रेण वर्तमानो रिष्यत्येवमस्य यज्ञो रि-ष्यति यज्ञ १ रिष्यन्तं यजमानोऽनुरिष्यति स इष्ट्रा पापीयान्भवाति

11 3 11

One of these the Brahmâ purfies by the Mind; by Speech, the Hotâ, the Adhvaryn and the Udyatâ (purify) the other. The Prâtaranwâka having begun, and before the Paridhânîya recitation, the Brahmâ speaks out. (2).

He purifies only one of the two ways; the other is injured. Just as the one-footed man walking, and the one-wheeled cart moving, is injured, so is injured his sacrifice. The sacrifice having fallen off, the sacrifice falls; and having sacrificed, he becomes the worst of sinners.

(3).

Com.—One of these two ways, the Brahmâ purifies by the Mind as endowed with discriminative wisdom; and by the way of Speech do the three other priests—the Holâ &c—purify the other way of Speech. Thus then these two ways of Speech and Mind are to be purified in the sacrifice. Now, when the Prâtaranurâka hymn has commenced, and before the recitation of the Paridhânîya verse,—in the intervening time—the Brahmâ speaks out, renounces the imposed silence, whereby he purifies the way of Speech only; without being purified by Brahmâ the way of Mind is injured, there being many holes in it; and the sacrifice, having only one way of speech, falls off. In what way? Just as a man with one foot walking along, falls down on the road; or just as a cart, moving on one wheel, tumbles down;—so does the sacrifice of the sacrificer fall off, when performed by a bad Brahmâ priest; and the sacrifice having fallen, the sacrificer falls; since the sacrificer has his life in the sacrifice, therefore it is only proper that the destruction of the sacrifice should bring about his destruction. And having performed such a sacrifice, one becomes the worst of sinners.

अथ यत्रोपाकृते प्रातरनुवाके न पुरा परिधानीयाया ब्रह्मा व्यव-बदत्युभे एव वर्तनी स ५ स्कुर्वन्ति न हीयतेऽन्यतरा ॥ ४ ॥

सं यथे।भयपाद्वजन्रथो वे।भाभ्यां चक्राभ्यां वर्तमानः प्रतितिष्ठ-त्येवमस्य यज्ञः प्रतितिष्ठति यज्ञं प्रातितिष्ठन्तं यजमानोऽनुप्रतितिष्ठति स इष्ट्रा श्रेयान्भवति ॥ ९ ॥

But when the Prâtaranuvâka has begun, and not before the Paridhânîya recitation, if the Brahmà speaks out, they purify both the ways; and none is injured. (4).

And just as a two-footed man walking, or a two-wheeled cart moving, gets on, so does the sacrifice get on; and the sacrificing getting on, the sacrificer gets on; and having sacrificed he becomes better. (5).

Com.—On the other hand, when the wise Brahmâ keeps on his silence, and does not speak out, until the Paridhânîya recitation is over, then the other priests purify both the ways; and none of the two is injured. The instances cited are the reverse of those cited before. So does the sacrifice, continuing on its two ways. "gets on "—i.e., continues to exist without any injury to itself. And the sacrifice getting on, the sacrificer gets on. And having performed the sacrifice with a Brahmâ knowing the mysteries of silence the sacrificer becomes better, great.

Thus ends the Sixteenth Khanda of Adhyâya IV.

ADHYA'YA IV.

KHANDA XVII.

-0-

प्रजापितर्लोकानम्यतपत्तेषां तप्यमानाना ५ रसान्प्रावृहदग्नि पृ-थिन्या वायुमन्तरिक्षांदादित्यं दिवः ॥ १ ॥

Prajapati performed a penance (of brooding) over the worlds; and from them, thus brooded over, he squeezed out their essences: Fire from the Earth, Air from the Sky, and Sun from the Heaven. (1). Com.—In the preceding section what is laid down is the silence of the Brahmâ, during the performance of his priestly functions. And in case of the injury to the functions of the other priests, the Vyâhritis are to be used. With this view the Vyâhritis are laid down in the present section. With a view to taking out the essence, of the worlds, Prajâpati performed the penance of brooding over the worlds. From the worlds thus brooded over he squeezed out their essences, these essences being Fire of the Earth, Air of the Sky and the Sun of Heaven.

स एतास्तिस्रो देवता अभ्यतपत्तासां तप्यमानाना ५ रसा-न्प्रावृहदग्नेऋचो वायोर्यज् ५ वि सामान्यादित्यात् ॥ २ ॥

He brooded over these three Deities; and from these Deities thus brooded over, he squeezed out their essences: the Riks from Fire, the Yajus from Air, and the Sāmas from the Sun. (2).

Com.—Then again, he brooded over the three deities Fire and the rest; and as the essence of these, he got the three Vedas.

स एतां त्रयीं विद्यामभ्यतपत्तस्यास्तप्यमानाया रसान्प्रावृहद्भू-रित्यृगभ्यो भूवरिति यजुभ्येः स्वरिति सामभ्यः ॥३ ॥

तदायृक्तो रिष्येङ्कः स्वाहेति गाईपस्ये जुहुयादचामेव तद्रसेनची

वीर्येणची यज्ञस्य विरिष्ट संद्धाति ॥ ४ ॥

He brooded over the three Vedas; and from these, thus brooded over, he squeezed out their essences. Bhûh from the Riks, Bhuvah from the Yajus and Svah from the Sāmas. (3).

If the sacrifice be injured with regard to Rik, one ought to pour a libation into the $G\hat{a}rhapatya$ Fire, saying ' $Bh\hat{a}h$ $Sv\hat{a}h\hat{a}$. By the essence of the Riks, and by the power of the Riks, he makes up the injury to the sacrifice with regard to the Riks. (4).

Com.—Then he brooded over the three Vedas; and from these thus brooded over, he got 'Bhûh' as the essence of the Riks, the second Vyûhriti 'Bhuvah' of the Yajus; and the third Vyûhriti 'Svah' of the Sâmas. Thus are the great Vyûhritis the essence of the worlds, of the gods, and of the Vedas. Hence if there be some injury to the sacrifice, with regard to the Rik, then he should pour a libation into the Gûrhapatya Fire, saying "Bhûh Svâhû." And this would be the proper expiation. How? 'Tad' is an Adverb. By the essence of the Riks, and by the power of the Riks, he heals the injury to the sacrifice, with regard to the Rik.

अथ यदि यजुष्टो रिष्येद्भवः स्वाहेति दक्षिणाग्नी जुहुयाद्यजुषा-मेव तद्रसेन यजषां वीर्येण यजुषां यज्ञस्य विरिष्ट५ संदर्धाति ॥५॥

अथ यदि सामतो रिष्येत्स्वः स्वाहेत्याहवनीये जुहुयात्साम्नामेव तद्रसेन साम्नां वीर्येण साम्नां यज्ञस्य विरिष्टण् संद्धाति ॥ ६ ॥

If there be an injury with regard to the Yajus he should pour an oblation into the Dakshina Fire, saying 'Bhuvah Svâhā.' By the essence of the Yajus and by the power of the Yajus, he makes up the injury to the sacrifice with regard to the Yajus. (5).

If there be an injury with regard to the Sâmas, one should pour a libation into the A'havanîya Fire, saying · Svah Svâha'. By the essence of the Sâmas, and by the power of the Sâmas, he makes up the injury to the sacrifice with regard to the Sâmas. (6).

Com.—If there be an injury with regard to the Yajus, then he should pour a libation into the Dakshina Fire, saying "Bhuvah Svāhā"; and if the injury be with regard to Sāma, he should pour the libation into the A'havaniya Fire, saying "Svah Svāhā." And thereby he heals up the sacrifice, as before. If the injury be with regard to Brahmā, then one should pour libation into all the three Fires, pronouncing all the three Vyāhritis. Because this injury is the injury of the three Vedas. If it be asked whence the character of Brahmā proceeds,—the reply is that 'it is brought about by the three Vedas,' as declared in the Sruti. Or some other rule must be sought after, in order to mend the injury with regard to the Brahmâ.

तद्यथा छवणेन सुवर्ण संदध्यात्सुवर्णेन रजत र रजतेन त्रपु त्रपुणा सीस स्सीसेन छोहं छोहेन दारु दारु चर्मणा ॥ ७॥

Just as one would join together gold by borax, by gold silver, by silver tin, by tin lead, by lead iron, by iron wood, or by leather. (7).

Com.—And just as by means of borax one would soften a hard piece of gold and then join two pieces; and would soften the extremely unchangeable silver, by silver tin, by tin lead, by léad iron, by iron wood, and wood also by means of leather—bandage.

एवमेषां लोकानामासां देवतानामस्यास्त्रय्या विद्याया वीर्येण यज्ञस्य विरिष्ट संद्धाति भेषजकृतो ह वा एष यज्ञे। यत्नैवंविद्वह्मा भवति ॥ ८॥

So does one make up any injury to the sacrifice, by means of the power of these worlds, of these gods, and of the three Vedas. That sacrifice is well healed, where there is a Brahmå knowing this. (8).

Com.—So, by the power of these worlds, of these Deities, and of the three Vedas, one makes up any injuries to the sacrifice. "That sacrifice is well healed,"—like a diseased person cured by a properly qualified doctor—in which there is a Brahmā, knowing the expiations, in the shape of the Vyâhriti-libations, as explained above.

एम ह वा उदक्प्रवणो यज्ञो यत्रैवंविद्वह्हा। भवत्येवंविद्ध् ह वा एमा ब्रह्माणमनुगाथा यतो यत आवर्तते तत्तद्गच्छिति ॥ ९ ॥ मानवो ब्रह्मेवेक ऋत्विक्कुरून श्वाऽभिरक्षत्येवंविद्ध वे ब्रह्मा यज्ञं यजमान ५ सर्वा ५ श्वर्विजोऽभिरक्षिति तस्मादेवंविदमेव ब्रह्माणं कु-वीत नानेवंविदं नानेवंविदम् ॥ १०॥

That sacrifice is sloping to the North, in which there is a Brahmâ knowing this. And with regard to such a knowing Brahmâ, there is this Gâthâ: 'wherever it falls, thither the man goes.'

(9).

'The silent Brahmâ, as a Ritvik priest, like a mare, protects the sacrificers',—i.e., the Brahmâ knowing this protects the sacrifice, the sacrificer, and all the other Ritvik priests. Therefore one should make such a man Brahmâ as knows this, and not one who knows it not,—yea not one who does not know it. (10).

Com.—And further "that sacrifice is sloping towards the North"—rising towards the South or Right; i.e., leading towards the Northern Path—in which there is a Brahmā knowing this. And with reference to such a Brahmā priest, there is this verse, praising the Brahmā: "Wherever it falls"—in whichsoever place the sacrificer becomes deficient,—"thither the man goes"—rightly mending the deficiency. This is the Brahmā—called "Manara." Either because he is silent or because he is thoughtful. And on account of his knowledge it is the Brahmā alone that protects the sacrificers just as the mare protects its riders in battle, so does the Brahmā knowing this protect the sacrifice, the sacrificer, and all the other priests,—removing, as he does, all the deficiencies due to these latter. And since such is the case, one ought to employ as Brahmā only a person who knows this, and never a person who does not know it. The repetition is meant to denote the close of the Adhyāya.

Thus ends the Seventeenth Khanda of Adyâya IV.

Thus ends the Fourth Adhyâya.

PRINTED BY G. A. NATESAN & CO., ESPLANADE, MADRAS.

It has been the solace of my life.

It will be the solace of my death.

SCHOPENHAUR.

THE

UPANISHADS.

THE UPANISHADS.

					₩
With Text in Devanagiri, Sankara's Commentary
	an	d Englis	h Trai	nslatio	n.
Publis	shed by: V	. C. SESH	A CHA	RRI,	B.A.,	B.L.	, м.	R.A.	s.
,	Vol. I	3 'sa.]	ken	a &	(D)	unds	ike	l.
2	ranslated b	y : - Mr. S	S. SITA	ARA M	A SA	STRI,	B	4.
Price		воини)					Rs.	2-0-0.
	PAPER								1-8-0.
Vol. II.—katba & Prasna.
T	ranslated by	:Mr. S	. SITA	RAM.	A SA	STRI,	B.,	4.
n	CLOTH	BOUNI	. .					Rs.	1-8-0.
Price	PAPER								1-0-0.
	Vol. I	11T	e C	bba	'nd	gye	Į.,
	Part 1.	-THE FIR	ST FO	URA	DHY	YAS
Translated by:—PANDIT GANGA' NA'TH JHA' M.A., F.T.S.
Price	CLOTH	BOUNE						Rs.	2 0-0.
	PAPER		••	•••	••	••			1-8-0.
	.—THE F								7
TH	E SECON OHHAN							II E
-	OMMAN.	DOUTA	2,7				" ,.

Apply to:-

G. A. NATESAN & Co.,
Printers, Esplanade, Madras.

THE UPANISHADS.

OPINIONS.

Prof. Max Muller: Faithful translations of the commentaries would be most useful to make the real character both of the Upanishad and of Sankara better known in England.

Swami Ramakrishnananda:-The rendering is as concise as it is literal and a man with a partial knowledge of Sanskrit who wants to go through Sankara's invaluable commentaries will never find a better help than this tiny and well-got up volume.

Sir William Muir: " It is a work so well commented upon. I have read it with interest".

Prof. T. W. Rhys Davids:- "It seems very well done......Any one wanting to understand Sankara's interpretation of the Upanishad will find; the part very useful."

Mr. Bal Gunghadhar Tilak of Poona:--The work appears to be carefully executed and I have no doubt that your books will prove to be of great use to the public, especially the English reading class.

Lt.-Col. A. W. Smart:-I have in parts compared with the original and find it a good and faithful translation.

The Hon. Mr. Justice Subramania lyer:—I have no doubt that this publication will prove extremely useful.

The Theosophical Review, London:—As regards the translation, to say it is readable is high praise for it is not easy to render the Bhashya into readable English. The series will be of service not so much for the translation of the text as for that of the commentary. The get-up of this book is very creditable. Few books are so well turned out in India.

The Madras Mail: Sankara's commentaries on these Upanishads are translated in this book in an accurate and clear style, while the renderings are as literal as possible. Messrs. G. A. Natesan and Co., deserve a word of praise for the excellent style of the printing.

The Theosophist, Madras: The eminent scholarship of the translator is a sufficient guarantee for the correct rendering of the Sanskrit Devanagari text which in all cases precedes the English version; and English knowing readers may properly consider themselves under obligations to the worthy publisher for undertaking such a commendable work in response to the growing demand among cultured people in all lands, for a better knowledge of Eastern religious Philosophy.

The Madras Times:—For ourselves we welcome the publication both as an excellent sign of a revival of religion in days when atheism is sharpening its claws, and also as an excellent sign of a living study of the classical language of the land. A word must be said as to the get-up of the volume, which has been turned out from the rising press of Messrs. Natesan & Co., on the Esplanade. The get-up is really excellent; the printing is plain and clear and the cloth binding is in its neat lines positively as good as any binding that we have ever seen turned out in India.

The Hindu, Madras: —The translation has been very carefully made and it reflects no small credit upon the translator that while endeavouring that this text should be as literal as possible, the simple and easy style adopted by him renders it easy even for the uninitiated to follow, without effort, the spirit of the dissertation. Messrs. G. A. Natesan & Co., deserve to be congratulated upon the very neat get-up of the booklet and upon the excellence of their printing.

The Madras Standard:—The rendering which is as near as possible to the original will be found of great help to those interested in the subject. The yet-up of this little book is good and does credit to the printers.

The Arya Bala Bodhini, Madras: -The translation has been excellently rendered & the spirit of the original strictly preserved in translation.

Pandit Manilal Dividivi of Benares:—I have looked into your work here and there and find it good.

The Madras Times: -We note with satisfaction that this series has received encouragement at the hands of the public, and that Mr. Seshacharriar has arranged for the translation of the Chha'ndogya and Brihadaranyaka Upanishads also by Pandit Gangà Natha'Jha', M.A., F.T.S., of Darbhanga.

+ INDIAN POLITICS +

WITH AN INTRODUCTION BY

W. C. BONNERJEE, Esq. Bar-at-law

PART 1: -ORIGINAL ARTICLES

THE INDIAN NATIONAL CONGRESS.

Eardley Norton, Esq. Bar-at-law.

ECONOMIC CONDITION OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA.

Run Bahadur R. N. Mudholkar, B.A., L.L. B.

INDIAN ASPIRATIONS UNDER BRITISH RULE.

Romesh Chunder Dutt. Esq., C. I. E.

INDIA AND THE CURRENCY QUESTION

Dadabhai Naoroii, Esq.

THE PERMANENT SETTLEMENT QUESTION.

John Adam, Esq., M.A., Bar-at-Law.

THE POVERTY OF INDIA.

Alfred Nundy, Esq., Bar-at-Law.

LINES OF LEGISLATION IN INDIA

P. S. Sivaswamy Aiyar, Esq., B.A., B.L.

THE JURY SYSTEM IN INDIA

Sorab Pestonii, N. Wadia, Esq.

THE ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE IN INDIA.

V. Krishnaswami Aivar, Esq., B.A., B.L.

THE STATES OF INDIANS ABROAD

G. Parameswaran Pillai, Esq., B.A.

RAILWAYS IN INDIA.

G. Subramania Alvar, Esq., B.A.

PART II -All the past 13 Congress Presidential Addresses.

PART III All the past Congress Resolutions.

PRICE :--- Rs. TWO.

APPLY TO-

G. A. NATESAN & Co., Esplanade, Madras,

G. A. NATESAN & Co.,

Printers, & Publishers,

Book=sellers. Stationers & Binders, +10, ESPLANADE ROW, MADRAS +

UNDERTAKE

BOOK AND JOB WORK

of every description in ≥ English # Tamil # Telugu ←

+ Sanskrit-Devanagiri +

NEATLY AND PROMPTLY EXECUTED

TRIAL SOLICITED

Estimates on application

Terms - Moderate.